The magazine also asserted that the injury which sidelined McLain during the final weeks of the 1967 pennant race was incurred when a Cosa Nostra enforcer involved in collecting a $46,000 gambling debt incurred by the bookmaking operation, stomped on McLain's foot.

The pitcher's explanation was that he had hurt himself in a mishap at home.

CAHA to Meet Brundage

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is making another try at getting the International Olympic Committee to clear up the confused world hockey situation.

Three top officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association arrived here Tuesday for meetings with Hockey Canada preparatory to flying to Switzerland Thursday for a meeting Sunday with Olympic president Avery Brundage and his executive board.

President Earl Dawson of the CAHA, from Rivers, Man., past-president Fred Page from Vancouver, and Gordon Juckes, executive-director from Winnipeg, will leave for Lausanne Thursday.

"We want to get a written answer from the IOC on the matter of contamination of amateurs," Dawson said.

It was on this point that Canada withdrew from international competition and gave up the host role in the 1970 world tournament, moved to Stockholm from Winnipeg and Montreal, the original sites.

The annual International Ice Hockey Federation championship was to have allowed Canada nine professionals on its team—an IIHF concession hammered out in Switzerland last July.

The other five countries with Canada in the A pool of the tournament—Russia, Czechoslovákia, Sweden, Finland and East Germany—backed out, however, when Brundage gave an opinion that to play with or against Canada's pros would endanger the amateur status of all the players and could make them ineligible for the Olympics.

OTTAWA (CP) — General Manager Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders said Tuesday that second-string quarterback John Eckman of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats is not considered to be the answer to his quarterback problems. He said Hamilton had offered Eckman in exchange for Rough Rider tight end Jay Roberts. Both are American players. Clair said Roberts still figures in coach Jack Gotta's plans for the coming season, but the search is still on for a successor to Russ Jackson, retired Ottawa quarterback.

Clay To Meet Frazier?

NEW YORK (CP) — A spokesman for Cassius Clay, deposed heavyweight boxing champion, said Tuesday an attempt will be made to get permission for Clay to fight new champion Joe Frazier in Toronto.

"We're going to make a motion in federal court in Houston that he (Clay) be permitted for 24 hours to leave the country (United States) so he can fight Frazier in Toronto in May," said Robert Arum, one of Clay's lawyers.

Clay was stripped of the crown for refusing induction into the U.S. armed forces. Frazier won the undisputed title Monday night by defeating Jimmy Ellis by a fifth-round knockout at Madison Square Garden.

While he is appealing a conviction for refusing the draft, Clay is not allowed to leave the United States.

Maki Waits Verdict

OTTAWA (CP) — With an eye on a hockey schedule and another on his court calendar, Judge Edward Carter Tuesday decided to render judgment March 5 on an assault charge against Wayne Maki of St. Louis Blues.

In the same manner he set March 9 for the trial opening on a similar charge against defenceman Ted Green of Boston Bruins.

Both National Hockey League players were charged after their stick duel in an exhibition game here Sept. 21.

Judge Carter, known as an avid sports fan, carefully selected dates so as not to clash with the Blues' playing schedule.

As the Maki trial ended Tuesday, Crown Attorney John Cassells said he feared the NHL was adopting the morality of ancient Rome.

Don't Water Down Our Football: Schrieder

By ERIC EMERSON

Staff Sportswriter

"Canadian pro football rookies are behind their American counterparts in football knowledge and in coping with the pressures of professional football," says Belleville's only native son to perform in the CFL, Gary Schrieder.

Born in Belleville in 1934 and educated at St. Michael's, Schrieder was in the city Tuesday to address a meeting of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

He broke into the CFL in 1956 with the Ottawa Roughriders and played there until 1962, when he was traded to the B.C. Lions. After seven games with the Lions he was dealt to Hamilton in order to enroll in the bar admission course in Toronto. A cartilage injury ended his football career in 1964, when he was again performing with Ottawa.

Besides reminiscing about his days in Belleville, the former Ottawa defensive back and corner linebacker touched on such subjects as the Players' Association, NFL invasion of Canadian territory and retired Ottawa quarterback, Russ Jackson.

Despite the handicap faced by Canadians competing against players from the United States, the Belleville native believes, "There are a lot of Canadians with enough ability to play football on either side of the border."

He feels definitely that retired Ottawa pivot, Russ Jackson, would star in American football. "Russ wouldn't have made it when he came up in '57, but I feel there's no question that he could compete in the American pro leagues right now," says Schrieder. "His only drawback is that his long throwing action gives him a slow release and it has taken him a few years to overcome it."

Asked to compare Jackson to Joe Kapp of the Minnesota Vikings, he noted: "I think Russ throws long better and is a tougher runner. On the other hand Kapp is a better spot passer and a little better field leader."

Apropos, of the Vikings, the Queen's graduate feels that the sporting public have been victims of a great selling job by NFL announcers. "I don't think the NFL is a bit better than the American Football League, and I definitely think that the Kansas City Chiefs are better than any of the top NFL clubs."

Schrieder also thinks that efforts to bring the Canadian game closer to that played south of the border should be curtailed. "The Canadian game has unique style now, with less sustained drives and the ball turning over more rapidly," he says. "If you try to change the rules to be more like the American ones you simply wind up with a watered - down version of their game."

As the first president of the Players Association Gary has helped achieve larger playoff shares and a standardized injury clause for the players.

"Our pension plan is a great selling point when recruiting in the States", he claims. "The CFL needs top-flight Americans as well as Canadian players to give the fans a first rate show. People like Russ Jackson and Ron Stewart allow supporters outside the league cities to identify with the game, while at the same time exciting stars like Vic Washington add tremendously to the fan appeal."

Schrieder named Hal Patterson and Paul Dekker as the toughest ends to cover during his playing days. "They were both so big that they made it rough on a defensive back. I think Pat Abruzzi of the Montreal Alouettes was the toughest runner I had to face."

The biggest change in the game since his retirement has been an increased emphasis on the passing game. "I think it's great for the fans. It opens up the game more."

Gary is currently an advisor to the Players' Association and is working out details for the CFL All-Star game.

Lacrosse Meeting Thursday

The Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association will hold a meeting Thursday night at 9 p.m. at the Recreation Centre to plan summer participation in Canada's national sport.

The meeting will serve the two-fold purpose of organizing different sections of the leagues and allowing interested persons to get in contact with the various officials.

One of the main items on the agenda will be a discussion of the prospects of joining the Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association. President Roy Payne states, "Our problem is to get enough people interested in sponsorship and organization. We certainly have enough interested players."

Sponsorship of the various teams is one of the association's main concerns and it is hoped that interested parties will offer assistance.

"We are well acquainted with local people that take an interest in the league organization," says Payne, "but we hope to encourage residents who may have recently moved into the area, and are interested in minor lacrosse."

The association, which had nine teams last year, hopes to expand to 16 this season with four teams in the combined Novice-Tyke and Midget-Juvenile sections, as well as the Peewees and Bantams.

First game of the Wellington - Picton battle will be played at Wellington Friday night at 8.30, with the second slated for Picton at 8 p.m. Sunday night. A third game if necessary will be decided by the flip of a coin.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Assault charges against Toronto Marlboro defenceman Steve Durbano, his coach Gus Bodnar and a St. Catharines police constable were withdrawn through personal agreement when the parties appeared in provincial court Tuesday. The charges arose out of an incident at an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game here Nov. 11. Durbano, after being assessed a game misconduct penalty, was involved in a scuffle in which Constable Bill Smith allegedly suffered a head cut. Durbano was charged with assault causing bodily harm. Bodnar was charged with common assault charges against Constable Smith. Durbano publicly apologized to the police officer in court Tuesday and said he realized that Constable Smith was only doing his duty and protecting the players and spectators.

Firemen's Benefit Best Hockey Buy

The Belleville Firefighters' Association likes to look on tickets to Friday's annual "charity" game with the city's police department as the best hockey buy in town.

For 50 cents, the purchaser will get to see the usual keenly - played red-blue rivalry, replete with some unexpected antics from both benches.

Spectators at Friday's 8:30 game will also get the opportunity to meet National Hockey League veteran goaltender Lorne "Gump" Worsley, who will referee the mayhem.

In addition, the four-bit tickets, which can be purchased in advance at McKnight's Variety Store or O'Neill's Front St. Barbershop, entitle the bearers to chances at a couple of dozen attractive door prizes.

The 50 cents can also be regarded as a Christmas present with game proceeds going into the Firemen's underprivileged children's fund to help their 1970 Christmas drive.

Picton Srs. Win First

Rude Jolt for BCI Bantams

BCI's league-leading bantam basketball squad, who were dusting themselves off after being upset by Centennial last week, got an even ruder jolt Tuesday when Quinte Saints pulled off a narrow 52-49 upset. In the other contests, the powerful senior Collegians and Quinte juniors maintained their unbeaten records with easy wins.

At Picton, the Moira Trojans took two out of three games with the Prince Edward teams, with the widest margin of victory being four points.

The Quinte bantams used a tough zone press to good effect to pull off their upset victory, as they led 42-34 at the end of three quarters, and held on to win their sixth game of the season. Bruce Nickle sank 19 points for the winners, with Ian Hayman and Terry Collins picking up a dozen apiece. Peter LeBaron (12) and Keith Watson (11) were the top BCI scorers.

In the junior contest Quinte started slowly and were tied 13-13 at the end of the first quarter, but threw in 46 points in the second half as they dominated play, to win 79-40. Centre Barry Culkin played an outstanding game and led the scoring with 26 points. Rick Meagher and Kim Hunter followed with 16 points each to help the Saints record their 11th straight win. Dave Simmonds was tops for the Collegians with 14 points and Bob Woodley contributed 11.

Good outside shooting and a strong rebounding effort by centre Jim Wright carried the BCI senior to the 12th straight victory.

The winners piled up a 40-20 lead at half-time and widened the margin to 75-44 in the last two quarters. Dave Wright continued to be the class of the senior loop scorers as he hooped 20 points for BCI. Jim Wright followed with 17 and Brent Gallupe had a 12-point night. Peter Middleton (12), Leo Baker (8) and Steve Ogden (8) were best for Quinte.

At Picton, the Moira bantam Trojans came from behind to win a close 56-54 game after trailing by 12 points with five minutes remaining in the game. Dave Dent scored 20 points and John Perry 11 for Moira, while Rick Dance of Picton was the game's high scorer with 22 points.

The junior Trojans used a foul shot advantage to take a 59-55 victory for their ninth win of the year. Dave Pulver and Bill Henry each hooped 14 points for Moira, while Phil Kirby added 11 in addition to playing a strong game defensively. Lanky centre Bill Barrett came through with a 20 point effort for Picton, followed by Doug Dersnah (16) and John Samuels (13).

The Prince Edward seniors chalked up their first win of the year, stopping Moira 56-54. Bond scored 16 points in the victory and P. Burleigh added 13 more. Dave Thompson (18) and Al Bender (12) led the Trojan scorers.

But they're used to being alone.

As they open their second-round series against Whitby at 8 o'clock in the Memorial Arena tonight, the Kinsmen are chasing their third consecutive OMHA Bantam AA championship.

Diefenbaker Accuses Chretien Of Callousness in Parks Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The rights of Parliament and people were invoked in the Commons Tuesday in opposition attacks on a government bill to set administration of national parks under a Crown corporation.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker accused the government of contempt of Parliament in a "transparent subterfuge to substitute a soulless corporation for those human elements that are necessary in connection with these parks."

Mr. Diefenbaker renewed the charge that Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien has callously disregarded the rights of leaseholders in national parks in Alberta.

He compared the situation with what he called a denial of constitutional rights of Canadian Indians and Eskimos. Quoting a letter from a Jasper national park resident, he told the House that lease-lot rentals, $10 a year from 1914 to 1950 and $15 a year since then, are now about to rise by as much as 4,000 per cent.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he was particularly incensed because Mr. Chretien was not in the House to hear the charges being made against him. Responsibility for piloting the bill through the Commons had been given to his parliamentary secretary, Russell Honey (L—Northumberland-Durham).

The Alberta park residents took their case to the Exchequer Court of Canada and won. The federal government is appealing the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Ron Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) was also concerned that the bill would derogate from the rights of Parliament. And he feared the corporation might be tempted to extensive commercialization of the parks in order to cover operating expenses.

Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) claimed that the full 14,000 square miles of Wood Buffalo national park in northern Alberta was preposterously set aside for the preservation of 50 whooping cranes. A few square miles would do, he said.

Bud Orange, parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister J. J. Greene and MP for the Northwest Territories replied later that such statements were utter distortion. The park had originally been set aside for the protection of the last North American bison which now number 15,000.

Still, he went on, the park should be "freed up" to permit development of certain mineral resources.

Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer) said all of Wood Buffalo park was not needed as a haven for the bison and mining should be permitted in selected sectors of such parks. He also said the Crown corporation will subject park residents to a faceless bureaucracy.

John Skoberg (NDP—Moose Jaw) said he hopes the parks would not soon blossom with billboards and signs in the manner of federal airports.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) put forward a motion to have park residents vote on the government's proposal before it received second reading but the amendment was ruled out of order.

Grant Deachman (L—Vancouver Quadra) said the bill should be reviewed by the northern affairs committee to ensure it will permit development of an underwater park in the Georgia Strait, as proposed by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis in a speech last week.

The idea was supported by Rod Thomson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) who said the government should be offered every encouragement to carry out the idea.

During Tuesday's question period, Otto Lang, minister without portfolio in charge of the Canadian wheat board, was bombarded by opposition members over statements made the day before.

The main thrust of the questioning was whether the government is prepared to provide compensation to farmers who followed Mr. Lang's advice and withdrew acreage from wheat production this year.

Mr. Lang said the government will make a statement on its policy as soon as some decision is made.

Thatcher: Defeat White Paper

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, in a CBC radio show broadcast today, said that as a Liberal he must do all he can to defeat the federal Liberal government's white paper on tax changes.

"As a Liberal," he said, "I want to say that I think the most damnable piece of legislation I have ever seen introduced since I was a Liberal is this white paper - - -

"I believe as a Liberal that I must do everything I can in the interests of Saskatchewan to defeat that white paper - - -

"I believe for the good of the Liberal party, I believe for the good of the West, we can never agree to this. And I as the leader in Saskatchewan will never agree to this - - - If that white paper goes through, I'm going to have to do some soul searching."

The premier has been hammering at the tax change proposals since they were released last November, saying they would drive away investment capital and protesting that they would tax assets.

Mr. Thatcher brought up the subject again Monday night, after the first day of the federal-provincial conference, with Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Edgar Benson. Later, he taped the CBC radio appearance in which he said:

"I believe this very strongly, that if Canada adopts the white paper as Mr. Benson is suggesting we're just like England; incentives, initiative will be discouraged and I think it would be a terrible country - - -

"And I can tell you we had a Liberal convention in Saskatoon last November and this white paper came up and we defeated the white paper 627 to four. That's the way Liberals think in Saskatchewan."

Family Attacked at Army Base, Mother and Two Children Are Slain

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — An army doctor told police a hippie-type band of three men and blonde girl stabbed him and killed his wife and two small children in their apartment Tuesday.

The girl, wearing a wide-brimmed, sloppy hat and muddy boots, carried a candle and mumbled, "Acid is groovy; kill the pigs; hit 'em again," said the doctor Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald, 26.

On the headboard of the Macdonalds' bed, scrawled in blood, was the word "pig."

Military policemen found MacDonald unconscious on the floor of his bedroom next to the body of his slain wife, Colette, 26. The police went to the apartment after MacDonald telephoned for helh around 4 a.m.

Lying in their beds in separate bedrooms of the six-room apartment were the bodies of the MacDonald children, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen Jean, 2.

Police said MacDonald had been stabbed in the stomach, chest and upper arm and that the others had been stabbed and bludgeoned. The police declined to reveal details of the wounds.

A paring knife with a four-inch blade, an ice pick and an 18-inch piece of wood which police believe were used in the attack were found outside.

Col. Robert J. Kriwanek, post provost marshal, said MacDonald told investigators he had gone to sleep on the couch in the living room while reading and was awakened by a sound about 3:30 a.m.

"Capt. MacDonald immediately came under attack, and quickly lost consciousness," the colonel added.

Kriwanek said MacDonald later reached a telephone and gasped to the operator: "I need the military police and an ambulance. I've been stabbed."

Kirwanek said entry to the apartment was made through a back door, apparently not locked.

He said the living room and the master bedroom were in disarray as if a struggle had occurred, but that the children's bedrooms were in order.

"Whoever committed this crime was quite knowledgeable about the layout of these quarters," Kriwanek said. He said the attack apparently lasted only a few minutes.

The children apparently were asleep at the time they were attacked, Kriwanek said. Neighbors told investigators they heard no unusual sounds.

Tough New Law Seen Creating Calvary for Corporations

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyer Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said Tuesday tough investigation clauses in the federal government's proposed amendments to corporations law will create a "Calvary for corporate enterprises."

Mr. Lambert said at a Commons finance committee hearing that the clauses, which would give the government greater powers to inquire into company affairs, might cause unnecessary and harmful investigations.

They could put companies at the mercy of one shareholder. Such a shareholder might make a "frivolous" complaint to the minister of corporate affairs alleging fraudulent, unfair or unlawful activity on the part of a company.

"Then the minister, without having any way of knowing whether the allegations were true, could start the investigative machinery.

"How long do they (the government) think it would take for the word to get out if a company was under investigation by a minister?

"Who is going to retrieve the company's reputation if the investigation proved groundless?"

The situation would create, Mr. Lambert said, "an open hunting season for one competitor to ruin another."

Another lawyer, Liberal MP Robert Kaplan (Toronto Don Valley), said he also is bothered by the powers proposed under the investigation amendments. He wondered whether individual shareholders or groups of shareholders might not create needless "witchhunts" against companies.

Mr. Kaplan said he is "not able to accept" the argument that $3,000,000 is the appropriate annual income level at which to require private companies to disclose annual financial statements.

The amendments to the act would require all federally-incorporated companies, including private firms with assets or annual income exceeding $3,000,000, to disclose their financial situation in annual reports which would be made public.

Lasers May Be Used in Sawmills

MONTREAL (CP) — The laser beam may be introduced some day into the lumber industry to eliminate sawdust, the Canadian Lumbermen's Association was told Tuesday.

The possible use of the laser beam in place of saws in sawmill operation was raised at the association's 62nd annual meeting during a study of the trends in sawmill undertakings in the 1970s.

Replying to a question from the floor as to whether steps are being taken toward the possible use of water jets and laser beams in sawmills to overcome the waste through sawdust, Maurice Brisson of Forano Liee replied:

"Research in the use of the laser beam in sawmill operations is being carried out but it is still a long way from being practical or economically feasible."

Mr. Brisson, said mills would require special and costly equipment and high electric power sources to harness the laser beam.

The laser beam is practical in highly sophisticated industry, and the sawmill industry could hardly fall into this category, he said. However, the day will come eventually when some sawmill operations will use the laser beam.

White Students 'Cop-outs'

MONTREAL (CP) — White students at Sir George Williams University were called racists and "cop-outs" by Negroes before being asked to support a growing protest against the administration, it was revealed Tuesday.

The evidence came in the form of a video-tape introduced by the Crown which closed its case in the conspiracy trial of 10 West Indians.

They are the first of 87 adults to face trial in the Feb. 11, 1969, computer-wrecking incident at the university.

The trial, in its fifth week, was adjourned until Thursday, when the three defence lawyers are to call their first witnesses.

Central figure in the video-tape shown to the court was Kelvin Robinson, one of the 10 accused and a native of Trinidad. The tape was taken at a Feb. 4 student meeting on closed-circuit television.

Robinson, 30, criticized the university's handling of an alleged racism incident before saying:

"You are copping out by saying 'I want proof' and 'We want facts' instead of doing your duty by attacking the administration.

"You are no better than anybody from the South."

The dispute started over a charge of racism levelled at Prof. Perry Anderson by six West Indian students. The professor subsequently was cleared by a university hearing board.

U. S. Asked to Pay Seaway Debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Walter F. Mondale (Dem. Minn.) said Tuesday the St. Lawrence Seaway has been of benefit to the entire United States and should be paid for on that basis.

He testified before a Senate commerce subcommitte in favor of a bill by Great Lakes senators that would have the U.S. government take over the debt of the U.S. portion of the U.S.-Canadian seaway from the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp.

Tolls on the seaway would be used to pay for the operating and maintenance costs.

Mondale said that unless the seaway is relieved of the crushing burden of debt, toll increases of 25 to 50 per cent would have to be considered.

"This would clearly be disastrous to the growth of Minnesota and the upper Midwest," Mondale said.

David W. Oberlin, administrator of the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp., which operates the U.S. portion of the seaway, said the debt has grown to $155,900,000 in 1969 from $123,800,000 in 1959.

The law requires that the debt be paid off by the year 2009, but present revenues, after operating costs, are not sufficient even to pay all of the interest, he said.

Mail Contract Could Be Cancelled

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield sought an emergency Commons debate Tuesday on disrupted postal services in Montreal.

Communications Minister Eric Kierans said he met a delegation from the Confederation of National Trade Unions and gave it a letter describing in detail the government's position.

He made public a copy of the letter.

Mr. Kierans said in his letter to the CNTU that the government decided in September to implement fully the policy of inviting tenders for all mail transportation contracts exceeding $1,000 annually.

In Montreal, temporary [illegible] had been renewed each year since 1954, causing "dreadful insecurity" among contractors and employees. Montreal had the worst postal service in Canada.

Mr. Kierans said the new five-year contracts provide mail truck drivers with greater job security.

Unless mail service returned to normal immediately, the post office would have to revoke the present contract with G. Lapalme Inc., which was finding it could not provide adequate service because of violence and sabotage.

Mr. Kierans said that if the Lapalme contract has to be cancelled, the post office will request from Canada Manpower the names of 350 drivers needed to deliver the mails until March 31.

Dairy Support Recommended At Same Level

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agriculture committee recommended Tuesday that the government maintain dairy support programs at their present level of $125,000,000 for another year.

In a report tabled in the Commons, the committee also called for a more equitable distribution of the costs of export assistance among dairy producers.

The committee was empowered last December to study means of using dairy support funds to bring production and consumption into better balance, thus decreasing dairy surpluses.

Other recommendations listed in the report:

—Active support should be given to developing an "aggressive selling program at home and abroad."

—Farmers should be encouraged to find on-farm use for a larger proportion of milk produced above their quotas.

—Government should eliminate minimum butterfat levels required for federal subsidies.

—The government should utilize any surplus skim milk powder for further development of the veal-calf trade within Canada.

—Every effort should be made to find additional uses for milk in Canada and a means of supplying subsidized milk products to low-income families should be developed.

—The government ought to consider a system of income maintenance for dairy farmers to meet the rising costs of production.

Lang Is Belabored Over Wheat Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties directed a blistering Commons attack Tuesday against Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, over the problems of Prairie grain farmers.

Mr. Lang was bombarded with angry questions about a suggestion he made in a weekly letter to the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix that Prairie farmers with enough wheat on hand to meet their 1970-71 deliveries should leave their wheat acreage idle this year.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked what measures the government would implement to assist farmers who followed Mr. Lang's advice.

The minister replied that since many Prairie farmers could already meet their quotas this year and next they would not suffer unduly from leaving some of their land idle.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Here are a few things to remember for snowmobilers:

1. If you wouldn't drive across somebody else's front yard, or their farm in a car, don't do it in a snowmobile.

2. If you would object to your neighbor running his power mower at 2 a.m., think of how he'll feel about your snowmobile roaring around the neighborhood at all hours of the night and early morning.

3. If you see hikers out on a trail, stay away from them. They are out there to get away from machines and noise.

QUESTION: Please give me some information on ski areas and accommodations in New Hampshire and Vermont. I would like to spend a week there on different slopes.

ANSWER: New Hampshire has many excellent ski areas. There are 100 ski lifts and over 100 rope tows. Its ski lodges are small but modern. Moderately priced ones charge $5 a person per day plus meals and more posh accommodations, $15 a day plus meals. There are weekend ski packages and Sunday-to-Friday packages which range from $50 to $100 a person.

In some areas where there is more than one developed ski slope, such as Mount Washington Valley, you can buy a weekly ticket good on all slopes for about $30. In Vermont, the main action is at Stowe where Mount Mansfield, 4,393 feet, is the highest peak. The Stowe area has many accommodations, none large, but some among most luxurious in New England. This is one of the most popular of skiing areas in the Eastern United States, it has ski schools and a variety of lifts. Ski packages usually include unlimited use of all lifts and lessons from the ski schools.

South of Stowe, there is good skiing in Sugarbush Valley near Warren and on Killington Peak near Rutland where the highest chairlift in the east will take you well up the 4,241 foot peak. Other favorites are the Mount Snow area near Wilmington in the southern part of the state and Bolton near Burlington. Close to the Quebec border is Jay Park ski area which has 21 miles of developed ski trails, reached by an aerial tramway which can take 60 skiers at a time to 4,000 foot level. The tramway charge is $2.50 round trip. Located in a state park, this ski area has T-bar and chairlifts as well. If you want a change from skiing, both states go in for dog-sledding and ice-boating on lakes amid the mountains. Tobogganing, snowmobiling, snow-shoeing, skating and sleigh rides are also popular.

After-ski entertainment is mostly provided by the skiers themselves — sing-songs in front of big open fireplaces, dances and cozy restaurants and bars.

If you are a member of the Ontario Motor League, we have ski books at our office, 123 Front Street, free for members, describing different ski areas in the northern United States.

Locomotive Engineers Ignore Ottawa's Pay Demand Ceiling

OTTAWA (CP) — The 5,000 Canadian members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are courting the displeasure of the federal government with demands for a one-year contract to bring them a 20-per-cent wage increase and a reduced work week.

The demand was presented first to CP Rail Jan. 16, two months before expiry of the current three-year contract. Similar demands will be filed early in March with the Canadian National Railway and a number of short lines whose contracts with the union expire April 30.

CP Rail, which employs close to 1,800 engineers, maintains that if union demands are met they would add $12,000,000 to the line's labor costs. A spokesman for the company said Tuesday in Montreal that the increase would be 67 per cent more than the annual cost of the current contracts with the engineers.

W. J. Wright, vice-president in charge of negotiations for the Brotherhood, said in an interview here he expects to meet resistance from the federal government as well as from the companies.

"Our people are very demanding," he said.

Mr. Wright agreed the union is seeking a major increase but, he went on, "we're playing a catch-up game."

He said the last three-year contract left union members at the mercy of inflation.

The union is seeking a 20-per-cent increase across the board on rates and special allowances for passenger and freight train engineers and a 39-per-cent increase on rates for yard engineers. At the same time, additional vacation leave and three more statutory holidays are sought.

Mr. Wright estimated that, depending on seniority, engineers now earn between $7,000 and $11,000 a year.

Doctors Urged to Wait Before Increasing Fees

HAMILTON (CP) — Medical associations should withhold any fee-schedule changes until they have had time to study the full effect of medical care insurance on their incomes, Health Minister John Munro said Tuesday.

Addressing the Hamilton Academy of Medicine, Mr. Munro said existing medical fees were set on the basis that some services would be rendered for which no payment would be received.

"This is one of the reasons why the profession has usually accepted less than 100 per cent of the appropriate fee schedule where payment is assured and bad debts have been virtually eliminated."

Commenting on reports that OHSIP, Ontario's agent for the medical care scheme, is six months behind in its payments, he said:

"I'm confident that this will be speeded up in the very near future; at least before the next provincial election."

Aspirin Is Termed Medical Pollutant

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Aspirin, the most widely used drug in the world, is a "medicinal pollutant" and may be causing permanent damage to millions of users, a prominent physician said Tuesday.

"Aspirin has the proven capacity to be Trojan horse," Dr. Richard S. Farr told members of the American Academy of Allergy.

"It is not unreasonable to look at the indiscriminate use of aspirin as a medicinal pollutant—a medicinal pollutant that has become a medically unsupervised, 13,000,000-pound-a-year way of life for an uninformed population that doesn't know that aspirin can be dangerous," he said.

Dr. Farr, chief of allergy and clinical immunology at Jewish Hospital and Research Centre at Denver, Colo., is the outgoing president of the academy.

Dr. Maurice L. Tainter, scientific consultant to Sterling Drug Inc., replied to Dr. Farr's remarks in a statement for Sterling's Bayer Co. division.

"Like all effective medicines, aspirin can cause side effects in some individuals, and these effects occasionally may be serious," Dr. Tainter said.

"However, its over-all record of safe use as a household remedy is truly extraordinary and has been well established in worldwide use by hundreds of millions of people during the last 70 years. No other drug has been used as widely, as effectively and as safely as aspirin."

Dr. Farr said it has been known for years that overuse of aspirin causes upset stomach, gastro-intestinal hemorrhage and aspirin intolerance.

"More recently," he said, "it has been found that aspirin can cause aplastic anemia, interference with blood clotting in normal people and bleeding in hemophiliacs."

"Out of 125 patients with massive gastric hemorrhages in a California study, 80 per cent had taken aspirin in the last 48 hours," Dr. Farr said. "Seventy-five per cent had taken from two to 12 aspirin and no other medicine at all."

Dr. Farr said he found in a recent study in Denver that about 20 per cent of the asthma patients under his care could not tolerate aspirin and would have asthma attacks when they took aspirin.

"To make matters worse," he said, "many patients and doctors fail to recognize a cause-and-effect relationship between the ingestion of aspirin and a subsequent asthma attack."

"In the test tube, aspirin permanently alters DNA, the genetic code," Dr. Farr said. "In fact, it causes changes in almost any body constituent with which it comes in contact."

He called for more critical clinical and laboratory research on aspirin, which he said is useful "when it is used for the proper reasons."

"There is no question that aspirin is an effective analgesic, anti-inflammatory and antipyretic agent, and a very useful drug in the treatment of rheumatic diseases," Dr. Farr said.

In the meantime, he said, "the American public should know aspirin is a potentially dangerous drug."

Sinatra Finally Testifies

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Entertainer Frank Sinatra testified for more than an hour Tuesday night before the New Jersey State Investigation Commission, ending his fight against the commission's subpoena in connection with its investigation of organized crime.

William F. Hyland, commission chairman, said Sinatra was "fully co-operative" but he said policy made it impossible for him to comment on what the singer had told the commission.

The commission had been seeking to question Sinatra since June in connection with its investigation of organized crime in the state.

CLC Can't Speak For Unions

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Morris, executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, warned Tuesday night the congress has no authority to commit its affiliated unions to pledges of wage restraint.

Mr. Morris said in an interview the agreement in Ottawa by business and the provinces on a hold-the-price policy was so full of its and buts, that it was impossible to evaluate the impact.

And he reiterated the congress position that wages always follow prices.

"Workers are the first to feel the pressure of inflation and deflation brought about through unemployment."

If the gap between wages and prices could be narrowed, he said, this would undoubtedly be reflected in union contract proposals.

But he said there was a variety of pressures on the economy, including spill-over from inflation in the United States.

'Durables' Not Factor

TORONTO (CP) — L. E. Nichol of Senneville, Que., president of Industrial Acceptance Corp. Ltd., says government imposition of credit controls would be a surprise because credit sales of consumer durables are not a significant factor in inflation.

Mr. Nichol said Tuesday in an interview that the imposition of controls to govern percentage of down payments and the length of terms would do little to halt inflationary trends.

"It is getting a little late in the day to consider this an effective means of combatting inflation.

"Price increases for consumer durables are less inflationary than many other elements in the economy, including wages and the cost of government."

Easier Money Forecast in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Heller, a former chairman of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, said Tuesday that he foresaw a move "within the next month" by the Federal Reserve Board to expand the United States' money supply.

The move would amount to some relaxation of tight credit restraints, which have long been considered a depressant of the stock market.

New York State Scientist Permanently Radioactive

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A seemingly permanent radioactive contamination has been found in a New York state health department scientist who probably has carried the condition for six years, a department spokesman said Tuesday.

The spokesman described the contamination as relatively harmless and not hazardous to the public but said the scientist and his family have been placed in precautionary isolation.

He was identified as Harris Levine by his superior, Dr. Joseph Sharp head of the radiological sciences group of the department's division of laboratories and research.

Sharp said Levine probably became contaminated prior to joining the health department in 1964.

He said the suspected source of radiation was a device to detect counterfeit money Levine invented.

A Levine son also was found contaminated and the radiation was detected throughout the Levine home. No traces were found in the scientists wife and daughter.

Sharp said that because the particles were so easily stopped, the radiation could not enter the body through the skin but had to be ingested on food, or inhaled.

Sharp described the contamination as being equal to three to 10 x-rays a year.

Canadian Magazines No Longer Worth Saving Says O'Leary

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Grattan O'Leary, author of a nine-year-old plan to help Canadian magazines survive against competition from the United States, said Tuesday Canadian periodicals are not worth saving anymore.

Senator O'Leary, veteran newspaper man who headed the 1961 royal commission on publications, told the special Senate committee on mass media that successive Conservative and Liberal governments diluted his plan. Canadian magazines meantime have cosied up to U.S.-owned Time and Reader's Digest, and Time's Canada edition is probably "the best Canadian magazine we have."

The senator, editor emeritus of the Ottawa Journal and long-time Conservative party campaigner, told the committee he had hoped in 1961 to be able to save Canadian magazines that were worthwhile, but there are no worthwhile ones left.

In 90 minutes of unrestrained comment on subjects from daily newspapers—"complacent"—to a planned federal information agency—"I'm a little afraid of it"—the senator had his committee audience alternately chuckling at his oratorical thrusts and earnestly seeking elaboration of his views about the magazine industry in Canada.

He was also scathing in his criticism of television and denied there was any such thing as electronic journalism. He was particularly critical of the CBC's Saturday and Sunday night news and public affairs show Weekend which aired "damned nonsense and utter tripe."

People can refer back to print for reference, but a radio or television news program is one shot and it is gone, he said.

He didn't like radio reporters jamming microphones in front of MPs and cabinet ministers when they came out of the House. It took the onus off the reporters to examine policies.

Senator O'Leary also had harsh words for the newspaper reporters in the press gallery.

Comparing news stories with Hansard, the official record of Commons debates, showed that reporters were not very accurate, he said.

They treated Parliament as a gamepit while criticizing MPs as gamecocks fighting one another.

The O'Leary royal commission recommended tax measures in 1961 designed to deal with criticism that Canadian magazines faced unfair competition from U.S. periodicals—primarily Time and Reader's Digest—which imported the bulk of their editorial contents and took Canadian-generated advertising revenue away from domestically-owned.

Among the 1961 recommendations was one to disallow costs of advertising—directed at the Canadian market—placed in non-Canadian periodicals as a business-expense deduction for tax purposes by Canadian advertisers.

The Conservative government then decided that the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest should be exempt from such a provision, a position adopted by the subsequent Liberal government when it enacted tax legislation that took effect in 1965.

Senator O'Leary said Tuesday the federal parties, by introducing the exceptio s, entrenched the positions in Canada of Time and Reader's Digest and effectively gave them a monopoly.

Now, he said, a reader can find more Canadian content in Time magazine than in Saturday Night or Maclean's magazine.

"I have no praise for existing magazines," Senator O'Leary said.

Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), committee chairman, commented that when he had announced plans for the media committee a year ago he had thought the solution to the magazine dilemma might simply be to implement Senator O'Leary's recommendations fully.

However, he said, testimony to the committee—including evidence earlier Tuesday from Saturday Night magazine—had indicated that a substantial cross-section of Canadian magazines have abandoned the idea of fighting the special tax treatment for advertising in Time and Reader's Digest.

It may be that the situation now warrants keeping the two U.S.-owned magazines in Canada, Senator O'Leary said.

Asked if he would repeat his 1961 recommendations today, Senator O'Leary said he would if he thought the Canadian magazines were as good as he thought they were in 1961.

He added that if Canadian magazines no longer wanted help, he would not help them—and he certainly would not help Saturday Night.

He said Saturday Night has been kept alive because other magazines wanted to keep it alive and had taken the necessary steps—an apparent reference to co-operative magazine advertising campaigns.

Earlier, he had said the magazines had been persuaded that if Time disappeared from Canada, magazine advertising generally would dry up. He said that could be, but he did not believe it.

William Nobleman, president of Saturday Night, had testified earlier that without Time and Reader's Digest in Canada there would be no magazine industry.

Advertisers, influenced by television, sought mass markets for their messages. It is doubtful whether they would bear the cost of advertising in just a few, smaller magazines

Mr. Nobleman said the 1961 recommendations designed to encourage a self-sufficient magazine industry in Canada were 15 years too late, because the industry was already dependent on the presence of Time magazine.

Questioned by Senator Davey, Mr. Nobleman said Saturday Night receives about $12,000 a year in advertising revenue from Time Canada under a contract whereby Time advertises itself regularly in Saturday Night.

He said the Time contract was among the dozen biggest Saturday Night has.

Saturday Night's views about Time magazine's presence in Canada were echoed in part last week by Maclean's magazine. Maclean's also said exclusion of Time from Canada now would be politically unrealistic.

Original exemption of Time from the tax law had resulted from U.S. government pressure at a time when Canada was trying to arrange the automotive trade pact, which came into force in 1965, the committee was told by Maclean's.

Alimony Judgment Reserved

WINDSOR (CP) — Judgment was reserved Tuesday in the divorce hearing of Louis Cohen, 63, of Toronto, who is seeking $100-a-week alimony from his estranged wife, Ruth.

Mr. Justice John H. Osler of the Ontario Supreme Court said judgment would be made some time in April. The case is believed unprecedented in Canada.

Cohen has testified he is at present living on welfare of $25 a week in a downtonw Toronto rooming house.

Magazines Seek Joint Advertising

OTTAWA (CP) — Competition for advertising revenue among popular Canadian magazines has been virtually eliminated in a common effort to combat other media for advertising dollars, the Chatelaine Group of magazines said today.

A brief to the special Senate committee on mass media from the group publisher, Lloyd Hodgkinson, said that the limited number of magazines in the country makes it necessary for them "to use their collective efforts against other media to develop advertising revenues."

They worked together to solicit advertising through the Magazine Advertising Bureau, a non-profit corporation supported by 12 magazines including the Chatelaine Group.

The Chatelaine Group, part of the Maclean-Hunter media company, puts out the English-language Chatelaine (circulation 980,000), a French-Canadian counterpart and Miss Chatelaine, a magazine for teen-agers.

Mr. Hodgkinson said that the two Chatelaines, the only mass, paid-circulation women's magazines in Canada, find their main advertising competitors are outside the magazine industry in other media-television, newspapers and their supplements.

"The relatively-lower cost per message delivered into the home, claimed by TV, is the major competition," he said.

Television had the cost advantage in the import of expensive creative material from outside Canada. Canadian magazines had to generate sufficient revenue to pay all creative, manufacturing and distribution costs of their publications.

"This, together with the very substantial government subsidy to the CBC, makes it increasingly difficult for magazines in general to compete on an economic basis with television."

Main concern about the growth future of Chatelaine was the cost.

"While creatively we are capable of producing a product of interest to our readers, the rapidly increasing costs of materials, labor and distribution are outpacing our revenue. The increase in postal rates is a good example."

Mr. Hodgkinson said that in the complex and expensive competition from foreign periodicals and domestic television, there should be a greater concentration of magazines in larger corporate hands to provide resources, technological facilities and know-how.

Magazines ought to work with electronic media in the production of creative material. Diversified companies involved in both broadcast and print media are a necessity to produce a strong communications industry.

In a separate brief, another Maclean-Hunter publication, Maclean's magazine and its French-Canadian counterpart Le Magazine Maclean, said Canada needs more national periodicals as well as the encouragement of those already in being.

The brief, submitted by joint publisher F. G. Brander, made some of the points of the Chatelaine Group submission and added that the federal subsidy for CBC television produces "inequitable competition" for the advertising dollar.

Main magazine competition for Maclean's came from such U.S. publications as Look and Life rather than complementary magazines such as Time, Reader's Digest and Saturday Night.

In its own brief, the Magazine Advertising Bureau said its member publications represent more than 90 per cent of the circulation of consumer magazines audited in Canada by the Audit Bureau of Circulations, which is owned by the advertising community.

Other publications are welcome to join as long as they meet "basic requirements" of which the major one is a circulation audit yb ABC.

The bureau, established as a co-operative advertising medium in 1967, sought to improve the welfare of the consumer magazine industry. By working together, magazines were making progress. Collectively they had their biggest advertising dollar volume in history last year.

So we borrowed it, and we will return the tree after Christmas. We thank you very much and wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Signed: The Christmas Phantoms."

Search for Man's Beginning Fascinating Mystery Story

NEW YORK (AP) — The Man Hunters on NBC Tuesday night was a real-life suspense tale about detectives whose exploits were more fascinating than those of Sherlock Holmes or his descendants in fiction.

It was the story of a search for the beginnings of man in the mists of time before recorded history. The hunters are anthropologists and the search is in progress in Africa, Asia and Europe.

Clues are fragments of bones and teeth, hand-fashioned tools and weapons. The hunters were shown carefully digging dirt by the thimbleful, screening soil for tiny shells and seeds.

In one case, they decided that one early ape-man had been killed by a tiger by matching up holes in a fossil skull with fossil tiger teeth.

The program was well organized, used an assortment of illustrative devices and had the excellent services of E. G. Marshall as narrator.

McCloud: Who Killed Miss U.S.A.? the two-hour World Première feature on NBC was a fast-paced police action story that developed some interesting characters and had interesting New York City background.

It starred Dennis Weaver, who pulled his old "Chester" accent off the shelf to portray a drawling, match-chewing deputy marshal from New Mexico solving a murder case under the noses of the sophisticated New York police.

Shot largely on location, much of the film showed the deputy wandering around Manhattan slums.

At the end, there was a revealing little twist: The deputy was assigned to New York to study police work. This suggested the show's producers would like to spin it into a series. NBC could do worse, although Weaver's portrait of a country cop sometimes got too hay-seedy to be believable.

ABC broadcast the 90-minute memorial to Robert F. Kennedy which had received attention across the country. The film was written by Arthur Schlesinger Jr. and narrated by John Huston.

It used the usual documentary technique to put together a portrait of a man who was in the public eye for a long time. There were news film clips, taped excerpts from speeches, family photographs, reminiscences of family, friends and associates.

The result was a loving and admiring salute. It did not, however, add much to what already had been shown and said of the young man who met a tragic death almost two years ago.

Annie, the Women in the Life of a Man on CBS—9-10 EST—tonight stars Anne Bancroft in a series of sketches, songs and dances that combine to make a witty and original hour which is virtually a one-woman show.

8th Tyendinaga

8TH TYENDINAGA — The Cubs and Scouts of Plainfield sponsored a Valentine's dance on Feb. 14 in the evening. The Cassibo orchestra supplied the music and there was a good attendance.

The young people of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Roslin, were hosts Monday, Feb. 16 to the young people from Christ Church, Belleville. The Roslin group presented a play entitled, Are you joking Jeremiah?

Theatre Groups Compete For Toronto Area Title

TORONTO (CP) — Five Toronto-area little theatre groups will compete next week in the central Ontario regional drama festival for 10 awards and a possible berth in the Dominion Drama Festival at Winnipeg May 18 to 23.

The Central Players open the festival Monday night with a production of Tom Hendry's 15 Miles of Broken Glass, one of two Canadian plays to be presented at the University of Toronto's Hart House Theatre. The production is directed by Martin Kinch.

The Tuesday night presentation by the Scarborough Players of The Killing of Sister George by Frank Marcus is the one commercially well-known play that will be seen at this year's festival. John Caldwell directs.

I Knock at the Door, Paul Shyre's dramatization of Irish playwright and author Sean O'Casey's autobiography of his early life in Dublin in the 1880s, will be presented Wednesday night by the York Centennial Theatre directed by Donald Ford.

The other Canadian play, The Gallery by Torontonian Harvey Markowitz, is the Thursday night presentation of the Avenal Players directed by Peter McConnell.

The closing production Friday night will be the Company of Pilgrim's offering of Olwen Wymark's Triple Image. Bill Granger is the director.

The five festival entries were chosen from nine plays screened over the last two or three months by Paul Thompson of Toronto.

Festival adjudicator will be Ann Wickham of Montreal, a veteran of 14 seasons as an actress in off-Broadway shows and stock productions and a professional writer for magazines.

According to DDF rules initiated last year, winners of regional festivals are not automatically entries in the national festival. Miss Wickham will also adjudicate festivals in the three other regions in the Ontario zone and from the four winners then select the one to represent the zone.

MUST SELL SELF

"An actor is just a salesman, only he must sell himself instead of a product," says actor William Shatner, who starred in television's Star Trek series. "When an actor is rejected for a role that he wants it is the same as a salesman being turned away without an order."

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Volume Tuesday was 1,446,000 shares compared with 1,730,000 Monday and the lighest since last Aug. 5 when 1,446,000 shares traded.

Value of stocks traded Tuesday was $10,907,000 compared with $13,136,000 Monday. Tuesday's total value was the lightest in any session since last Aug. 20 when the value was $10,073,000.

On index, industrials were down 1.03 to 177.69, western oils 3.87 to 196.09, a low for 1970, golds 1.41 to 148.78 and base metals .35 to 148.78.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Grief and Guilt Often Intermixed

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.,
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Two five-letter words that begin with G.: Grief and Guilt. The similarity does not end there. In my practice I have observed the two are often intermixed and indistinguishable. When a family member dies the grief of the survivors is intensified when guilt feelings prevail.

It is for this reason I tell family members to be patient with those who are sick. It is so easy to begin to believe they are hypochondriacs "always complaining."

Many a really sick man or woman or youngster has said to me, "I wish I could go off in a corner and suffer alone. A dog or cat does it. Why can't I?

"Whenever I grunt because I'm in pain, or keep quiet because I'm nervous or depressed, they're bound to say, snap out of it. All you're doing is complaining lately."

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For years I called my husband a lazy lout because he wouldn't help around the house. He used to do so but quit.

Not until he died did I learn that he had been suffering from angina, which he kept from me so I wouldn't worry.

Losing him was bad enough. But a few years have gone by and I still can't live with myself because of my guilt feelings. How I hounded the poor man.

Why won't wives (and husbands) realize that it's possible the other may be sick — and not just lazy or a complainer? — Mrs. A.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm still crying like a baby, although it's months since my wife died. We all knew she had very high blood pressure. She complained of headaches, nervousness and tiredness for so long that I and the children came to believe that we had a hypochondriac as a wife and mother.

She never got one bit of sympathy from any of us. Only raised eyebrows and deaf ears.

I don't recall any time that I or any one of our five grown children ever offered to help her around the house. Sick or not, it was she alone who did all the work.

I get such heavy feelings round my chest lately, I have a hunch I'm getting some coronary trouble due to a "heavy heart of grief and guilt."

I had to tell this to somebody, so I'm writing to you — a stranger. Another purpose is to warn your readers that grief is bad enough; but when you add guilt feelings, it's almost unbearable. — Mr. S.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I like my golf. I like to bowl. I like to work in our garden. But I wonder if I should continue.

During a routine X-ray investigation the doctor discovered that I have a small hiatal hernia. It doesn't bother me. I have no symptoms. But what worries me is that I may make it larger by exerting. I forgot to ask our doctor. What do you think? — Mr. G.

Comment: Once I wrote a book (now out of print) called Your Life to Enjoy. So I say to you, Enjoy! Enjoy!

I don't see how moderate exercise would in any way worsen a hiatal hernia. Now if you went in for heavy weight-lifting that would be something else again. Incidentally, straining at stool (with mouth closed) is another interdiction.

• • •

For Mrs. F.: As you know, I do not believe one should get into the habit of taking daily laxatives. So naturally I am not in favor of your taking a few tablespoonsful of mineral oil every night. Besides, mineral oil interferes with the proper absorption of Vitamin A. If you insist on laxatives, why not alternate with milk of magnesia or some other mild laxatice your doctor may prescribe?

Design Incentives Announced

OTTAWA (CP) — New incentives to improve design of Canadian products were announced Tuesday by the industry, trade and commerce department.

The department will launch this year a program to increase the quantity and improve the quality of Canadian designs.

This program is being undertaken on the advice of the national design council, a body appointed to advise the minister.

Cornerstone of the program will be inauguration of the industrial design assistance program which will assist industry by contributing to the costs of industrial design development.

Assistance will be available to companies incorporated in Canada, to groups of companies organized as consortia and to trade associations which can satisfy the requirements of the program.

Financial assistance will be concentrated on short-term projects and will be limited to 50 per cent of the operation and administrative costs.

Emphasis will be placed on improving Canadian design capability in terms of management, knowledge and talent.

The two Design Canada centres in Toronto and Montreal will be discontinued as of March 31 and funds for their operation re-allocated to the new program.

Commandments No Solution

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Every so often, I receive a letter from a reader who suggests that most of our troubles on earth would be solved "if only we followed the 10 Commandments." How easy it would be if life were that simple.

These unthinking persons have never actually submitted the 10 Commandments to a careful scrutiny. If they did, they would come to the same conclusion as Paul Tillich, perhaps the finest theological mind of our time.

In his last book, My Search for Absolutes, Tillich admits that such sacred laws as the 10 Commandments "are, on the one hand, too abstract to cover any concrete situation and, on the other, not abstract enough to become general principles, but depend on culture that produced them."

Take the most crucial law in the Decalogue — "Thou shalt not kill." Even if one translates Hebrew word katla as "murder," Tillich points out, how is murder to be defined as distinct from killing in general? What about military killing? Juridicial killing? Killing in self-defence? If the Commandment were taken literally, every nation would be pacifistic, and there would be no capital punishment.

Even the first Commandment is most difficult to interpret, much less put into practice. "Thou shalt worship no god but God." Which God are we commanded to worship? And even if the two-and-seventy disputing sects could agree upon this, what about all the modern idolatries that substitute for God — such as the nation, the race, the class, the worship of money and success and position and respectability?

What about the Commandment to honor one's parents? As Tillich says, "this law presupposes something like the fetal situation of complete dependence. How can we apply it to our liberal democratic institutions and to our need to free ourselves from the authority of our parents?"

The Decalogue, indeed, is in much the same position as the Hippocratic Oath for physicians — which tells doctors little or nothing about a host of modern medico-social problems, such as contraception and abortion, euthanasia, sex changes, organ transplants, and the many other perplexities of modern medical science.

In turbulent times such as ours, people like to cling to simplistic answers; but neither the Golden Rule nor the 10 Commandments can take the place of hard thinking and right feeling in a concrete situation. Religion can provide the motivation for decent acts and attitudes toward others; it cannot supply a specific answer.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 19

Your birthday today: With determination and planning plus a little luck, your career this year can reach goals you now think improbable. Intuition receives erratic but frequent and generally positive stimulation, so that bright ideas become natural.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Excitement and needless talk flow about; be wise enough not to get involved. List essentials so that nothing gets left out. Make sure papers are in order. Younger people have a knack of setting you against mate or colleague.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you have property to dispose of, put it on the market today. Business travel is rewarding, particularly if you take along associates to help.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Buying something in a hurry causes regret for quite a while later. Be thankful for the insight which brings you patience while dealing with temperamental brethren, neighbors.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Take a very conservative point of view; do nothing beyond the essential. Important decisions deserve another night for your unconscious mind to digest the issues.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Seek your most fortunate friends and acquaintances; present your finest appearance. Originality and energy find good application today, and earnings promise to improve in response.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): There is concern over matters that never quite come to be real issues. Personality conflicts only hold up career progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): A journey of inquiry reaps very helpful information, fresh contacts for later development. Get rid of delayed correspondence, unfinished business.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Family plans tend to fall apart with changing situations. Sudden offers require prompt responses. Evening plans are diverted until you resolve your choices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): It's mostly a buyer's market in supplies. Save your energy by avoiding crowds and rush-hour conditions. In - laws and distant relatives are quite touchy today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Other people's career problems come to your attention. Advice should not include mixing into theiir affairs. Experts look over your accomplishments with favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Today's events set up the context for a serious offer of advancement, you may carry responsibility considerably greater than your proper share, for rewards which do not materialize until later on.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): For a happy outcome, discipline yourself to avoid showing competitive or jealous tendencies. Home life requires personal serenity — give your inner nature a chance to come through.

Nixon's 'Strategy for Peace' Unprecedented Personal Review

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon's foreign "strategy for peace," which he sent to Congress today, is a personalized document unprecedented in modern American history.

In the last two Democratic administrations, a review of U.S. relations with the rest of the world has gone to Congress under the name of the defence secretary along with an explanation of the military spending needed.

Until a comparatively short time ago, it was intended that this year's review should be submitted to congress by State Secretary William P. Rogers. But the plan was changed and the president disclosed last month that he would follow up his traditional State of the Union address with a State of the World message.

The fact that Nixon made his review while Rogers was touring Africa has led to published suggestions that the president's traditional chief adviser on foreign affairs was being downgraded.

This has been denied, but Nixon appears to have decided he can exercise better political judgment in foreign affairs if the National Security Council is revitalized and re-established as the principal forum for presidential consideration of foreign policy issues.

Presidents Kennedy and Johnson used the machinery of the council, but did their planning in more intimate circumstances.

Nixon has gone back to the Eisenhower example and makes clear in his report to Congress that, as long as he is in the White House, the council will be given even greater importance in policymaking.

"I refuse to be confronted with a bureaucratic consensus that leaves me no options but acceptance or rejection, and that gives me no way of knowing what alternatives exist," the president's report says.

Growth of Large Cities Said Harmful to Towns

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal party says the growth of large metropolitan cities has been detrimental to the survival of many small towns and villages in Ontario.

In a background paper for the party's three-day annual meeting which starts in Ottawa Thursday, the party states:

"These centres once provided the allied services to the agricultural industry and the surrounding communities but as the farm population dropped, so did the need for services, and consequently many people had to return to new areas of employment.

"However, those remaining in the rural areas had to maintain the same burden of taxation for schools and administrative costs in their municipalities."

The paper recommends that the Ontario government set up tax incentives to help spread the population more evenly across the province.

It also recommends that the trend to larger agricultural units be slowed down so that one- and two-man operations have an opportunity to survive.

Capital Said Already Flowing Out of Canada

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Capital is already flowing out of Canada because of recommendations contained in the federal government white paper on taxation, John White, Ontario revenue minister, told a Rotary Club meeting Tuesday.

One bank in the West Indies has recently received $200,000,000 in funds transferred from Canada, Mr. White said.

He said he knew of a worried businessman, president of a large company, who has been resisting the urgings of his partners to set up a holding company outside Canada as a repository for company funds.

"He hasn't agreed yet," Mr. White said, "because he is, quite frankly, patriotic. But how long can it take for self-interest to overbalance patriotism?"

'Fed Up' with War, Man Threatens PM

HULL, Que. (CP) — Maurice St. Amour, 30, pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of being disorderly in a public place in the wake of a telephone call to police threatening Prime Minister Trudeau's life.

The call was received Monday by the nearby Low, Que., provincial police detachment.

The caller told police he was "fed up" with Canada supplying material to the United States for use in the Vietnam war and had found the solution:

"I'm going to shoot Trudeau. I'm on my way to Ottawa now."

RCMP officers were informed of the situation and strengthened security for Mr. Trudeau. Later they asked the Quebec police to hold a man for questioning.

St. Amour was apprehended Monday. He was ordered placed on probation for a year with the stipulation that he seek psychiatric treatment.

House Committee Backs Vote at 18

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons committee on privileges and elections Tuesday approved lowering the voting age to 18 as part of a package of recommended amendments to the Canada Elections Act.

The proposal moved by Jean T. Richard (L—Ottawa East) was accepted with little discussion.

The suggestion was contained in the throne speech last October.

If the recommendation is approved by the Commons, more than 1,000,000 new electors will be eligible to vote in the next election. The current minimum age is 21.

The committee also agreed Tuesday to drop the age limit from 21 to 18 for all riding election officials except the returning officer.

A proposal to include party affiliation on federal election ballots was approved.

The committee also decided to eliminate mention of occupation and addresses of candidates on the ballot.

The recommendations will go to the Commons in a report suggesting changes to the Canada Elections Act.

1972 Phosphate Ban Too Late---Potter

A Comb, Your Reverence?

Tax Experts To Seek Facts

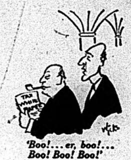
TORONTO (CP) — A group of senior federal officials are to meet here Friday with their Ontario counterparts in the treasury department to discuss methods of calculating revenue yields arising from the white paper on taxation reform.

Ottawa officials want to know how Ontario arrived at the figures of $1,300,000,000 in computing what additional revenue would be raised in five years by the federal white paper proposals. Ottawa had set the figure at $630,000,000.

The discrepancy created a controversy when the province disputed the federal figure last December.

A provincial government spokesman said nothing is expected to be resolved at the meeting.

"We'll exchange information on what basis was used in determining the figures, and then go home and try to figure out who was right."



'Boo!... er, boo!... Boo! Boo! Boo!'

Ottawa Plans Cut by Stages

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The federal government ban on phosphate detergents — fully effective by 1972 — today was attacked as too tardy a process by Dr. Richard Potter.

The outspoken Hastings MPP — who has even criticized his own Ontario Conservative party over anti-pollution action — says the ban should be imposed immediately.

"Why wait until 1972 if we're really sincere about this?" queried Dr. Potter. "I think it's stretching a point too far.

He pondered whether government was catering to "big interests" by allowing manufacturers time to get rid of any detergent stockpiles.

The ban was announced in Ottawa yesterday by Energy and Resources Minister J. J. Greene.

Mr. Greene said all 10 provinces have agreed to the move and the proposed Canada Water Act will be amended to include the ban.

He said he is writing detergent companies notifying them that their products must be limited to 25 per cent phosphates by August.

Later, said the minister, he will discuss with the firms the possibility of a second-stage reduction — perhaps to 10 per cent — before the total ban comes into effect in 1972.

"I think it's a good idea, but I don't know why they're waiting until 1972," reacted Dr. Potter today.

People talk about "big interests," said the MPP, and it "certainly looks" as though the ban was taking into account manufacturers' stockpiles

White Paper Unfair

Too Full of Holes To Patch--Stanfield

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader, said today the federal government's white paper on taxation should be withdrawn immediately because it is "too full of holes to be patched up."

The Opposition leader told a service club:

"Not only will we fight those proposals that are unfair, but when we form the government we will remove them from the tax system should Mr. (Prime Minister) Trudeau impose them on the country."

Mr. Stanfield was speaking in the home constituency of Finance Minister Edgar Benson, who drew up the white paper.

Wagner Quits Politics

QUEBEC (CP) — Claude Wagner, crime buster who rose to the rank of justice minister in the Quebec Liberal party but failed in a bid to become its leader, quit politics Wednesday "for the time being."

The self-styled people's champion who rode a tough 10-year road as a crusading Crown prosecutor, a tough-talking judge and a no-nonsense justice minister, left the party in characteristic style, scolding the Liberals for not electing him leader.

The 44-year-old lawyer read a statement to a news conference in French and English, then refused to answer questions.

The withdrawal from politics came several weeks after his leadership loss to the party's new chief, Robert Bourassa.

Mr. Wagner said:

"My decision was based on realism, common sense and respect for my own conscience."

His announcement followed a meeting with Mr. Bourassa, who succeeded former premier Jean Lesage.

Mr. Wagner said he also intends to resign his legislature seat of Montreal Verdun.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Clear, crisp weather is indicated for most of the province today. However, another weak disturbance moving toward the Great Lakes from Manitoba will spread some cloudiness and light snow down across Ontario later today and tonight. Friday should be mainly clear and quite cold in all sections of the province.

Heavy Losses Check Red Drive in Laos

VIENTIANE (AP) — Heavy casualties apparently have forced the North Vietnamese and the Pathet Lao to suspend operations temporarily in their campaign to recapture the Plaine des Jarres, official sources reported today.

The battle area 100 miles north-northeast of Vientiane was reported "very quiet" today after seven days of hard fighting in which the Laotian government said 17 of its troops were killed and 28 wounded.

The sources said government guerrilla patrols had found the bodies of 174 North Vietnamese troops on the plain, bringing the total confirmed Communist casualties to more than 385 since the North Vietnamese offensive opened last week.

The sources said the North Vietnamese were carrying new battle gear and had been killed by AC-47 gunships recently supplied to the Laotian air force by the U.S. government.

Intelligence reports say the North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao have massed about 20,000 men around the plain. But the premier of Laos said today that the outnumbered force of Meo hill tribesmen and Laotian army troops, commanded by Gen. Vang Pao, will "fight to the end" and will contain the North Vietnamese offensive until the rains return and end it.

Prince Souvanna Phouma said the North Vietnamese and the pro-Communist Pathet Lao troops are "better prepared" for the offensive launched last week than for one during the dry season last winter.

Souvanna said the North Vietnamese, with three divisions on the plain, began the offensive Friday with simultaneous attacks on 12 to 13 government positions.

The plain is about 50 miles long and 20 miles wide. It is 100 miles north-northeast of Vientiane, the capital, and is the hub of most of the country's main roads.

Souvanna denied that U.S. troops are fighting in Laos and said that his government never would ask for foreign troops.

"We need only material," he said. "We will ask the Americans for arms. . . ."

Chicago Riot Trial Verdicts Protested

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An unruly crowd of 1,800 persons clashed with police in Ann Arbor, Mich., following a University of Michigan rally called by Students for a Democratic Society to protest the Chicago riot trial verdicts.

Five persons were arrested Wednesday night, 13 suffered minor injuries and windows were smashed at four stores, two banks and a police car.

In Lawrence, Kan., 50 demonstrators stormed the courthouse, shattered a window and painted on walls. Three were arrested.

In Iowa City, Iowa, 35 teenagers invaded a courtroom and chanted anti-establishment slogans but fled before Judge Ansel Chapman could don his robes and make good on a vow to fine them for contempt of court.

In New York City, a crowd of 2,200 filled a Hunter College assembly hall to hear speakers denounce the Chicago verdicts and the New York trial of 13 Black Panthers. Plans to march to Times Square were cancelled after scores of police assembled outside the hall.

Canadian Forces Base in Sidney Major Influence on Economy

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the fourth in a series on Sidney Township.

It is impossible to consider the make up of Sidney Township without mentioning the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton.

While the impact on the local economy is important to a very large area, the fact remains the 1,000 acre area occupied by the base is all located within the boundaries of the Township of Sidney.

There are over 3,000 military personnel and about 800 civilians employed at the CFB.

An area known as Middleton Park immediately to the west of the base contains 656 of the 699 housing units known as married quarters. Many other families live in accommodations throughout the surrounding area. Other living quarters generally reserved for high-ranking officers are located in the portion of the base to the south of Highway 2.

Retail outlets on the base include a grocery store north of the highway, a base exchange likened to a variety or general store south of the highway, and two service stations — one on either side of the highway.

Two elementary schools are situated in Middleton Park, one for kindergarten to Grade 4, the other Grades 5 to 8. Children of service personnel, over 1,330 receive their elementary education at these schools.

One of the main functions of the base is transporting military personnel and their dependents to and from tours of duty overseas. Understandably these transient people must be accommodated for short periods of time until they move on to their stations of duty across Canada.

Yukon Lodge, which is in reality a hotel, is located on the base north of Highway 2. Opened in 1962, it can accommodate up to 180 adults and children at any one time. On the average, about 50 people are accommodated daily.

Many of the servicemen serving overseas purchase automobiles and ship them back to Canada at their own expense. A customs compound adjacent to Yukon Lodge has received about 1,700 of these vehicles a year for the past five years.

One of the main units located at the CFB is 2 Air Movement Unit (2 AMU). This designation might not mean much to many people, but it handles the movement control of a busy international airport. It is this unit that is responsible for the movement of all people including government officials to and from overseas and other parts of Canada. All the components necessary to the efficient operation of an airport are found here, including a large passenger lounge, customs and baggage facilities.

Most people in the area now take the large military establishment for granted but a stranger driving along Highway 2 might be suddenly surprised to find himself in the midst of this large, sprawling air base.

Situated between Belleville and Trenton on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, CFB Trenton is neatly bisected by the highway. North of it is the operations side of the field encompassing hangars, tarmacs and runways made up of 437

Volunteers Get Due

Guest speaker at last night's annual meeting of the Canadian Cancer Society, Dr. R. B. Lynn of Kingston, looks over the certificates of merit and services to be handed to organization members. Miss Mary Packard, the Miss Hope representative of Quinte and the Thousand Islands, looks on.

'Voluntary Suicide' Killer of Thousands

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

Dr. R. B. Lynn brought more than 50 members of the Canadian Cancer Society up short last night when he called cigarette smoking "one of the greatest problems to health in our society today."

Guest speaker at the society's annual dinner meeting at the Hotel Quinte, the Kingston cardio-thoracic surgeon told his audience that the most important role the society has to play is not just to be raising money but the education of the public.

"The medium of television is the best method to reach the public painlessly," he said.

Dr. Lynn explained how his department put the mass media to work for the benefit of the public — by making a 55-minute film about heart disease, suggesting a similar venture could be undertaken as a "national project" for the cancer society.

"In making the public understand the problems that smoking can cause, you should make clear that to stop smoking is not the only answer," he indicated, emphasizing that the individual must make a "conscious effort" to remain physically fit.

"And this means keeping thin," he said flatly "and exercising, too."

Dr. Lynn pointed to the importance of exercising to some degree each day, saying that "too few of us make any effort to exercise regularly at all."

Smoking only serves to aggravate diseases that many patients already suffer from. Two of our biggest killers are heart disease and cancer, he said.

"One half of the people that die on the North American continent die of heart disease. If you smoke a pack a day, statistics have shown that you have eight to 10 years less to live than someone who doesn't smoke."

"In 1969 Canadians smoked 4,000 cigarettes per capita", related Dr. Lynn, which sometimes make you wonder if you are not casting seeds on barren ground."

The surgeon remarked that no measures taken so far have seemed to prove effective as a deterrent to smoking.

"Our government receives 6.7 per cent of its federal revenue from the taxation of tobacco. And the government of Ontario recently spent $450,000 telling tobacco producers how to grow their product better. In the U.S. the five major tabacco companies spent $350 million on cigarette advertising."

With a slight of humor, Dr. Lynn said "the only reason the man from Marlboro country is seen riding across the plains is that he is too short of breath to walk."

"The point is that smoking is lung pollution, and whether smokers know it, they are committing voluntary suicide . . . . but this is a democracy", he added.

He stressed that the answer seems to lie with education, particularly of young people. "But then, it is never too late to stop smoking either", the Kingston surgeon concluded.

Also a guest at the meeting was Miss Hope for Quinte and the Thousand Islands, Belleville student nurse, Miss Mary Packard.

Certificates of merit and service were presented to several district members of the society by President Les Lennox, who remarked that "money could not buy the dedication and devotion given so freely by the volunteers who make up the membership of the cancer society.

Quinte Students Return From Northern Course

Although a formal program has yet to be introduced by Hastings County board of education, outdoor education is continuing in the schools even during the winter freeze-up.

Just back from a two-day excursion in north Hastings is a group from Quinte Secondary School, 13 boys and five girls who are studying geography, geology and environmental science this year.

Led by teachers Robert Ross and Paul Youngeblut, the students spent two days at the Ross cottage on Faraday Lake. They studied use of the compass, measurement of cliffs by the use of trigonometry, water sampling of the lake and wild life populations.

Using snowmobiles provided by the students, they travelled over the area and with a lands and forest official visited two deer yards in the district.

Using techniques developed on previous Quinte field trips, the group measured the oxygen and carbon dioxide content of the water at the deepest point in Faraday Lake. They learned that in the winter the highest level of oxygen, and therefore the largest concentration of fish, exists in the first 10 feet of water under the ice.

But attempts to catch fish to study lands and forest stocking procedures over the years failed.

The trip was financed by the students at $6 each. The home economics department at Quinte cooked a supply of chili and meat loaf to simplify the food problem. And CFB Trenton enriched the excursion by unexpectedly staging an air rescue practice on the ice while the students were in residence.

The trip was part of a continuing program at Quinte to give students an opportunity to make practical use of classroom theory learned in science courses.

Weaver Seeks Party Post

TRENTON — A member of the Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association will be running for the Ontario Liberal Party's vice - presidency at the annual convention in Ottawa this weekend.

Gerald Weaver, a former Trenton councillor, will be assisted in his campaign for the Ontario party's vice - presidency by Donald Joss of Belleville who will act as his floor manager at the convention.

At Monday night's meeting of the Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association it was also announced that Mrs. Wendy Galbraith of Ameliasburg has agreed to stand as a candidate for women's director of the Liberal Party of Ontario.

Riding association president Donald Joss said that the brief dealing with an international airport at the south end of Prince Edward County would be resubmitted to the minister of transport with revisions which would enhance this area.

He contended that many municipalities around Toronto were very much opposed to this new airport and that this site should be given more consideration.

The advent of the new 48 - passenger short - takeoff capability plane being built by De Haviland Aircraft in Toronto with government assistance would make this area even more attractive as it would be only a 30 minute flight into Toronto Island Airport where passengers could be at any downtown hotel in a few minutes, Mr. Joss explained.

The preference of safety over a few extra minutes travelling time also enhances the Prince Edward County location, Mr. Joss said, noting that a comparatively-located privately - owned airport at Bangor, Maine, had over 3,000 international flights last year and the number was steadily increasing.

A resolution was also drawn up at the meeting and will be sent to the minister of labor complaining about the advertising campaign that the Unemployment Insurance Commission has been running in daily newspapers.

Liberal members felt that the newspaper advertisements insinuated that contributors to the fund were cheating on their claims and were going to be severely punished.

George Cunningham stated if a few people were cheating, the department "should get out and catch them" and quit spending the workers' money on advertisements casting doubt on all workers.

Everett Liddle

Veteran Dies Suddenly

Prominent in veteran affairs since the end of World War One, retired employee of the National Employment Service for nearly 20 years and alderman of the city for two years, Everett Henry Liddle, 12 McDonald Gardens, died suddenly at his home on Wednesday evening the result of a heart attack. He was 73 years of age.

Mr. Liddle was born at Shannonville, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Liddle and lived most of his life in the Belleville district. He was educated in the public school of the county and the high school in the city. When the first World War broke out he enlisted with the 80th Battalion and proceeded overseas and was transferred to the 19th Battalion of the First Division as a signaller. He was invalided to England in 1917 after serving at Ypres, the Salient, Vimy and the Battle of the Somme. He was discharged in 1918 but he never lost his love for the veterans and continuously served them practically all of his life.

He was secretary treasurer of the Great War Veterans' Association and after that organization folded he joined the Canadian Legion and served as Zone Commander and district deputy commander. He was secretary of the poppy committee for 10 years and was district poppy chairman for another 10 years.

He received the Queen Elizabeth Coronation medal, the certificate of merit from the Ontario poppy committee and the Meritorious Medal, it being the highest honor award for the Legion in Canada. Mr. Liddle also received the Centennial Medal. He served as first and second vice - president of the local branch of the Legion.

In his civic life he served as Alderman in 1949 and 1950 and never lost his interest in civic affairs. Fraternally he was past master and a 50 year member of Eureka Lodge AF and AM No. 283 and was also a past worthy patron of Belleville Chapter No. 55 of the Order of Eastern Star.

Mr. Liddle worked for the Coca Cola Company as a cashier and was transferred to Hamilton and then became bookkeeper and salesman for the National Grocers in the late 20's. He joined the Unemployment Insurance Commission in 1945 and dealt mostly with veteran affairs until his retirement.

One of his greatest joys was playing santa for the Santa Claus parade held annually in this city. His jolly Ho Ho has been heard by thousands of children during the years.

Mr. Liddle was a member of Holloway Street United Church.

EVERETT LIDDLE

Surviving are his wife, the former Thelma Fairman, one daughter, Mrs. Rex (Lois) Chaplin, Belleville, one sister, Mrs. Russell (Ina) Wescott, Shannonville and two grandchildren, Gary Chaplin, Toronto, Ronald of Belleville. Two brothers, Archie Liddle and Arthur B. Liddle are predeceased.

Interment will be in Belleville cemetery with Rev. William Lamb officiating.

For part of us went with you,
But you did not go alone,
The day God called you home.

—Sadly missed but always remembered, your daughter Mary McInroy and 3 grandsons and 1 granddaughter.

AUSTIN — In loving memory of a dear husband William (Bill) Austin who passed away Feb. 19, 1965.

Kampus Kapers Now Tradition

This year's edition of Kampus Kapers at BCIVS has 23 years of tradition behind it, something that makes Friday and Saturday's performances a little more special.

For Kampus Kapers is the 24th edition of the annual school variety night in Belleville's oldest secondary school.

And this year will see little difference in format from years past as the students and staff offer parents and friends a variety night of dancing, singing, drama, comedy and anything else that comes to mind.

According to Robert McKnight, a BCIVS teacher in charge of the production, one of the highlights could be an imitation of Graham Kerr, the Galloping Gourmet by a mystery person at the school.

Tickets for the event are on sale at present in the school and at Quinte Book Shop, a site that traditionally has sold them for years.

"Inflation has failed to affect Kampus Kapers," Mr. McKnight said, explaining that tickets are priced at 75 cents and 50 cents.

This year's presentation began in earnest just shortly after the Christmas school holiday and the students have been laboring towards perfection ever since.

But over the years, the format and conception of Kampus Kapers has evolved into something completely different from its original beginnings.

Originally taken over by the Boys Athletic Society, the evening was one of athletics for boys only. It was then designed to raise money to finance teams in various sporting activities.

Pretty soon girls got into the act and a name for the event was initiated — Kampus Kapers. The responsibility for running it was taken over from boys athletics by the school's student council

Although the show now leans towards the entertainment end of things, athletics is still part of the program.

"It's probably the only event of the year that encompasses such a large percentage of the school population," Mr. McKnight said.

But the keyword to Kampus Kapers is tradition. Over the years some students have come back to participate in the event and many come back to see it.

Still others have returned to the school, not as students but as professional people.

James MacKay, brother of the school's present principal William MacKay, was part of a tumbling act in one of the event's earlier stages.

Belleville attorney, John O'Flynn was once a member of the stage crew for a Kampus Kapers stint.

D. C. Stirling, superintendent of curriculum for the Hastings County Board of Education once performed in the program as well.

And so for one more year, Kampus Kapers unfolds this weekend on the stage of the BCIVS auditorium.

Separate School Board Told Deficit Possible

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The Hastings - Prince Edward separate school board last night formed a committee to study its financial situation after it heard a report it could be facing a 1969 deficit.

The board was informed by its business manager, E. J. Paquet, that the 1969 deficit may total $216,524. However, audited statements for last year are not yet available, and board chairman E. J. Buckley said the actual deficit may be lower.

In presenting the month-end statement, Mr. Paquet said the board qualified to receive $1,963,360 in provincial grants and local tax levies in 1969. It had budgeted for $2,131,446 and expenditures estimated by the business manager totalled $2,139,530 for the year, $8,084 over the budget estimate.

Mr. Paquet's figures showed that the board had underlevied for taxes in 12 of the 32 separate school zones for a deficit from this source of $40,355.

In addition, the debts the Hastings - Prince Edward board may inherit from the former individual boards existing before 1969 may come to about $100,000.

However, Mr. Buckley noted that the expenditures for the year were close to the estimated budget set at the beginning of 1969, and the actual deficit situation may not be as great as the present estimate when an audit has been prepared.

Mr. Paquet told the board the assumptions of potential growth in school enrolment was greater than the actual number of pupils enrolled in 1969. The average daily enrolment, a vital factor in the complicated formula determining provincial grants, was estimated at 4,200. Actual enrolment, the business manager said, was 3,890 in 1969.

The board's per pupil cost in 1969 was $550, Mr. Paquet said.

Youth Jailed One Year

TRENTON — Darvy Scobel, 16, of Belleville, was sentenced on two charges of car theft and one of dangerous driving in provincial court here Wednesday.

He pleaded guilty a week ago and yesterday was sentenced to a year definite and one day indefinite on each charge.

The sentences were concurrent.

Scobel also was sentenced to three months concurrent on the dangerous driving charge.

The youth was arrested Jan. 26 following a highspeed chase on the Wooler Road. The chase ended abruptly when a car — earlier reported stolen — missed a turn, struck a hydro pole and stopped against a house.

Quinte Student Chosen Ontario Delegate to UN

A Quinte Secondary School student has been chosen one of five Ontario delegates to a United Nations seminar in New York City March 15-21.

Cheryl Conley, a Grade 13 student, will attend the interprovincial seminar for high school students under the sponsorship of Queen's University.

As far as can be determined, Miss Conley is the first local student to have been chosen for the honor.

Her selection was based on a choice made by instructors and fellow students at the Queen's. University seminar on the United Nations held last summer.

At that time the students were each given a country to represent in mock sessions of the security council and general assembly. On the basis of her participation and interest in history, Miss Conley was picked for the wek of observance of the the week of observance of the "Cheryl has always been an excellent student, especially in history," said principal John Hayman in announcing the award. "She will be a fine representative of Quinte, and the entire Quinte district."

Miss Conley intends to pursue her study of history in university next year — hopefully at Queen's.

Drama Festival Entry Begins Playhouse Run

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Theatre Guild's most elaborate performance opened last night in the Pinnacle Playhouse to a not-quite-capacity crowd.

The Lark, by Jean Anouilh, is the guild's Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival production and besides its nine further performances at the playhouse this week and next, it will travel to Ottawa early in March to compete for some festival awards.

The production has to be the largest in scope and cast to be attempted by the guild in a while, at least as large as the guild's youtheatre production of Dark of the Moon.

And in some respects the Lark implies even larger proportions for the audience with its Stratfordian set and style, excellent costumes and well-crafted props.

The cast and the production staff are large with 37 actors on stage for the performance.

Lighting effects, as in most plays directed by Roy Higgins, resident artistic director, are artistically tasteful.

Outstanding and a new face in the guild is Wendy Foster, the Picton teen-ager who plays Joan of Arc, past, present and future.

The play surrounds the life story of the Maid of Orleans and the aspects of that life are brought forward by intermittent scenes in her trial and several flashbacks to her rise to power as commander-in-chief of the French armies. The play ends with her execution and with her resurrection as a spirit of courage for future mankind.

The result is a play that offers two viewpoints concerning the life of Joan, a point of view from history and a point of view from Joan herself.

John Shaw and Peter Kitcher complement one another as Warwick and Cauchon, the two men swept up in political affairs conflicting with their personal feelings for Joan.

James Williams and James Alexander are suitably evil and fanatical as the promoter and the inquisitor, who seek to mutilate Joan religiously and humiliate her as a heretic.

Outstanding is Lee Jourard as the country baron, Robert de Baudicourt, who, despite his cleverness, is outwitted by the Maid of Orleans.

Peter Hicks plays the despicable Charles, the Dauphin, who turns loyalty into a game and forsakes his courage and the girl who loves him.

The Lark continues tonight and for eight following performances.

Pamper Your Man Kittens' Advice

A new principle in serving the dining public was outlined to the Quinte Home Builders last night by Helen McLean, with a difference.

The difference is her membership in a corps of elite waitresses known as Kittens and serving in a Trenton motel's dining lounge.

"The whole business of making money is, as you know, the principle of first finding a need and secondly filling it well," she told the Home Builders.

The need the Kittens have discovered is based on the belief that men are not treated well enough — particularly businessmen.

"You deserve a place where you can be called by name, a place where you can be looked after by someone who genuinely wants to see you have a good time — a place where you can be pampered," she said.

The typical kitten, Miss McLean said, "enjoys her work, wants to be of service, wants to cheer people up and make them happy".

To provide the excellence of service her dining room expects, a Kitten must be "good looking, a good worker, have faultless makeup and uniform and a big smile."

Members of the Kitten Club receive a membership credit card and a monthly Kitten Bulletin. Their "Kittens" are probably the best prepared in the district — they have the advantage of a Loyalist College training course in serving the dining public.

Then and Now

Looking at the plans for the Four Seasons hotel, it is clear that this project is going to be a handsome start to improving the appearance of Belleville's waterfront. Landscaping and the provision of tennis courts will give his area east of Zwick's Island an entirely new and attractive appearance.

The hotel's dual purpose as a training centre for Bell Canada staff for nine months of each year and a summer resort for vacationers gives it a utilitarian as well as aesthetic aspect that is in keeping with the times. It will mean jobs in pleasant surroundings for Belleville's growing population.

At the same time there are shades of the past in the view of the hotel and Bay of Quinte beyond, as presented in the artist's impression published in The Intelligencer recently. For across the bay is Massassaga and the park area of an earlier time.

For the employees of Bell Canada who will stay there, as well as vacationers, it would be interesting if some of the history of Belleville in an earlier day were recalled, say in a plaque in the lobby — because they will be looking out on the waters which the steamers Brockville and Annie Lake plied en route to the popular picnic ground at Massassaga.

There was the Hero which operated daily between Belleville and Kingston, and the paddle-wheeler Veruna, also a familiar sight on the bay; not to mention the other vessels which provided passenger services to Lake Ontario communities.

A March 28, 1859 advertisement for sailings of the Moira, under Captain Thomas McIntosh, for example, intimated that the vessel would commence her regular trips between Belleville and Oswego on Monday April 4 at 1 p.m., "calling at Mill Point, Picton, and Stone Mills, and be in Oswego in time for the morning cars for New York and Buffalo.

"Returning, will leave Oswego for Belleville, touching at the above-mentioned places, on Wednesday evenings, at 8 o'clock, or immediately after the arrival of the Cars from the East. For freight or passage apply to the Captain on board. Cabin passage, including one meal, from Belleville, $3; from Mill Point, $2.50; Picton and Stone Mills, $2.

And a final note from the ad: "Every attention will be given to the conveying of livestock and merchandise, between the above ports."

Ah yes, those were the days. Anyone for a moonlight cruise?

Ski Queen

Canada has another ski queen in Betsy Clifford, at 16 the youngest competitor ever to win a gold medal at a world ski championship or in Olympic ski competition.

Miss Clifford's win in the Alpine championships in Italy was all the more remarkable considering she was only 14th in the International Ski Federation standings, and was well back, at 8th place, in the women's slalom Friday.

Skiing is a sport in which Canadian women have a tradition of distinguished performances, Miss Clifford joining such greats as Nancy Greene, Anne Heggtveit and Lucille Wheeler. And let's not forget Laurie Kreiner, of Timmins, who is only 15 and was second best Canadian in the Alpine event. She was 19th overall, but who knows, she may be next to win a gold medal.

But it is the universality of the sport which makes it one of the world's most interesting. The career of Canada's Rod Hebron is a case in point. We don't know what Hebron does for a living — he has been described in reports from Italy as a 27-year-old Vancouver student — but he has been a figure in international skiing for more than a decade, ever since joining Canada's national team in 1959.

As well as being a frequent performer in Europe. Hebron has competed in Chile and last year he trained in Australia during the winter season there. In Italy he was out of luck — he broke a leg in practice for the downhill race. It was one setback of many the Canadian has suffered in his career on the slopes — but then skiing is one of the most demanding of sports.

Eight Writers...Ten Secretaries

PM Has Staff of 18 to Reply to Citizens' Letters

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — By now, with Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition pounding him for preaching public economy and practising private extravagance, just about everyone should know that Pierre Elliott Trudeau has by far the largest-ever personal prime ministerial staff.

Over there in the East Block he has 219 people working for him, 53 at $15,000 to a top $35,000.

But not everyone — in fact, very few: how about you — knows that 18 in this still-expanding establishment in the Prime Minister's office do nothing but write letters.

Write them in reply to anyone and everyone who writes to the PM.

"Every missive," reports Henry Alan Lawless, chief of the "we-get-letters department," and they come in by the thousands, "rates a reply."

Churning them out are eight professional writers, the composers of this vast outpouring of correspondence, and 10 secretaries who spin them through a bank of electric typewriters.

Sometimes, such a tide of correspondence floods in on one particular subject, a standard "position paper" on the question — always controversial, of course — is prepared.

Then duplicated by the thousands if necessary — and necessary it can not - infrequently be.

Only the "position paper," though, gets the mass production treatment.

For with each copy of it to each individual who has written to the PM on the subject, a "Dear Mr." — (type in the name as required) — letter is enclosed.

It gets the personal touch, too.

It can begin, after the "Dear Mr. So-and-So," like this:

"The Prime Minister has asked me to reply to your letter in which you express your concern" — (type in whatever the matter at issue might be.)

Then it goes on from there, as might be expected, putting the best face, from the Prime Minister's point of view, on the subject of contention.

You have to look closely, or you could conclude, in the excitement of opening a letter from the Prime Minister's office — (something to keep and show dear old Aunt Nelly who, bless her, thinks he is such a dear) — that it was written especially for and to you.

It may take time. As long as eight months. Or perhaps even longer. But answered every letter to the PM must and will be. Eventually.

Just got one — by some still unexplained error — only the other day, setting the record straight that there had been no disrespect in not flying the flag at half-staff everywhere in Canada the day of the funeral of Lord Alexander of Tunis, former Governor General of Canada.

The service for Lord Alexander, in the church of his fathers, had been held last June 24.

The flag scarcely could have been lowered in Quebec that day, the letter covering the "position paper" on the controversy explained, because June 24 is French-Canada's greatest festival, the honoring of St. Jean Baptiste.

So to have lowered it everywhere else in Canada, and not in Quebec, "might leave the impression that French-Canadians were less respectful of Lord Alexander than were other citizens in this country," went on the letter, "which patently is not the case."

(There was a French-English trade-off of ceremonies some years back when, in exchange for the proclaiming of St. Jean Baptiste Day as a government holiday, Remembrance Day was similarly proclaimed.)

"The several and many acts by which affection and respect by Canadians and the Government for Lord Alexander were shown," concluded the letter, "are described in the attached."

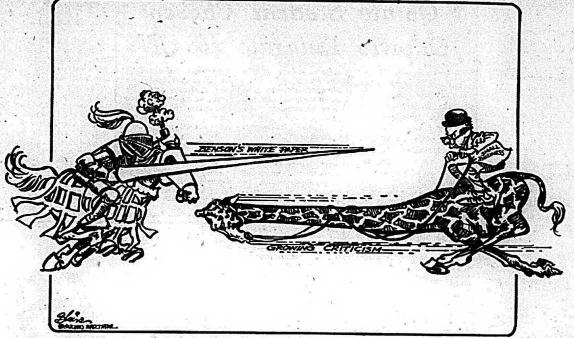
The "attached" was a two-page "position paper" duplicated countless times to accompany countless letters, listing 12 various ways in which Lord Alexander's memory was honored.

It was an impressive catalogue including, as it did, the disclosure that flags had been lowered on all Canadian Government establishments everywhere in the United Kingdom, if not anywhere in Canada.

But back to the "we-get-letters" department in the Prime Minister's office.

Biggest single letter-answering job so far to date has been the replying to more than 5,000 retired civil servants and Armed Forces pensioners who had been questioning their portion of and participation in the Prime Minister's promised "Just Society."

They got action, or at least the promise of action, so do not say it does not sometimes pay to write to your friendly neighborhood Prime Minister, even if he personally does not read it, and write and sign the assembly-line reply.



Quebec Gets Its First Fire Code

Montreal Gazette

The Province of Quebec is about to get its first fire code. The code will establish standards of fire prevention equipment in evey kind of building, from factories to flats. The figures for the last year are enough to make the code a real and immediate necessity: During 1969, there were 21,500 fires in the province, causing 172 deaths and almost $50 million in damage;

The application of the code will take some time, a lot of checking and a lot of money. But Mr. F.-X Perrault, the man who has directed the writing of it, has this information to offer in the meantime:

Last year, more than 8,600 fires were caused by careless smokers; faulty electrical appliances 1,700 fires; bad wiring 1,500 fires; the explosion of hot grease, 2,000 fires.

The need for a code and the need for it to be enforced have been illustrated, tragically, in recent weeks. There was the shocking revelation that 67 mentally and physically retarded children are accommodated in a privately-run shelter in Laval which has been described as a fire trap. A report to the Quebec Health Department said that in the event of a fire, 90 per cent of the children would perish.

A report with a statement like that demands urgent attention. The shock is not lessened by the news that the situation came to the city's notice in an indirect manner. Municipal inspectors descended upon the home last month when its owner applied to the city for a fire alarm linking the building to the police and fire stations.

It is not so many weeks ago that the tragedy of Notre-Dame-du - Lac occurred. The provincial government clearly faces a pressing duty to ensure that helpless people, young or old, are housed in places where they can be given away reasonable protection in an emergency.

Albert College opened friendly doors to the Belleville public on Saturday when the faculty and students extended a cordial invitation to their friends to take part in a tour of inspection of the buildings. The invitation met with eager response from the citizens and from two o'clock i. the afternoon groups were escorted through the college. A welcome was extended to each arrival by the principal, Dr. Bert Howard, the Dean Dr. T. C. McCutcheon and students Tom Wollet, Bus Donnan, Ev. Munro and Edith Joynt. At present 110 students are registered at the college, 90 of these being in residence. The 19 girls enrolled this year live at Manor House some distance from the College itself.

A Bad Deal For McGivney Junction

Fredericton Gleaner

At McGivney Junction, 35 miles north of Fredericton, a very valuable piece of public property has stood idle for some months, following its abandonment as an ordnance depot by the National Defence Department, a function it served since the Second World War.

The site includes a large acreage of cleared and wooded land and an extensive array of buildings, including residences, service structures and a large group of well-built sheds in which the ammunition formerly was stored. A main highway road passes the site, which is also adjacent to a rail junction from which a spur extends into the actual property.

The hope of residents of Northern York County has been that an industrial undertaking probably utilizing wood products would be located at McGivney. Late in the year, however, there were informations of federal-provincial negotiations for the establishment of some type of correctional or rehabilitation institution there.

Latest reports from provincial government sources are that talks on the matter are "progressing."

Meanwhile, McGivney still presents the picture of a valuable piece of public property, a potential major asset, sitting idle and very probably deteriorating in the process.

Industrial...Impersonal

Ontario—Where the Action and the Jobs Are

Ontario regards itself as the heartland of Canada but, in some views, the province is lacking in regional identity. This is one of the findings of Joseph MacSween of the Montreal staff of The Canadian Press in this first of a series of articles based on an outsider's view of Ontario attitudes to Confederation.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ontario tends to see Canada the way King Louis XIV of France saw his country: "L'etat, c'est moi"—I am the state.

"For Ontario, Canada is Ontario writ large," said historian Blair Neatby, 44, transplanted to Ontario after a boyhood on the prairies.

The Canadian elsewhere—whether on the squid-jiggin' grounds or in the far-off land of the Sasquatch—is rich in provincial sentiment, regional nationalism.

What of the Ontarian?

"Alone among the provinces, Ontario has little provincial or regional identity of that kind," said Christopher Young, editor of the Ottawa Citizen, another expatriate of Western Canada.

He feels that "New Ontarians"—and they are legion—may or may not retain their root sentiments, but they do not generally develop new ones specifically in relation to Ontario, whether they come from abroad or from other parts of Canada.

"I like to think of Canada as one country and I don't like to break it down to provinces or regions or languages," said Toronto businessman Elio Madonia, who came from Italy in 1950.

Northern Ontarians do express particular loyalty to their vast and starkly beautiful region, but the sentiment was succinctly summed up by R. C. Willey, a lumber company chemist in Espanola:

"I've never heard anyone in Ontario, north or south, boost the province the way a fellow from B.C. talks about B.C. I'd probably faint if I did."

Quebec-born Rev. Roger Guindon, rector of University of Ottawa, said Quebecois have a deeper attachment to the Quebec soil than their French-speaking brothers in Ontario have for theirs.

"Franco-Ontarians, I think, never felt enamored or enthused about the Ontario soil as such even though they would not want to go back to Quebec," said Dr. Guindon.

"I'll try this idea just for size: Ontario has been populated by so many people who came here not particularly to create a culture but to earn a living.

In the view of Toronto artist Harold Town, lack of regionalism makes Ontarians more "impersonal," in the style of New Yorkers.

A background picture of Ontario's attitudes was sketched by Dr. Neatby, biographer of the late prime minister Mackenzie King and professor of Canadian history at Ottawa's Carleton University.

"I think one of the differences between Ontario and the others is that Ontarians never seem to have the same regional bias because Ontario more than any other province has staked its future on the creation of Canada.

"For Ontario, Canada is Ontario writ large. It's Ontario's market. The whole expansion west, for example, and even Confederation, was seen by many Ontarians simply as the expansion of Ontario.

"When Ontario people talk about the interests of Canada, quite often they're talking about the interests of Ontario, assuming they are Canadian interests.

"The other regions don't have this blithe assumption that Canada is their region writ large."

Ontario merely happened to be the logical place for an industrial base, having regard to transportation routes and geography.

"I think Ontario people—many of them—take it for granted that this was providential and divinely inspired. That makes it pretty irritating to the prairie people."

Phosphate Ban Said Too Slow

"knowing it's going to cause more pollution."

Government acted quickly and decisively in recently banning DDT, he recalled.

"To my mind there's no reason why we shouldn't have done the same thing with phosphates."

During the last session of the Legislature, said Dr. Potter, he discussed the situation with Ontario Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr.

At that time, the MPP added he "gathered the impression" the minister was moving toward a total ban on phosphate detergents by the end of the year.

"I tried to convince him that even 12 months was a hell of a long time to wait," said Dr. Potter.

"The residents of Ontario realize pollution is a great big problem and they're anxious to have somebody step in and do something."

(In Toronto last night Mr. Kerr welcomed the federal announcement. Detergents supply about 45 per cent of the phosphate pollution in the Great Lakes, he said).

Already, said Dr. Potter, many housewives were reacting to the situation and switching from detergents to laundry soap.

"I don't think there's any doubt about this. Housewives are always very concerned about anything that's going to affect their children. And when experts start saying we have only 20 years left with our environment they're going to do something.

However, Dr. Potter agreed the ban was a "step in the right direction" — particularly for the Bay of Quinte.

Algae — an underwater growth which feeds on phosphates — is an annual problem in the bay — which supplies Belleville's domestic water needs.

"There's no question that this has been one of our biggest (pollution) problems locally," said Dr. Potter. "It's the phosphates in the bay that cause all the algae."

"It's a small step in the right direction," the MPP reiterated. "I'd like to see them smarten the pace up a bit. Every little bit helps."

Mayor Russell Scott, who was emphatic about pollution control of the Bay as a new city hall administration took office in January, called the federal proposals an "excellent move."

The public, he said, now was vitally concerned about pollution and would wholeheartedly back any relief measures.

"I think it's a step in the right direction in over-all pollution control."

Belleville for years has known the effects of explosive algae growth.

The growth is at its height in summer months and is blamed for helping deteriorate the taste of city water — filtered from the Bay.

City utilities general manager E. L. Burnham agreed today reduction of detergent phosphates would help solve part of the algae problem.

However, he noted, the Bay also is a runoff point for much phosphate - bearing fertilizer used on district farms.

Washing detergents now are the biggest source of phosphates which are not broken down by normal sewage treatment plants.

For urban centres — including Belleville — this is a crux of the issue.

The city now is serviced by a primary-treatment sewage disposal plant of three-million-gallon capacity operated by the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Tenders already have been opened in Toronto for an expansion project that should boost the plant's capacity to nearly 9,000,000 gallons and provide secondary treatment.

This will remove "much better than 90 per cent" of foreign content, plant superintendent Don Little estimated.

Effluent from the new plant which may be ready in a year could be purer than the water in the Bay.

Man Hit At Corner

A city man is in Belleville General Hospital this morning after being struck by a car last night at the intersection of Moira Street East and St. Charles Street.

In hospital is Ronald Angus Langabeer, 26, of Murney Street who with Nancy Schwager, 18, of East Moira Street was struck by a vehicle driven by James Beaudrie, 52, of Howard Street.

Deputy Chief Harold Reid explained that at 11:05 p.m. Miss Schwager was eastbound on Moira Street and attempted to turn north on St. Charles Street. In so doing her car skidded and collided with a tree.

Mr. Langabeer, who was also at the scene with Miss Schwager, then was struck by a second car driven by Mr. Beaudrie which was making the same turn.

Both were taken to hospital, but Miss Schwager was treated and released with bruises and a sprained right ankle.

Mr. Langabeer sustained torn ligaments and injuries to his right leg.

Cy Smith Heads Credit Unions

Four three - year directors were elected to the 10 - man board of directors of the Quinte Chapter of Credit Unions at last night's annual meeting in Belleville. They were Cy Smith, treasurer of the Trenton Federal Credit Union; Shelbourne Sharpe, Frankford and District Credit Union; Roly Proux of Trenton Federal and Mrs. Phyllis Cherry, C.N. Credit Union. The elections were conducted by Douglas Pettigrew of Trenton.

Elected to the supervisory committee were Mike Knoll, C.N. Employees' Credit Union, Belleville and Bud Chipps of Norlecto.

A discussion of resolutions to be presented at the Ontario Credit Union League annual meeting in Ottawa, March 5, 6 and 7 was held.

The fifteen representatives of Quinte area credit unions voted to hold four joint dinner meetings a year.

CFB Has Paced Service Growth

Transport Squadron; 424 Transport and Reserve Squadron, 4 (Transport) Operational Training Unit; 4 Flight Technical Training Unit; and 2 Air Movements Unit. To the south lies the administrative and support services too numerous to mention.

For nearly 30 years CFB Trenton has been a landmark in this part of southern Ontario. Although not the oldest armed forces base (a training camp for the Royal Flying Corps was set up at Deseronto in January 1917), its growth and importance have paced the growth of Canada's flying service.

Conceived in the minds of the military in 1928, born by an Order of Council in 1929, CFB Trenton received its baptismal certificate in the form of a cornerstone in 1934. Lord Bessborough, then Canada's Governor-General, laid trowel to mortar and cemented in place a stone on which the motto Per Ardua ad Rem was cut in enduring granite. Literally translated, the romantic Latin turns into descriptive Through Adversity the Goal.

Either by design or accident the motto was indicative of the atmosphere in which early construction was begun. Following the shattering economic slump of 1929, the uncertainties of the 30s resulted in reductions of government spending and the military was the first to feel the pinch.

Much of the original building was done by relief labor; men working for 20 cents a day and their board and lodging. Though the pay was low the standard of workmanship was not, as anyone who has had occasion to work on these solidly-built stone, steel and concrete buildings will testify.

CFB Trenton's location was selected with care from a total of 25 sites put forward for consideration. This one was picked "due to its natural advantages as a landplane and seaplane station, moderate climate, and its proximity to the industrial and populous centres of Canada. . ."

The considerations listed in the 1928 decision were all important. The new station was to inherit the landplane training and technical instruction then given at Camp Borden and the flying boat and seaplane training located at Rockcliffe and Jericho Beach.

Construction of the new station began in 1930 on 948 acres, including Morton's (now called Baker's) island. By September 1931 sufficient progress had been made to begin the transfer of training activities from Camp Borden.

The first units to move to the new "training base" were fighter and army co-operation flights. On Aug. 31, 1931, RCAF Station Trenton, under the command of Flight Lieutenant J. T. O'Brien-Saint, came into being. About two months later Squadron Leader H. W. Hewson assumed command.

The aircraft complement at CFB Trenton immediately preceding World War II was a varied one indeed: four Avro Atlases, three Fairchild landplanes, two Fairchild 71 seaplanes, one Super 71, two Fairchild 51s, 22 Fleets, seven Tiger Moths, three Norsemen, two Shark seaplanes, two Vancouver flying boats, three Vedette flying boats and six Wapite fighter aircraft.

Today, the aircraft at the base consist of 12 Yukons, three Otters, one H21B helicopter, seven Caribou and seven Dakotas. Three others that are based here, one Caribou and two Dakotas, are in service at other bases.

A change in this number of aircraft was announced recently. The 12 Yukons will be phased out over the next year and will be replaced by four Boeing 707 jet aircraft.

Base Commander Colonel H. A. Carswell, CD, was born in Trenton and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Carswell of 60 Heber Street, Trenton. His wife, Jeanne, is a native of Carrying Place and Consecon, Ontario.

Commander of Air Transport Command is Major - General A. Chester Hull.

Periodically, open-house is held at CFB Trenton, and residents of the Quinte area are encouraged to visit the base and learn first-hand what is taking place there.

Also in the township is the Oak Hills Flying Club.

Situated near Oak Lake in the hills north of Belleville just off Highway 33, the club has a membership of 70. It came into existence in 1964 with a small clubhouse and 1,500 feet of turf runway. At that time, there was one aircraft and 10 members. Today, the club owns two aircraft, a 150 Cessna and a 172 Sky Hawk. Three other planes are owned privately by members.

President Hadley Richardson states the club now has an east-west turf runway of 2,200 feet, 1,500 feet of which is licenced. There is also a north-south unlicenced turf runway of 1,800 feet.

Many licenced pilots have been trained at the club. At present, there are 15 people undergoing training, eight of whom are expected to receive their licences by mid-June this year.

Mr. Richardson said the club is in operation seven days of the week and stressed that the club is not a private one. "Open house is held each weekend for anyone wishing to visit the facilities here," he said.

One of the social events of the year will be the annual Fly-In and Drive-In breakfast June 21. Last year, 85 planes were there for breakfast.

In the past CFB Trenton has used the airfield as an emergency field between Toronto and Ottawa.

Time Gives Its Views

No Danger in Criticism but Any Government Rules Unhealthy

OTTAWA (CP) — Time magazine told the special Senate committee on mass media today it would regard any government attempt to define how a particular publication should operate as "most unhealthy."

Every publication should have complete freedom to decide its own aims and methods, Time International of Canada Ltd., Montreal, said in a submission prepared in advance of an appearance today before the committee.

Time Canada, which has figured both in complaints to the committee about competition from U.S.-owned publications and statements that its presence helps Canadian magazines, told the senators it fulfills a unique role as Canada's only nationally-distributed, weekly news magazine.

It said Time policy is to maintain high editorial standards, thereby attracting readers who are well-educated and well-off, who in turn draw advertisers willing to pay rates that make the magazine profitable. Its successful policy implicitly included "a powerful commitment to 'responsibility'."

Time's submission, presented by managing director Stephen S. LaRue of Toronto and editor John M. Scott of Montreal, said it sees no danger in criticism or investigation of the press, even by government.

"But the company would view as most unhealthy any situation in which investigation and criticism led to government efforts to define the responsibilities of particular publications.

"We believe that each publication should be entirely free to define its own area of interest, to determine the most appropriate way to cover that area, to determine what kind of staff and what editorial standards best suit its own over-all strategy and sense of responsibility."

Time Canada's submission followed testimony to the committee from some publishers that a five-year-old Canadian tax law encourages alleged unfair competition from Time and Reader's Digest, which also publishes a Canadian edition.

The income-tax amendment rules out the use of costs for such advertising in non-Canadian publications as a tax-deductible business expense. Time and Reader's Digest were exempted from the regulation.

Several publishers—including Toronto Star president Beland H. Honderich and, last week, James A. Daly, vice-chairman of Southam Business Publications Ltd.—have suggested to the Senate committee that exemption from the protective tax measure be withdrawn for advertising in Time and Reader's Digest.

Critics argue that the two magazines have an unfair competitive advantage, with unrestricted access to Canadian advertising revenue while production costs are relatively low because the bulk of editorial material is imported from parent U.S. editions.

However, both Saturday Night magazine and Maclean-Hunter Ltd. of Toronto have said they would not recommend withdrawal of special tax treatment for advertising in Time and Reader's Digest.

Ronald A. McEachern, vice-president in charge of Maclean's and Chatelaine magazines, told the committee such a demand would be politically unrealistic. He said Time's original exemption from the tax law was linked with the Canadian government's concurrent desire to arrange an automotive trade agreement with the United States.

Canadian and U.S. officials currently are engaged in negotiations about the future of the auto trade pact, which came into force in 1965.

Mr. McEachern also said that Maclean's magazine probably would be hit with a loss of U.S.-inspired advertising for a time if the Canadian government withdrew tax-law exemption for Time magazine advertising.

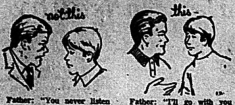
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Father: "You never listen to me. Now look at the mess you're in. I told you not to run around with that gang of hoodlums — but no, you couldn't take my advice."

Father: "I'll go with you and talk to the authorities about the damage your gang did. We'll have to figure out some way you can earn money to help pay for it."

Even if it's true, some things need not be said — and one is "I told you so." Saying it only breeds hostility, while understanding and concrete help are likely to improve the parent-child relationship.

Ottawa and Surrounding Area Gets New Hospital

Children's Hospital Will Emphasize Bilingualism

OTTAWA (CP) — A new children's hospital still at the drawing-board stage will be one of the most advanced in the world when it is completed, its planning and development director says.

The Eastern Ontario Children's Hospital, to be located here, will be the eighth hospital in Canada devoted solely to children. John Barrett, the planning director, says it will have an emphasis on bilingualism.

This, he says, is simply common sense: Little children need to be able to communicate in their own language in the strange and frightening world of a hospital.

The area to be served by the hospital—nearby regions of eastern Ontario and western Quebec — has a large French-speaking population. And since the hospital will serve a substantial Italian ethnic group as well, Mr. Barrett hopes to have some of the 1,000 hospital staff members proficient in that language too.

While emphasizing bilingualism, the hospital will employ unilingual persons — either French or English - speaking—where it is necessary in the hospital's best interests. Doctors will be selected on the basis of professional skill, although some are already studying their second language.

The $21,000,000 hospital, scheduled to be started in the fall of 1971 and completed two years later, will be located on a 33-acre site adjacent to the National Defence Medical Centre, a 315-bed hospital for the armed forces. The two hospitals will share a heating plant.

Two of the most important facilities for patient care will be the hospital's emergency department, which will treat an estimated 20,000 children annually, and the more than 20 out-patient clinics which will initially serve nearly 40,000 children a year.

The in-patient facilities will allow 30 or so doctors on full-time staff, many of them specialists in the already specialized field of pediatrics, to care for about 15,000 hospitalized children every year.

And everything at the hospital—from adults' attitudes to surgical instruments to splints and meals—will be geared to meet children's needs.

There will be no rigid rules about visiting hours and a parent may be allowed to stay overnight at the hospital to be near a critically-ill child.

Hospital planners are hoping to ease the atmosphere, too, with ample play areas. Extensive use of glass windows inside as well as outside the building will provide an open atmosphere.

"We're trying desperately to build it to the world of the child so that it won't be another prim and proper institutional building," Mr. Barrett said.

Children's visits to the out-patient clinics will be put on an appointment basis with the aid of a computer. Capacious waiting rooms will be supplied, complete with playthings for amusement of the patients' little brothers and sisters who may have to accompany Mom.

The hospital will be associated with the University of Ottawa. Of its 319 beds, 190 will be used for teaching purposes as well as regular care of patients.

Among the physicians with highly specialized skills will be a neonatologist—one of about five such doctors in Canada specializing in the care of the new-born.

Couple Wed for 53 Years

TWEED — A couple who chose Valentine's Day as their wedding date in 1917, celebrated 53 years of happily married life on the past weekend. Morley Holmes of Shanly in Grenville County and the former Dorothy Locke of Cardinal exchanged marriage vows on that date.

In Canada's centennial year, their half century of life together was celebrated with "Open House" for a large number of neighbors, friends and relatives. Members of their family arranged a smaller party for this year as a pleasant surprise for their parents.

Their son, Glenn with his wife entertained his parents at a dinner party in Kingston and on returning to their home in Sydenham found it filled with other members of their family and friends.

The family group includes Glenn of Colborne, Jack of Belleville and Mrs. Shirley McCallum of Kingston. They have 12 grandchildren. Mr. Holmes is widely know and highly regarded throughout Eastern Ontario as an authority in the dairy industry, in which he had an active career for over 50 years.

As a boy he and his brother, the late A. E. Holmes of Napanee, learned the art of cheesemaking from their father the late William Holmes at Shanly, near Spencerville in Grenville County. In 1920, when the manufacturing of concentrated milk products was in its early stages in Eastern Ontario the Holmes family moved to Napanee where they all qualified for leading positions in the new Farmers' Dairy branch.

After several promotions, Mr. Holmes in 1928, began a field service career that culminated in 38 years of distinguished and continuous service until his official retirement, in October of 1966.

During 12 years of this time he also served as manager of the same dairy's branch in Sydenham.

Since moving to Sydenham from Napanee 26 years ago, he has become well - known for his active interest in community affairs. When the Board of Trade was organized in 1946, Mr. Holmes was honored by being elected its first prseident. Six years ago he was again chosen to head the board for a further two-year term.

An ardent sportsman and horse fancier, he is now enjoying his golden years, deer hunting each autumn, and with his hobby of raising Welsh ponies.

Conversational French

Progress Report Given at Meeting

MARMORA — A special demonstration showing the progress of pupils of Sacred Heart School, Marmora, in the technique of learning conversational French, was given by Miss Marie Tardiff and her pupils from each grade, at CPTA meeting Monday. The fifty parents in attendance were favorably impressed with the skill and ease with which the students took part in the French skits, songs and school lessons. French has been a part of the curriculum three half-days each week since Sept. at Sacred Heart School. Miss Tardiff was introduced by program convener, Mrs. Michael Maloney, and thanked for her important presentation by CPTA president, Mrs. Bill Meehan, Jr. During scenery changes in the program, Miss Mariette Nesseth entertained with piano selections.

Lunch was served immediately after the program, and a brief business meeting resulted in decisions to hold a potluck luncheon on Friday, Feb. 27 and a St. Patrick's dance in March. Attendance banner was won by Mrs. Jim Terrion's class.

Principal, Mrs. E. P. McNamara, announced a school community dialogue in Marmora on Monday, March 9, sponsored by Mr. C. G. Mersereau, supervisor of program and professional development and Mr. F. B. Allore, superintendent. All parents and ratepayers are invited to hear the panel discussions by a special committee prepared to answer questions on the over-all development of all aspects of the school program.

Church Groups

ST. COLUMBA WOMEN

The Presbyterian women of St. Columba Church met on Monday evening in the church hall. Mrs. G. Devolin led the worship service with the singing of the new theme song for the year. Mrs. M. McLaughlin, moderator for the evening's panel discussion, introduced the special guests, Miss Margaret Townsend, Salvation Army welfare worker; Mrs. Edith Fast, United Community Services and Peter Nicholas, supervisor of Family Services. As a result of the discussion that followed, the members were made fully aware of the problems and hardships which confront welfare families in Belleville and the positive steps that can be taken to assist; first by our own attitude towards underprivileged people and by an organized program to help the services.

The business meeting followed and members were reminded to bring gifts in March for the "Shower for Armagh". A gift to the board of management was also approved. It was announced that the session has asked Rev. S. Gentle to lead a discussion on the Lamp Report at the March meeting.

Mrs. S. Gentle gave the closing benediction after which a dainty Valentine's lunch was enjoyed by all.

Misleading Advice On Y Chromosome

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In a recent column you referred to an extra Y chromosome and its relationship to deviant behavior. Many of us who have an interest in criminal and deviant behavior have some reservations about this theory. While reserving final judgment, we tend to see the concept of such behavior as related to the XYY chromosome as being oversimplistic.

ANN LANDERS

I am enclosing a piece from a publication havior as related to the XYY chromosome as put out by the New York Academy of Sciences. — D.A.N. (M.D., Menninger Clinic.)

DEAR DR. N.: Thank you for your letter and for the article. And now a message to Dr. Josh Lederberg, Nobel prize winning geneticist:

Dear Dr. Lederberg: Where are you now that I need you? Obviously, I accepted as fact a theory about which there seems to be some question. Not only am I in Dutch with the scientists, but the parents of Mongoloid children are unhappy with me also. The following letter is from Fort Lauderdale:

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your recent column, pertaining to the extra Y chromosome manifesting itself in compulsive and out-of-control behavior could be misleading. It was felt by several parents of Mongoloid children that you had done them an injustice. These children have the gene abnormally described as the extra Y chromosome. The World Book Encyclopedia describes Mongoloid children as "quiet, good-natured and affectionate." Kindly clear up the misconception. — R.C.D. BROWARD COUNTY ASSN. FOR RETARDED CHILDREN.

From now on, Dr. Ledergerg, I will turn over to you all questions pertaining to genetics. In return, I promise to handle all your mail dealing with human relations. Sincerely — Ann Landers.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 16-year-old girl with a problem. It's the guys I go to school with. They are all 16 or older and they act like little kids. I mean their manners are rotten. They treat girls as if they were guys.

When the school bus stops, they push the girls out of the way and try to get on first. Yesterday I thought I'd give one of the boys a gentle reminder so I stepped ahead of him. He shoved me out of line and yelled, "Hey, I was here before you were!" These clowns need a blasting and you're the perfect one to deliver it. They all read your column. In fact, it's the main topic on the bus. Please? — LADY.

DEAR LADY: The clowns don't need a blasting. What they need is a little time to grow up. One of the first signs of maturity is when a guy discovers that a girl is not just a soft boy. He then acknowledges his discovery by treating her like a young lady. He suddenly says "please" and "thank you." He opens doors and lets her go ahead. Sounds like a dream? Be patient, honey. It'll happen. Maybe next year.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Mary's Two Custard Recipes

By MARY MOORE

One of my relatives was recovering from the flu and had no appetite for anything but baked custards because they "go down so easily."

Another reason for choosing custards as my subject today was a request from a reader for low-calorie desserts.

So I tested and tasted two variations — one for the convalescent and one for the reducer.

BAKED CUSTARDS

2 cups hot milk
¼ cup sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla
3 large eggs beaten lightly
Maple syrup or black currant jelly (optional — see below)

In a small pot heat together the milk, sugar and salt until steaming. Pour slowly over the lightly beaten eggs stirring, add vanilla. (If desired spoon 1 tsp. maple syrup or black currant jelly into bottom of six custard cups.) Apportion custard mixture into bottom of custard cups evenly or into one medium-sized buttered baking dish. Stand custards in pan of hot water and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 1 hr. Serve warm or chilled.

COFFEE CUSTARD

NOTE: These custards have fewer calories than Baked Custards above.

1 cup strong coffee (or 4 tsps instant coffee dissolved in 1 cup boiling water)
1 cup 2 percent milk
¼ cup sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
3 large eggs beaten lightly

In a small pot heat together the coffee, milk, sugar and salt until steaming (not boiling). Slowly pour over beaten eggs, stirring until blended. Pour into six buttered individual custard cups (or one buttered medium sized baking dish) and bake, standing in pan of hot water at 325 deg. Fahr. 1 hr.

NOTE: If these custards are made for invalids or reducers those that are left over may be stored, covered with Saran, for two or three days.

'Go Ahead, Stick Your Neck Out,' Advises Doris

By DORIS CLARK

"Consider the turtle — he doesn't make any progress unless he sticks his neck out!"

Isn't it true? Just as long as we stay clammed up in our own little shell and don't try anything, we won't make any mistakes. But we won't have any fun either.

We may be inclined to criticize and blame the fellow who dashes about, keeping up with a too-full schedule, and makes a slip or drops a stitch, or even gets involved in some kind of an accident.

On such days, any of us are likely to declare, "We should have stood home in bed!"

When we do retreat or withdraw for fear of accident or criticism, what's the percentage? Exactly zero — in accomplishing our part of the world's work.

Moral: Go ahead, stick your neck out.

Dear Doris: My problem is our postmaster. Do people have to put up with an ignorant, ill-mannered, rude postmaster? He has been so insulting to my children that they refuse to go to the post office. He always finds fault in the way I've addressed the letters or fixed up the parcels.

The other day I had to register two letters and buy stamps which totalled $3.20. I gave him a $20 bill and he proceeded to tell me he didn't have to take the bill, that he wasn't there to make change, that I should have the right change and that the post office didn't need our business; that we needed the post office but they didn't need us.

I have always understood that the monies made in the post office paid the postmaster, mailmen, etc., so why don't they need us?

DORIS CLARK

Many other people have complained about him, but do not know whom to contact. — Disappointed In Our Public Servants.

Dear Disappointed: There are times when serving the public tries the patience of a saint. But bullying little ones and telling off cash customers are pretty un-civil ways for a civil servant to act.

Your recourse is the District Director, Post Office, in your area or province. I'm told you'll get results.

• • •

Dear Doris: I sincerely thank you for The Telegram. It brought back to me many memories of my days as telegraph operator starting back in 1908.

I must say the poem must have been written by another operator who had experienced the feeling of guilt for sending so much sorrow to so many homes.

I know I did. — A.C.H.

Dear A.C.H.: Oh dear! Surely there were cheery messages, sometimes? Like Happy Birthday or Am-Sending-Money-For-Graduation Gift?

Rebirth of CYC Will Bring Great Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Rebirth of the Company of Young Canadians came closer, or loomed, as critics might say, Wednesday as the Commons passed a bill that all but destroys the 1966 creation.

Rene Matte (Creditiste — Champlain) predicted that CYC 1970 will be no better than its controversial predecessor. Mr. Matte said it will continue to tread on provincial and municipal toes and argued for destruction of the federal agency altogether.

The old company has been in the hands of comptroller Max Mendelsohn since December, after a Commons inquiry found the free-wheeling CYC to be chaotic financially, mixed up administratively, and bordering on subversion in some of its aggressive projects.

The CYC council, composed of 10 members elected by volunteers and five appointed by government, has all but broken up since the Mendelsohn trusteeship and introduction of the bill to reorganize the company.

The bill provides for a council of seven to nine members, all appointed by cabinet.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier told MPs he doesn't intend to appoint any field volunteers to the new council to avoid the conflicts of interest alleged in the old one.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) and Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) moved amendments to give volunteers a minority position on the council.

Mr. McCleave said he feels the CYC should be disbanded and a new start made. However, if the government intended to continue the experiment, field volunteers should have a voice in its direction.

"Volunteers are the guts of the CYC," Mr. McCleave said, adding that if he could lop 25 or 30 years off his age, he would become one.

His amendment was defeated 98 to 72, as was a similar one by Mr. Rose. His amendment to allow CYC volunteers to work overseas was defeated 141 to 17.

The bill, which now must pass the Senate, will turn the company into a Crown corporation, more accountable for its $1,900,000 budget and tighter administratively.

Neither Government Nor Montreal Residents Will Bow to Violence This Year--Kierans

OTTAWA (CP) — With opposition demands for his resignation, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans told the Commons in a special debate Wednesday that neither the federal government nor the people of Montreal will submit to union violence in the city's postal slowdown.

In the past, Mr. Kierans said, the union of truck drivers who pick up and deliver bundles of mail have had Montreal postal service by the throat. "But this year, neither the government nor the people of Montreal are going to crack."

The minister accused a small gang within the union of using violence as a form of blackmail. He listed 568 of 1,800 Montreal mailboxes damaged or clogged with cement and glue, trucks blocked and deliveries to postal stations cut drastically.

The effect of union tactics in the last five years has been to drive up costs 70 per cent in Montreal compared with 33 per cent for similar services in Toronto, Mr. Kierans said.

It has also meant employment of more than 100 unnecessary drivers, he added, but now the union has driven the contractor out of the business and it can no longer find an employer.

Mr. Kierans's resignation was called for earlier in the evening by Georges Valade (PC—Montreal Ste. Marie) who claimed he had permitted a dispute with the Confederation of National Trade Unions to develop into a major crisis.

The dispute involves 455 employees of G. Lapalme Inc. whose contract with the post office expires Mar. 31. No renewal is sought.

The government now has signed five-year contracts with five companies to obtain the same service. Mr. Kierans told the House that Lapalme drivers will be able to get jobs with the new contractors but first they must register with the local Manpower office.

Meanwhile, he said, if violence and the slowdown continue, the government will have no choice but to revoke the present contract and hire 350 chauffers to deliver the mail—"and we'll give them the security the occasion will require," he warned.

Listening to Mr. Kierans' angry speech from the gallery of the Commons were several union members and officials from Montreal.

Stepping outside the gallery for an interview, Raymond Parent, CNTU general secretary, accused Mr. Kierans of destroying chances for a negotiated settlement of the dispute and said the union has requested the intervention of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

The dispute lies within the jurisdiction of the labor minister, Mr. Parent said, and he has experience that the postmaster-general does not.

He added that there was no proof Lapalme drivers were responsible for violence. He hinted the damaged mailboxes may be the work of unions attempting to discredit the CNTU members.

In the debate, opposition speakers made similar demands for intervention by Mr. Mackasey or other members of the cabinet and for Mr. Kierans's resignation.

Israelis Need Nasser--Brown

LONDON (Reuters) — George Brown, ebullient former foreign secretary, hit the headlines again today with accounts that he told a pro-Israeli meeting that "every Western Jew will fight to the last Israeli."

Brown attended a Friends of Israel meeting in a House of Commons committee room Wednesday night.

The Daily Express quoted him as saying:

"I might as well start off by saying how much I like President Nasser."

Uproar broke out when Brown said: "The farther you get away from the scene of the crime the easier it is to make bloodthirsty speeches."

"Every Englishman will fight to the last Frenchman, every Kuwaiti will fight to the last Egyptian and every Western Jew will fight to the last Israeli," he was quoted in press reports splashed on front pages.

"That's an insult!" shouted members of Brown's audience.

"Shut up!" Brown retorted.

He also said he thought the Palestinian Liberation Movement was led by "relatively moderate people."

Brown told the Friends of Israel:

"If you want peace you have to like both of the peoples. The Jews are wrong to attack Nasser. I think he is an honest man.

"I think the Israelis know they need Nasser, and I think Nasser knows that he needs Hussein," referring to King Hussein of Jordan.

"For heaven's sake, say to Israel, 'Try at this moment to get a ceasefire and a basis for talks. But don't believe that just going on bombing is going to get you anywhere.'

"I wouldn't know how many wars the Arabs can afford to lose . . . But I do know that Israel can only lose one. If the Arabs ever get clever enough to put their force into the air first, how many Israeli cities will be destroyed?"

One young man took exception to Brown's pronunciation of "Is-rye-eel," which the listener said was the Arab way.

Brown laughed. "I pronounce it the way my Jewish father-in-law pronounces it," he said.

He tried to soothe his ruffled audience by confessing: "I can't tell an Arab from a Jew. They are both Semitic peoples. They both have noses as long as mine."

It was only two months ago during a Middle East tour that the former foreign secretary in the Labor government was involved in controversy over an argument he was supposed to have had with Israel's Gen. Chaim Herzog at a dinner party.

Banker and Family Are Held Hostages

BRIGDEN, Ont. (CP) — Two armed men may have stolen more than $40,000 in cash Wednesday after holding the manager of the Brigden branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and his family hostage, a Sarnia branch manager said following the robbery.

Two masked men burst into the bedroom of Robert Dunnell, 35, manager of the branch in this community 15 miles southeast of Sarnia, blindfolded him and his wife and bound their hands and feet, police said. The three Dunnell children remained asleep in another room of the apartment located above the bank.

Inspector W. H. Armstrong of the provincial police Criminal Investigation Branch, Toronto, said the family was taken to the bank about 8:30 a.m. and made to lie down behind the counter. As each of the four female employees arrived for work they were ordered to do likewise.

He said Mr. Dunnell was forced to open the bank vault moments after a time-lock mechanism was released. The robbers then scooped up cash from the vault, ordered the manager, his family and the four bank employees into the vault, then locked it.

Mr. Dunnell eventually opened the vault from the inside and sounded the alarm.

U. S. Deserters Held For Beating Friend

MONTREAL (CP) — Two teen-aged United States army deserters from Connecticut were picked up by police Wednesday after a suburban Beaconsfield woman who befriended them was taken to hospital in critical condition from a beating.

Police said Maria Santos, 35, was clubbed unconscious with table legs and tied up with electrical wire in her room. She was suffering from multiple face and head wounds and severe loss of blood.

The deserters, aged 17 and 18, were picked up on the Trans-Canada Highway hours later, hitch-hiking west. They told police they had been "stoned out of their minds" on hashish the night before.

Police said Mrs. Santos was attacked in her home Tuesday night. When she regained consciousness she managed to free herself from her bonds and stagger outside, where a neighbor found her and took her to hospital.

The two deserters had been sent to live at her home by the Montreal-based American Deserters Committee after she offered accommodation to deserters in distress.

Police said Donald E. Delauder, 18, of West Townsend, Mass., was arraigned on charges of attempted murder, assault with intent to commit robbery, and causing property damage estimated at $1,000.

The other youth was ordered held until authorities could verify his given age of 17.

Sessions Judge Rheal Brunet ordered Delauder held without bail until preliminary hearing Feb. 26.

Siberian Visit Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien plans to spend up to 10 days in Siberia this spring to see first-hand how the Russians are developing their northern regions.

A spokesman said the minister will be particularly interested in how the Russians are developing huge mineral finds and their plans to bring them to market.

Russian ice-breaking methods and plans for conservation also will be of interest to Mr. Chretien, the spokesman said.

Arthur Laing, when he was minister of northern development, visited Siberia in 1965 and came back enthused about what he saw.

Passport Office Expects Record Demand This Year

OTTAWA (CP) — The passport office in the external affairs department is gearing up to cope with an anticipated record demand for travel documents from Canadians intending to go abroad this year.

Painful memories of some monumental snarls a year ago do not dismay the office management.

"We're in better shape than we've ever been before," says W. S. Durdin, the chief passport officer.

The foulups of late winter and spring, 1969, had something to do indirectly with James Earl Ray, convicted murderer of Dr. Martin Luther King.

In his own way, Ray made a valuable contribution to the Canadian passport system. After his arrest in London June 8, 1968, it was disclosed that he had gone to Toronto following the killing in Memphis April 4 of that year, and from there obtained a passport which enabled him to travel abroad.

When picked up he was carrying not one but two Canadian passports, both issued under one of his many aliases, Ramon George Sneyd. The second had been obtained at the Canadian embassy in Lisbon, Portugal.

The outcry that followed these revelations led to a drastic tightening of Canada's highly casual passport regulations.

"We really got clobbered with the James Earl Ray fraud," sayd Mr. Durdin. "If the present rules had been in force in 1968 he wouldn't have beaten us. We would have caught him for sure."

U.S. Gets Split In Chicago Trial

CHICAGO (CP) — The U.S. government has won a split verdict in its prosecution of seven men accused of inciting violence at the time of the 1968 Democratic national convention, but defence lawyers plan to contest the validity of the federal anti-riot law in higher courts.

A U.S. district court jury convicted five men Wednesday of crossing state lines with the intent to incite rioting during the convention in August, 1968.

But the jury of 10 women and two men acquitted all seven defendants of conspiracy to promote the bloody confrontations between police and anti-war demonstrators.

Two defendants, Lee Weiner and John Froines, were cleared of conspiracy and of a charge of teaching the use of incendiary devices. Froines and Weiner both resided in Chicago during the summer of 1968 and were not charged in the indictment with crossing state lines to incite rioting.

Convicted were David Dellinger, 54; Jerry Rubin, 31; Thomas Hayden, 30; Abbie Hoffman, 31, and Rennard Davis, 29.

Each man could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and fined $10,000.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman did not set a date for sentencing but sentences are expected to be pronounced Friday.

Postal Rates Won't Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — An announcement Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau that the government will postpone a series of planned price increases was greeted as a mixed blessing by opposition parties.

Mr. Trudeau told the Commons the government will forego increases in postal rates, National Railways fares, prices for government publications and other services to combat inflation.

While opposition spokesmen welcomed the anti-inflation initiative, most said the restraints will lead to unemployment.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, said the program will hurt those at the bottom of the economic ladder.

He said the announcement, made during Mr. Trudeau's report on this week's two-day federal-provincial conference, contained measures that would "obviously just add to our unemployment problem."

T. C. Douglas, New Democrat leader, said restraint is necessary but the government should not decrease expenditures where it will cause unemployment.

The government's restraint program was hitting all sectors of the economy instead of being applied selectively, he said.

Mr. Trudeau said the deferments will cost the government about $45,000,000 next year.

Intelligencer Sports

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1970

by Maurice Switzer Sports Editor

Unless the city police have a change of heart, there'll be one important player missing from the firemen's lineup in Friday night's underprivileged children's benefit game.

Me.

Obviously humbled by their 4-2 defeat in last year's annual red-blue game, the Keystoners this year pushed through a regulation barring participation of all but hard-core police and firemen from participation in the annual rivalry.

The move was designed to prevent yours truly from duplicating his brilliant performance in last year's win by the firemen, which included a goal and an assortment of crowd-dazzling manoeuvres.

Harold Reid, D.C. (deputy-chief), claimed to be unaware of the low blow. "I don't know anything about it," said Mr. Reid. "After all, I'm only the coach."

Meanwhile, Fire Chief Leo Culhane questioned the validity of the police department veto. Chief Culhane, who will take Friday night's 8.30 faceoff against counterpart Douglas Crosbie, promptly declared me an honorary fireman for two hours this coming Friday.

There is no reason — aside from sheer fear — for the police to ban me from the firemen's roster.

The firefighters, on the other hand, have been perfectly fair about the whole "ringer" issue. They offered the police team the services of my broadcasting counterpart John Devine to even things up.

That bit of generosity was rudely snubbed by the boys in blue, who made some rude remark questioning Mr. Devine's ability to stand erect in shoes, let alone skates.

If the police persist in their stand, my services to the smoke-eaters Friday night will come in the form of coaching, which should be worth two or three goals in itself.

My starting lineup, in the event I am excluded from playing will include Bob "The Blank" Andrus in goal, protected, hopefully, by defencemen Rocket Davis and Stan "the Man" Papke.

Up front, Wally "Dipper" Istead will team with "Flash" Putnam and either Pat "Father" Barrett or Boom-boom Boomhower, depending on heat.

There is little in the way of competition from this year's police entry, although they do outweigh the firemen by a total of some 800 pounds overall.

Bob McAlpine, a senior hockey graduate, and junior-experienced Barry Titterson will provide the main threats, although Harold Reid, in his wisdom, has placed both back on defence.

Garnet Goodwin will play in the police net, for the information of his next-of-kin.

The only serious aspect of Friday night's game is its purpose — to raise funds for the city firefighters' underprivileged children's Christmas project.

Helping do this in a most unserious manner will be National Hockey League eccentric Lorne "Gump" Worsley, who along with J. P. "Lammy" Lamirande, will officiate the mishap.

Mayor Russell Scott will drop the first puck, which will then be presented to police captain Bob Beghie since his team will not get the opportunity to touch the one being used in the ensuing game.

Spectators will pay 50 cents to get in, have a chance at a couple of dozen attractive draws, throw their programs at the villains of their choice, and get Mr. Worsley's autograph.

Tickets may be purchased now at McKnight's Variety Store, O'Neill's Front St. Barbershop, or from the nearest policeman or fireman.

However the public should be warned against merely telephoning the police department and saying "I want a ticket."

That could cost more than 50 cents.

'Fun and Games Are Over,' Says Ellis Coach

Belleville Ellis Printer coach Floyd Crawford isn't planning to just play out the schedule in the last regular season game in Trenton, Friday night. "We've messed up a couple of games lately", says Crawford. "The fun and games are over. This game is important to give us momentum for the play-offs."

Belleville, who open their semi - final series in Oshawa Tuesday night, will probably be minus centre John McConnell for the Trenton encounter Friday. The high scoring hub of the Printer's top scoring unit is still recuperating from a broken nose suffered last Monday in Cobourg.

Linemate Terry Meagher will get his final shot at the Eastern Ontario Jr. B league scoring championship, as his 56 points place him close to the lead.

The club will have the services of flashy winger Reid Mallory, who along with Meagher has generated much of the Ellis scoring power throughout the year. Mallory missed Sunday's game with Peterborough because of a facial laceration suffered against the Don Byes in their Friday night encounter. Belleville, which lost both weekend games to Peterborough, will be hoping to get back on the winning track that saw them unbeaten in their previous seven games.

Second - string goalie Paul Hopkins may see action in the Trenton game, spelling off regular netminder Ron Jury. "If I think Ron needs the work for the upcoming play - offs, then he'll go all the way," says Crawford, "but if he needs a rest Hopkins will play."

One Printer who should feel right at home against the hard - hitting Golden Hawks, is rearguard Dalton Lambert, who leads the penalty parade with 104 minutes.

"It's great in theory," says principal Linton Read of Moira Secondary School, "but I just don't think there is enough public interest to cover the added costs of maintenance and supervision."

"Our building is in use every night of the week," reports Mrs. Wilma Summers of the Belleville Recreation Department, "and we have to turn many groups down because of lack of space."

L. A. Kells of the Board of Education relates, "In principle I can see no serious difficulties, but I am not prepared to state the board's official position at this time."

These were three of the varying views to the question of why the facilities of Belleville high schools, particularly gymnasiums, could not be made available to the general public one or two nights a week.

While it's easy to lament about our degenerate youth lounging around the street corners and our overweight adult populance whiling away their time in front of the boob tube, it appears more difficult to do something about it—like seeing that proper recreation facilities are made available.

Moira Secondary was open to the general public last summer and according to their principal, the program was quite successful. "The fact that we were able to obtain reasonable supervision for the summer program had much to do with its success," states Linton Read.

Quinte High School has initiated a program which allows their students free gym time 7 - 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, for such activities as basketball, badminton and volleyball. "Our program has proved very successful," says Quinte principal John Hayman. "Of course we provide our own supervision and maintenance, so it's a little different, than a general program, but I think that if enough people were willing to work for it, through the proper channels, such a program could be successful."

School officials agree costs of providing adequate supervision, maintenance and replacement of damaged property could be met by charging participants a nominal admission, say 25 cents for an evening, provided there were enough people interested in the program.

But as Mr. Read states, "We wouldn't want to have to pay three dollars an hour and then have only three people attend."

Both Moira and Quinte schools will definitely be open this summer, with BCI and Centennial, as yet undecided. While this certainly represents progress, availability of the school's facilities would be even more valuable during the winter months, when outdoor recreation is severely limited by the weather.

Members of the recreation department appear to be in favor of more public athletic facilities, but are unable to assist in any activities involving the secondary schools, unless school officials sanction public programs.

Existing facilities for the public are receiving wide - spread support from city residents. Mr. Clifford Belch, of the recreation department reports, "Our outdoor rinks have had tremendous participation throughout the winter months and our archery classes and roller skating nights have both proved to be highly successful." There are presently about 30 people enrolled in the Monday night archery classes at Bleecker Auditorium.

Mrs. Wilma Summers concurs, adding that over 1,000 people participate in the various square dancing groups held in public school gymnasiums throughout the city.

One of the student organizers of Quinte's twice weekly program, Jim Sled, relates that the average attendance at the Tuesday and Thursday night sessions has been around 80 people. "We've been getting around 40 boys per night," says Sled, "and about the same number of girls."

From these reports it would seem that public support of existing athletic facilities is very good, when such facilities are offered.

The question appears to be, WHEN will they be available?

Mo-Hawks Face Dogfight

Belleville Mo - Hawks have got a two - year - old bone to pick with Orillia Terriers this weekend, and they'll be doing it with some new teeth in their OHA Senior attack.

The Mo-Hawks didn't get a point off the Terriers in five tries last season, and this year have dropped 5-2, 7-1, and 3-1 decisions to the senior A pennant - winners in - a - breeze.

"We hope to change that this weekend," says Mo-Hawk playing - coach Davey Jones as the Belleville seniors prepare to round out their 40-game schedule with a home-and - home series with Orillia.

The Mo-Hawk team that travels to Orillia tomorrow night and the one that takes on the Terriers back in the Memorial Arena at 2 p.m. Sunday will be a different one than the league leaders have been used to.

The Terriers haven't played the Mo - Hawks since November, when the club was just beginning to gel. In addition, the Mo-Hawks are closer to full strength right now than they have been in three months, and have snapped a month-long slump by collecting three of four possible points from third - place Kingston in their last two outings.

"We've skated hard the last two nights," Jones said, following workouts in Belleville Tuesday, and Havelock Wednesday. With the exception of "Weiner" (Brown), we'll be at full strength in Orillia tomorrow night." Brown is still nursing a leg injury that came hot on the heels of a concussion.

"It's nice to be in a position, for a change, where you have to make a selection for your starting lineup," added Jones.

Perhaps the biggest boost to Mo-Hawk playoff hopes — which go into action next week — is the return of defence standout Lou Kazowski after a 10 - game layoff.

In addition to being tough to beat, Kazowski led league defencemen with 25 scoring points in the 26 games he played before cracking his right ankle in Galt.

Kazowski's return will enable Jones, who has played on defence the last two games, to again lend his play-making skills to the Mo-Hawk attack. The playing - coach has 16 goals and 19 assists to show for 33 games, tying him with Al Ferguson for third - best club output.

Jones also plans to move Brown back to more familiar forward surroundings when the veteran winger makes his return to the lineup, possibly Sunday here against the Terriers.

Mobster-mashed?

Detroit Tigers pitcher Denny McLain received therapy for his injured foot in a Detroit clinic September, 1967, after incident in which McLain said he hurt himself in a mishap at home. In a copyrighted story, Sports Illustrated magazine asserts McLain's foot injury occurred when a Cosa Nostra "enforcer" stomped on it. Sports Illustrated also said McLain in 1967 was a partner in a bookmaking operation.

McLain Still Behind Closed Doors

DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain, the 25-year-old Detroit Tiger pitching ace, voluntarily met beind closed doors Wednesday with a federal grand jury that is probing inter-state gambling.

McLain emerged from seclusion for the first time since Friday when baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn said in New York that unspecified "off-the-field" activities by McLain in 1967 were being studied.

Federal attorneys declined to discuss what McLain said during his 45-minute appearance before the grand jury.

United States Attorney James Brickley said that McLain was "very co-operative in furnishing information" to the grand jury and to James Ritchie, who heads a U.S. justice department task force investigating organized crime.

Brickley said that McLain had not been subpoenaed for the appearance, his first before the grand jury. Brickley said the investigation was an independent one that Ritchie "has been pursuing for some time."

Ritchie said federal attorneys are also "cooperating fully with the baseball commissioner, and I consult with his office on a daily basis to discuss matters of mutual interest."

McLain again disappeared, but he may be en route to Lakeland, Fla., where the Tigers open spring training Friday. His wife, Sharyn, told reporters earlier Wednesday that her husband "has done nothing to hurt baseball."

Mrs. McLain, daughter of former Cleveland Indian shortstop Lou Boudreau, added: "We are behind Denny 100 per cent."

She was interviewed as she boarded an airplane by herself in Detroit Wednesday afternoon for a flight to Tampa, Fla., en route to Lakeland.

Also Wednesday, an eviction suit against McLain in a Southfield, Mich., district court was postponed until Friday.

McLain's landlord alleged the ballplayer is $2,450 behind in rent for the suburban Detroit home. Orland Ellis, an attorney representing McLain, asked for the postponement, saying an out-of-court settlement was being attempted.

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Manitoba, New Brunswick and Quebec were tied in first place at the Canadian school curling championship after play Wednesday threw the fight for the title wide open.

Each team had a 5-1, won-lost record after winning their two games Wednesday but British Columbia at 4-2 and Alberta and Northern Ontario at 3-2 remained in contention.

No team east of Ontario has taken the championship since it began in 1950 but the dark-horse rinks of Quebec's Myron Nussey and New Brunswick's Ron Ferguson have surprised their favored Western opponents since the tournament began Monday.

Following the leaders going into today's seventh round at 9 a.m. EST were Saskatchewan with a 2-3 won-lost record, Ontario and Prince Edward Island at 1-4, Nova Scotia at 1-5 and winless Newfoundland with five losses.

In sixth-round games Wednesday, Manitoba's Brian Penston edged Don Carmichael of Prince Edward Island 9-8, Quebec counted a final-end four to dump Dave Folk of Saskatchewan 9-5, Bob Thompson of British Columbia dumped Doug Hagerman of Northern Ontario 12-5, New Brunswick swamped Newfoundland's Ken Baggs 17-5 and Ontario's Red Osburn whipped Eric Tweedie of Nova Scotia 14-7.

Something Soviets Can't Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Corcoran, director of the International Golf Association, got a reply Wednesday from an invitation to the Soviet Union to send a team to the 1970 World Cup matches.

The answer came from Jacob D. Beam, United States ambassador to Moscow.

Sorry, the Russians said, there are no golfers in the Soviet Union. There aren't even any golf courses.

Off to Stockholm

Hockey Canada Tries Again

TORONTO (CP) — Canada, after winning in Crans and losing in Geneva, will carry to Stockholm its fight to play professionals in international hockey.

Hockey Canada, following a board meeting Wednesday, announced it would send a delegation to the International Ice Hockey Federation congress meeting in Stockholm next month "to propose the re-entry of the Canadian team, provided the IIHF approves a gradually increasing number of professional players on the Canadian team, leading to open competition by 1975."

Canada, at the IIHF congress meeting in Crans, Switzerland, last July, won approval to play nine professionals in the 1970 world tournament set for Montreal and Winnipeg.

Early last month in Geneva, under threat of International Olympic Committee displeasure, the five teams involved with Canada in the tournament's A pool—Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland and East Germany—declined to take part.

Canada submitted a compromise proposal designed to circumvent IOC regulations and, when the five other countries voted it down, withdrew from the tournament which was awarded to Stockholm.

Canada's original proposal at Crans, before she compromised on the nine-professionals concept, was for an open world tournament with unlimited professionals involved.

At Stockholm next month, Canada will revert to this proposal on a sliding scale with nine professionals for the 1971 tournament increasing to 12, then 15, and finally 18 by 1975.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said his organization was "fully aligned" with the stand.

"If Canada receives full recognition, we would have to amend our bylaw which says teams must ice their best players at all times," he told a news conference.

"We would have to modify the rule to exempt players going into international play.

Assistant Golf Pros Lay Down Tourney Law

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's assistant golf professionals Wednesday announced plans to strengthen organization and discipline for their 1970 tournaments.

Paul Dove of Toronto Maple Downs, chairman of the association governing 130 of the province's assistant professionals, said a new 12-man committee will supervise the four tournaments, which are restricted to the assistants.

"Until now, we have been getting assistance from sponsors and manufacturers on the basis of helping with a dinner, sometimes putting up money for prizes," Dove said. "But we've never been able to know in advance just what we're playing for."

The assistants hope to establish a program with $1,000 prize money for each of the four events, divided according to the scale operated by the Professional Golfers Association of Ontario.

"We want to set up a firm budget," Dove said. "We'd like our sponsors to tell us in advance what help they can give us, and then we can sit down and put together a program so everyone will know just where they stand before the tournament starts."

Six tournament directors, who form half of the new committee along with the assistant professionals' association executive, will be in charge of tournament discipline.

"We'll enforce it too," Dove said, explaining that players who pick up during a tournament will be "banned from further tournament play during the season. We intend to control their behaviour in the club lounges and snack bars, too."

Sport Briefs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, winner of the National League batting championship two years in a row, says he is ready to sign his 1970 contract. He says all he needs is a call from Cincinnati Reds general manager Bob Howsam. It is understood Rose is seeking perhaps $110,000 a year.

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Bill Dineen, a 17-year veteran of professional hockey, was named Wednesday as coach of Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League, replacing Rudy Pilous. Pilous, who has served as both coach and general manager, will devote full time to management duties, the announcement said.

MIAMI (AP) — George Wilson was fired Wednesday night after four years as head coach of Miami Dolphins of the National Football League and was immediately replaced by Don Shula of Baltimore Colts. Shula, 40, posted a 71-23-4 record in a seven-year career with the Colts, being named NFL coach of the year three times. Dolphins managing partner Joe Robbie said Shula will have " a sizeable chunk of the club as a part owner and will also carry the title of vice-president."

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau Wednesday dismissed as "part of an arsenal of rumors" reports that Montreal is not financially capable of playing host to the 1976 Summer Olympics. Montreal, Moscow with a late bid, and Los Angeles are all competing for the 1976 Summer Games, while Vancouver; Denver; Tampere, Finland; and Sion, Switzerland, are in contention for the 1976 Winter Games. The IOC will reach a verdict when some 60 of its 75 voting members meet in Amsterdam May 13. Montreal lost out in its bid for the 1972 Summer Games to Munich by one vote last time round.

HAMILTON (CP) — Stan Defoe Wednesday skipped his Unionville, Ont., rink to the main event title of the Ontario Curling Association's 37th annual Seniors Tankard, defeating Cec Schoales of Toronto Bouvelard 10-4. The Defoe rink, which included Ken McMullen, Russ Pearson and John McPherson, opened up an 8-4 lead after six ends and pulled away counting one in the seventh and eighth ends.

Third Game-winner

'Army' Takes Wind From Hab Sails

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

For a man who just four months ago had lost his enthusiasm for hockey, George Armstrong still manages to display a timely knack for taking the starch out of an opponent.

Armstrong got tired of the National Hockey League battles last October, retired from Toronto Maple Leafs for the third time in as many years but came back in November and Wednesday night led the team to a 5-3 win over Montreal Canadians.

The 39-year-old veteran's 10th season goal and third game-winner for the Leafs came when he stick-handled his way through the Montreal defence for a clear shot at goalie Phil Myre.

In other games, St. Louis Blues downed Chicago Black Hawks 5-2, Detroit Red Wings tied 1-1 with Minnesota North Stars, New York Rangers held Philadelphia Flyers to a 3-3 score and a record-breaking goal by Bobby Orr helped Boston Bruins to a 5-5 saw-off with Los Angeles Kings.

Armstrong's goal at 10:09 of the third period took the steam out of the Canadiens and Dave Keon picked up his second goal of the night in the last minute of play to make the score 5-3.

Henri Richard's 300th career goal plus one by Yvan Cournoyer put the Canadiens ahead 2-1 at the end of the second period before a Toronto crowd of 16,485.

Bob Pulford of the Leafs and Jean Beliveau of the Canadiens exchanged early third-period goals before Ron Ellis again tied it for Toronto, setting the stage for Armstrong's winner.

Armstrong's play to get past Terry Harper brought praise from Leaf coach Johnny McLellan, who said the Montreal defenceman was aghast, "as with custard on his face."

"That was the old pro at work," McLellan said of his veteran right winger.

The former Leafs captain was also outstanding on the penalty-killing squad when centre Jim Harrison sat out a fighting major late in the first period after tangling with Harper, who got a two-minute holding minor. The Canadiens took three other minors and during one of them Keon scored his first goal of the night.

The Leafs had 36 shots on Myre while Bruce Gamble made 27 saves to protect the victory.

GEORGE ARMSTRONG

The win left Toronto seven points behind fifth-place Chicago and nine behind Detroit in the battle for the East Division's last playoff spot.

The Bruins, meanwhile stayed one point behind the leading Rangers while moving five in front of the slumping Canadiens.

Orr scored his 22nd goal at Los Angeles to break his own record for most goals by a defenceman in one season set last season.

Johnny McKenzie scored twice while Garnet Bailey and Ed Westfall had one goal each for the Bruins before a crowd o 10,616.

Eddie Joyal's second goal of the night early in the third period tied it for the Kings who snapped an eight-game losing streak.

Jim Peters also scored twice for the Kings and Butch Goring beat Boston goalie Ed Johnston once.

Johnston faced 33 shots while Wayne Rutledge made 32 saves.

Detroit moved to within four points of the third-place Canadiens in the East with captain Alex Delvecchio's tying goal in the third period before a Minneapolis crowd of 14,137.

Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago preserved the tie despite facing 46 shots while the North Stars tested Roger Crozier only 26 times.

The North Stars got a first-period goal from Claude Larose and a potetnial game-winner by Bill Goldsworthy, two minutes after Delvecchio's score, was disallowed by referee John Ashley.

The game marked the return of former Minnesota team captain Elmer (Moose) Vasko from the minor leagues, replacing defenceman John Miszuk who was sent down.

The Rangers and Flyers each scored three goals in the first period at New York and goalies Bernie Parent for Philadelphia and Terry Sawchuk kept their nets clean through the last 40 minutes.

The crowd of 17,250 saw the Flyers take an early lead on goals by Earl Heiskala and Gary Dornhoefer.

Jean Ratelle replied for the Rangers before Garry Peters put the visitors in front 3-1.

Dave Balon and Bill Fairbairn scored to pull the Rangers even, holding the Flyers to their 20th season tie.

Keith McCreary and the Plager brothers ganged up on the visiting Black Hawks at St. Louis, spoiling their bid to overtake Detroit in the battle for fourth place.

McCreary scored twice for the Blues. Bill Plager got a goal and an assist while brothers Barclay and Bob helped set up goals.

Phil Goyette and Red Berenson were the other goal-getters for St. Louis which took a 12-point lead over second-place Philadelphia in the West Division.

Stan Mikita set up Hawks goals by Dennis Hull and Lou Angotti.

Chicago also had a goal disallowed when referee Bruce Hood noticed Hawk Jim Pappin in the goal crease at the time of a power-play score by Gerry Pinder.

Retirement Talk From Morose Ruel

TORONTO (CP) — A disillusioned Claude Ruel talked retirement Wednesday, after Toronto Maple Leafs scored four times in the third period to pull out a 5-3 National Hockey League win over his Montreal Canadiens.

"I'm pretty ashamed," the coach of the 1969 Stanley Cup champions said, "pretty ashamed. The team has been going like this for three weeks—always they have one bad period. The game goes 60 minutes, eh? I sure don't want to get sick for guys like this, guys who don't want to work for me.

"You yell and yelll, and they do nothing for you. The only idea is to put somebody else behind the bench, somebody they'll play for."

"Claude, remember last year," a Montreal reporter said. "They won for you then."

"That's okay," Ruel replied, "but they aren't playing for me now."

The defeat was the third in succession for Montreal. Since Ruel took over the coaching duties from the retired Hector (Toe) Blake last season, the Canadiens have never lost more than twice in a row.

Damper Put On Draft

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League has proposed a numebr of rule changes, including one that will prevent a club from drafting players from teams in their own organization during the annual inter-league draft.

"We have proposed a means to stop this," said president Clarence Campbell following a five-hour meeting with a special committee here Tuesday.

Attending the meeting were Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, president Walter Bush of Minnesota North Stars, and Weston Adams Sr., chairman of Boston Bruins, along with representatives of the American and Western Hockey Leagues.

"We had to sort out the inequities of the reverse draft," Campbell said. "This was one of our primary concerns, because some of the ploys at the last such draft were not in the spirit of the rules."

Preparing for Moon Trip

Oil on Nova Scotia Shore Won't Ignite Unless Heated

TORONTO (CP) — To the layman, oil burns. Why then cannot oil from the sunken tanker Arrow now polluting the beaches of Nova Scotia be burned off?

A Toronto spokesman for Imperial Oil Ltd. explains that the oil carried by the Arrow is a grade used in industrial furnaces from which the volatile elements of gasoline and light fuel oil have been removed.

As a result of this refining process, the thick sludge now coating Nova Scotia beaches will not ignite until it reaches 240 degrees, a temperature almost impossible to achieve under present conditions.

Experts have tried several approaches to the problem since the tanker was wrecked Feb. 4 on a rock off Chedabucto Bay, but none has been notably successful to date.

Imperial Oil's first idea was to start up the tanker's engines so the cargo could be warmed to a temperature of about 100 degrees, at which point it would become fluid enough to be piped to another tanker.

However, the ship split in two before this could be accomplished.

There also have been suggestions that the Arrow be bombed, as was the Torrey Canyon which hit a reef off the south coast of England in 1967, dumping 35,000,000 gallons of crude oil.

But crude oil still contains gasoline and light fuel oil, with a resultant higher degree of combustibility. Therefore the incendiary bombs dropped on the Torrey Canyon by the Royal Air Force were to good effect. But there is no guarantee the bunker oil carried by the Arrow would reach the necessary temperature, the spokesman said.

He also noted that the water temperature is 34 degrees, so that any attempts to heat the oil before it left the ship—whether by bombing or pumping it out—would be negated once the oil hit the cold water.

Another method experimented with at Chedabucto Bay was the use of thousands of sea beads—glass pellets of about ¼-inch diameter which act as a wick.

However, the beads work well only in calm seas and light winds, not normally the rule off the Nova Scotia coast in February.

Imperial Oil said the burning of oil after it has reached the shoreline is easier because the oil is not so concentrated. It lies in patches along the indented shoreline and flame-throwers can be used with some success, although the process is time-consuming.

The oil is so thick some witnesses have said a rock thrown onto it will not sink.

Persons from all over Canada and the United States have put forward ideas to mop up the mess.

The latest of these came from a Cornwall, Ont., plumber, Henri Lalonde, who said Wednesday he has offered his patented "oil sweeper" to the federal government for use in Chedabucto Bay.

The sweeper looks like a giant funnel fastened in a framework which floats on pontoons. The sweeper, when towed over the water's surface, rises and falls with the motion of the waves, scooping up a mixture of oil and water. Pumps transfer the mixture from the funnel to tanks in the hold of the towing ship.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Even in Age of Antibiotics Mastoiditis Still Possible

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We didn't even suspect our 5-year-old daughter could get mastoiditis in this age of antibiotics. We thought it was impossible.

It all started with an ordinary sore throat. Then she complained of pain in her ear. We gave her aspirin. That didn't help so we went to the doctor who prescribed penicillin and sulfa drugs.

As she didn't improve we returned to his office. He said she needed to have her eardrum opened to let out any pus there might be inside. But my husband refused.

She got worse, her eardrum ruptured by itself about a week later. X rays showed that she definitely had infection in her mastoid. She was operated on, given stronger antibiotics and recovered after a stormy illness.

My reason for writing is to warn mothers that there still is such a disease as mastoiditis. — Mrs. P.

Comment: Your letter is important, Mrs. P., because it underlines the fact that we sometimes overlook disease simply because we think it's "not likely" to be present.

For example, people somehow have got the idea that tuberculosis is no longer a problem because we have drugs that handle it quite well. For that reason many a patient with a so-called "cigarette cough," or a grandparent with "bronchitis" may be spreading tuberculosis to others simply because "it's not likely."

A man gets "indigestion and gas" under his chest and says "it's not likely this is a coronary attack."

Another man with heartburn says "It's not likely this is an ulcer." What I am saying is that we should not overlook the "unlikely" diseases.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: It began with what I thought was a simple diarrhea. But soon I was having a dozen loose bowel movements a day. They were painful and crampy, and full of mucus and blood.

My doctor sent me to a gastroenterologist who took X rays and other tests. He diagnosed my condition as ulcerative colitis. He put me on a bland diet and prescribed medicine. What next? — Mr. F.

Comment: Ulcerative colitis, as the name implies, means that ulcers have developed all along the colon, which we call the large intestine. It is a stubborn condition, but often can be controlled so the patient can "learn to live with it."

Mainly, treatment consists of rest, freedom from tensions, sedation and a bland diet. Many patients also require ACTH and corticosteroids, paregoric and other medications.

In severe cases that do not respond to conservative treatment, operation to remove part of the colon is necessary. As in any other illness, the earlier the diagnosis and more intensive the treatment the better the outlook.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Does menopause cause arthritis? — Mrs. I.

Comment: We don't know too much about it. As you know, arthritis can come on in children and in the elderly. But it's true that a condition we call osteoporosis sometimes develops a few years after the menopause in some women.

This "thinning of the bones" is sometimes helped considerably by taking female hormones in addition to other medication. But we are not certain that there is a direct relationship between menopause and this kind of arthritis.

• • •

For Mrs. H.: Whether your husband inhales his cigar smoke or not, I think he is only rationalizing when he says it's all right for emphysema patients to smoke cigars instead of cigarettes.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price"

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Kinsmen on Top

The Belleville Kinsmen Bantams don't appear to be finding it unbearably lonely at the top, as the city's only remaining team in the OMHA playoffs opened their second round of play with a 5-2 win over Whitby last night.

Mark Coates fired what proved to be the winning goal for the defending OMHA Bantam AA champions of the last two years, in the second period. Bruce Sutherland and Tim Whelan later added insurance markers.

Sutherland led the scoring for the Kinsmen, adding two assists to his scoring effort. Andy Ricketts and Mark Coates each had a goal and an assist, while Dave Flesch notched the other Belleville marker.

Dave Parish and Brian Miller scored for Whitby, who drew two of the game's six penalties. The visitors were outshot 24-21 as Bob Moore played a steady game in the Belleville nets.

Next game in the series is Tuesday night in Whitby at 8 p.m. The bantams travel to Cornwall this Friday, where they meet a team from Norwood, Mass., at 7:30 Saturday morning and either Oshawa or Cornwall at 3:30 the same afternoon in that city's annual tournament.

Junior Bowlers Play Kingston

Belleville Junior Ten-Pin bowlers begin play Saturday in the annual "Home-and-Home" series with their Kingston counterparts for the House Trophy. The winner will be the team that exceeds their seasonal average by the greatest number of pins in the six-game tournament.

Each team will roll three games at home and an equal number on the opposition's lanes.

The bantam group (12 and under) compete in Kingston this Saturday, with a return match in Belleville Mar. 7. Teen competition will start in the Limestone city Saturday, Feb. 28. Belleville's Brunswick Bowl will be the scene of the return bout March 14. Teen bowlers range from 13 - 19 years of age.

The annual competition is sponsored by coaches at both the Bowl-O-Drome and the Brunswick Belleville Bowl to provide a break in the league schedules and to promote junior ten-pin bowling.

Other groups giving assistance are the Belleville Junior Ten Pin Association and the Adult League at the Brunswick Belleville Bowl.

The Ontario Junior championships will be held in London, Ont. in May.

Investment Clubs Fine Way To Learn Handling of Money

(Second in a Series)

By KEN MANT

Toronto Telegram News Service

About 30,000 Canadians and an even greater number of our neighbors to the south have discovered investment clubs are a way to learn as well as a way to earn.

But for many others, for a variety of reasons, it is the learning and not the earning catastrophe.

Mrs. Thelma Davidson, former treasurer of Toronto's Blue Chip Club, says members of investment clubs may or may not get rich investing $10 a month, but they sure can learn enough about investment to prevent them from going broke handling their own money.

"You sometimes get women who have never handled more than $25 a week in grocery money.

"Then a husband dies leaving $50,000 insurance and a portfolio of stocks.

"We've learned that one wrong move can wipe out a widow."

To prevent such wrong moves the Investment Dealers has turned out a 30-cent booklet. It is intended to acquaint new and potential investors with investment technology and practice so that they may begin to make sound investment decisions.

Here are a few examples from the booklet:

Q. Who are the participants in the Canadian capital market?

A. Essentially, they consist of three groups:

(1) Those with capital to invest. This group includes individual investors such as insurance, trust and finance companies; banks; pension and mutual funds; businesses and governments with temporarily idle funds to invest.

(2) Those who need investment capital. This group includes Federal, provincial and municipal governments and large and small corporations across the country.

(3) Investment dealers and stock brokers who act as intermediaries for the above two groups.

Q. What are the fundamental characteristics of bonds?

A. A bond is an evidence of indebtedness which is issued by governments, municipalities, or corporations when borrowing capital funds. Bonds are usually issued in denominations of $1,000 and multiples thereof, upon which the issuer contracts to pay the holder a stipulated rate of interest on specific dates over a stated period of time. At the end of this time the issuer agrees to repay he principal amount against surrender of the bond.

For example, a holder of $1,000 Government of Canada, 4½ percent bond due Sept. 1, 1983, receives $22.50 in interest in March and September of each year until 1983. The Government of Canada pledges it will repay the holder his $1,000 principal amount on September 1, 1983. (Currently it can be bought for about $700).

The holder of a bond is a creditor of the issuer and enjoys no rights of ownership or management as long as the terms of the contract are fulfilled. Failure of the issuer to live up to the agreement causes default and, in the case of commercial or industrial companies, this invariably entitles the bondholder to legal recourse to bring about satisfaction of his stated rights.

Q. What are the fundamental differences between bonds and stocks?

A. Bonds may be issued by governments or corporations; shares only by corporations. A bondholder is a creditor because of money he has lent; the shareholder is a part-owner because of money he has subscribed. Bonds regularly pay interest, the amount of which is usually fixed at the date of issue. Shares pay dividends which may rise or fall according to the fortunes of the issuing company. Bonds will mature at some fixed date in the future; common shares an some preferred shares have perpetual life.

Q. How does the corporation use its capital to earn a profit?

A. Usually the corporation uses its capital to buy assets which can be put to productive use. Land, buildings, machinery and raw materials to be manufactured into a finished product are examples of assets. The corporation will also use some of its funds to hire workers. It is the aim of the corporation to sell its goods or services for more than it costs the company to produce and thus earn a profit for the owners of the corporation.

Q. What security is there for the shareholder?

A. The security for the stockholder is the net value of the company after the claims of all the creditors have been satisfied or accounted for. The residue of value is called "the equity" of the stock. The value of a stock as determined by its market price is dependent upon many factors which can be summed up in two words — potential profits. As a proprietor, the shareholder is mostly concerned with the earnings of his company because the earnings determine what amount of dividends he is likely to receive. In turn, the amount and timing of such dividend payments are important factors which determine the market value of the shares.

Q. Can you give examples to illustrate that the speculative security of today may well turn out to be the investment security of tomorrow? (The reverse is equally true.)

A. The history of corporation finance is full of examples:

(1) During the 1920s the newsprint industry in Canada was overdeveloped and, in the 1930s when demand for newsprint declined, many companies were unable to meet their obligations and many of their securities were considered highly speculative. Today nearly all of them have surmounted their past difficulties and greatly improved their financial position. As a result the bonds issued by most newsprint companies are today considered to be investment securities.

(2) Oil companies spent decades and millions of dollars in a relentless search for oil in Western Canada. In 1947 when oil was discovered at Leduc, oil stocks boomed.

(3) Following World War II, demand for Canadian uranium gave birth to a number of companies whose speculative securities were eagerly sought after. New techniques in developing fissionable material and the expiration of foreign contracts, however, resulted in difficult times for several uranium companies which once possessed a promising outlook.

Q. What is a holding company?

A. A holding company is one which is principally organized to manage and control the operation of subsidiary companies. This right of control is derived through ownership of all or a majority of the voting stock, or such sufficient amount as to have a working control of all the subsidiaries.

The true holding company is not usually an operating company and its sources of revenue are dividends and interest received from the securities of the subsidiary companies which it holds. Its holdings are frequently confined to one industry or related industries such as public utilities, railroads, steel and so on. Examples of Canadian holding companies are Alcan Aluminum Ltd., Moore Corporation Ltd., Massey-Ferguson Ltd., and George Weston Ltd.

The advantage of a holding company formation is the unity of management it affords to a number of separate organizations. In this way, operating economies may be effected, and wasteful competitions eliminated.

In Canada, shares of closed-end investment companies and trade at prices below their liquidating value (market value of securities owned, less liabilities). In contrast, shares of open-end or mutual fund companies always have a market price related and close to liquidating value.

Robarts Cuts Ribbon, But Bridge Won't Work

TORONTO (CP) — The premier of Ontario waited to cut a ribbon and lead other dignitaries Wednesday across a bridge-walkway to the new Ontario Place pavilion.

The ceremony was to mark the bridge's completion from the Toronto waterfront to four man-made islands and the pavilion suspended above Lake Ontario on 195-foot columns adjacent to the Canadian National Exhibition.

There was one hitch—the walk didn't come off because the two parts of the bridge, when lowered into place, didn't meet. One was higher than the other.

Premier John Robarts cut the ribbon anyway. The dignitaries waited for 20 minutes, then left to carry on with a muddy bus and foot tour of the 80-acre site, scheduled to open in 1971 as a "contemporary showcase of the vitality, imagination and industriousness" of the province.

The red-faced construction men at last reports were still tinkering.

Over-eating Nothing New

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts At Large:

If you are in a mood to complain about your income tax this year, consider conditions in the republic of India, which has nearly 500 million inhabitants, and only two million persons in a position to pay any income tax at all.

• • •

We like to think that gluttony and obesity are characteristics of our modern culture, as contrasted with the hardy fare of our forebears; but well over 200 years ago, Benjamin Franklin observed: "I saw few die of hunger; of eating, a hundred thousand."

An "elder statesman" is just a politician who has lost his last election and is no good for anything but decorating banquet tables and giving advice that is politely listened to and scrupulously ignored.

Those who avoid temptation long enough find, to their dismay, that when they are at last ready for a little fling, temptation avoids them.

That "awkward age," for parents at least, is when a child is still dependent, but no longer deductible.

• • •

A teacher who displays favoritism must be prepared not only for the dislike of the less-favored pupils, but also for the contempt of the favored, who secretly know they don't deserve it.

• • •

Observing an audience avidly watching a "giveaway" program on TV, I was reminded of historian Herbert Muller's comment: "The barbarism of our time is the more appalling because so many people are not appalled by it."

• • •

If a woman's eyes look hard, or suspicious, or querulous, or greedy, it doesn't matter how chic or pretty she may be— men will not be attracted to her, except the wrong ones for the wrong reasons.

• • •

One of the most interesting books I received for Christmas was The Indignant Eye: The Artist as Social Critic, a collection of prints and drawings (with commentary) from the 15th Century to Picasso which help put our contemporary woes in a little better perspective.

• • •

Murder one man, you're a villain; murder a dozen, you're a hero; murder a million, you're a World Leader.

• • •

People who understand a complex subject always resent it when it is ridiculed by people who don't understand it — because they want to reserve the privilege of ridiculing it in their own in-group way.

• • •

It says something about the level of commercial drama in New York, the so-called cultural capital of the nation, that a dozen or more theatres are named after producers, directors, actors, actresses, and even journalists — but only one is named after a playwright.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 20

Your birthday today: Nothing comes out as planned this year; but, in general, the results are much better than expected as temporary sacrifices prove worthwhile and new factors come into operation. Solutions for both old and new problems are featured.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Take a bolder approach to life today, ask for what you want. Settle the week's affairs so that you needn't go back over any of them again. Celebrate with a small lively party or good show tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your attention is demanded by all and sundry. Finish the day's work as soon as you can, Others have news to tell.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Tackle the most difficult jobs first. There is much encouragement and some help with the heavier chores. See if your home could stand a clearing out of oversized or outdated furnishings.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Trouble shooting is the main factor today. Get rid of annoying obstacles in the way of your career effort, or figure some path that avoids direct contact.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your career now demands much lively movement, quick decisions. Journeys taken on sudden hunches bring interesting results. Express your ambitions openly, but without rivalry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Quickly follow up optimistic news with action. Seek introductions to people who can do things for your special interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Blend sensible habits with good humor and positive planning. Your friends are with you. Somebody may give you a small present.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Today finds you successfully completing adjustments required by current changes. Settle in and try the new schedules over the weekend with confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Something you did long ago now brings a chance for good profits. Press urgently for advancement early in the day. The afternoon and evening are better spent with routines or your favorite pastimes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Everybody keeps his promises in the morning; nobody seems able to do so in the evening. Get your work done early, then just float along and have some fun.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The unexpected becomes normal for the latter half of the day. Some of the week's routines may be left unfinished for lack of materials or information at this point.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Expect to spend all day responding to a sudden demand in the morning. The results, by and large, are impressive and have an impact for a long time to come.

A Crucial Year Begins

This will be a year of major priorities for Quinte-area planning groups. Fact was noted at Belleville and Suburban Planning Board last night where Zdenek Kvarda (left) was acclaimed new chairman. With him is city planner Bert Kenny.

Stanfield Would Free Poor from Income Tax

KINGSTON (CP) — A proposal to eliminate income tax for about 1,250,000 taxpayers below the "poverty line" was unveiled here Thursday night by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

Mr. Stanfield opened a five-week attack on Liberal tax proposals in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's riding, telling a service club luncheon the government is trying to "bootleg" up to $1,250,000,000 in tax increases under the guise of tax reform.

He told a meeting of the Kingston and The Islands Conservative Association Thursday night the party shouldn't "see ourselves allied to some of the hysterical groups around the country" criticizing the Benson proposals.

"What we need is vigorous, responsible criticism—a campaign that will help lead eventually to the downfall of this government."

Such criticism had to be planned "with the significance of important reform measures in mind." He proposed the following tax changes:

—Exemption of families of four earning under $4,200—the Economic Council of Canada poverty line—from income tax through a system of tax refunds. Others on the poverty border line would be returned proportional amounts. Mr. Stanfield said this would cost the federal treasury $85,000,000 to $90,000,000 at the most, "well under 20 per cent of the federal surplus" Mr. Benson expected.

—Encouragement of Canadian-owned small business and farming enterprises with "reasonable rates of taxation." He didn't give details.

—Establishment of a capital gains tax on realized gains only and at a maximum rate of 25 per cent instead of the 50 per cent rate proposed by the government.

Rail Strike Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S.-wide rail shutdown this weekend became a distinct possibility following a breakdown in negotiations between the railways and four shopcraft unions.

Both sides in the dispute awaited a decision by Judge Howard Corcoran of the U.S. district court, who scheduled a hearing today on whether to extend restraining orders that have halted a coast-to-coast shutdown since Jan. 31.

"It was a great disappointment," Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery, the Nixon administration's chief troubleshooter in the bargaining talks, said after negotiations collapsed in Miami Beach, Fla., Thursday night. "What we have here looks like an impossible impasse."

William Winpisinger, chief negotiator for the four AFL-CIO unions, said while no plans on striking could be made until after a court decision, "the greatest mind-changer is the strike."

The unions have pledged not to strike before Saturday.

Hees Prods Sharp Into Arctic Claim

Mace Ban Likely

TORONTO (CP) — Published reports say Attorney - General Arthur Wishart will recommend to the cabinet new regulations to ban the chemical Mace and strictly limit the use of firearms and wiretapping by police.

The Toronto Telegram and The Globe and Mail said Mr. Wishart met Thursday with top Ontario police officials to discuss the new regulations.

The proposals, expected to be presented to the cabinet within the next few days, include:

—A ban on use of Mace, a chemical which temporarily blinds and immobilizes, and has been used by police in the United States as a riot-control weapon.

—Regulations limiting the use of a firearm by a policeman to situations in defence of his life, and establishing a procedure for investigation of any incident in which an officer fires a gun.

—Regulations to permit wiretapping only as a last resort and only upon receipt of permission by a judge or the attorney-general.

Mr. Wishart was not immediately available for comment on the reports.

James Renwick, member of the legislature for Riverdale and the New Democratic Party's justice critic, said he would welcome the regulations, but expressed fear about permitting judges to grant permission for wiretapping.

"I feel very strongly that this permission should be in the hands of the political body, because they are answerable to the public," he said.

Heart Attacks' Toll Is Doubled

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario deaths from heart attacks more than doubled in the period between 1931 and 1951, Dr. T. W. Anderson of the University of Toronto said Thursday.

He told the annual refresher course at the university's school of hygiene that the death rate from all causes for women between 45 and 64 had been halved in Ontario since the turn of the century, while the rate for men in the same age group had remained constant.

There had been a sharp increase in ischemic heart attacks among men.

He told the meeting that something in hard water may benefit sufferers from heart attacks. Those who have heart attacks in soft-water areas are more likely to die than those who suffer heart attacks in hard-water regions.

SAIGON (AP) — Southern allied forces killed 166 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops in sharp fighting, but the guerrillas shot down two more U.S. helicopters, raising the toll to 16 in the last 10 days, military spokesmen reported today.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau goes to the Arctic March 5-10, touching the points he missed in his first northern tour as prime minister in July, 1968. His itinerary lists nine stops, the last being Yellowknife. He will officially open the Arctic Winter Games there March 9.

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Law Reform Commission has received about 80 briefs for its first set of Toronto hearings into Sunday observance laws in the province.

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon postponed indefinitely today any major policy decisions on the U.S. oil import control system. The president released a report by a special cabinet committee which expressed divided opinion on how oil imports should be controlled.

'Northern Seas Canadian Waters'

OTTAWA (CP) — Arctic waters are Canadian waters, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday in the clearest statement to date on the question of Arctic sovereignty.

Replying in the Commons to a question by George Hees (PC-Prince Edward-Hastings,) Mr. Sharp said the United States had no grounds for challenging Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic.

Mr. Hees expressed concern over a statement by U.S. President Nixon regarding the need to "head off escalating national claims over the ocean."

He urged the government to make a clear assertion of Canadian sovereignty over the Arctic waters before it lost by default.

Mr. Sharp said Mr. Nixon could not have been referring to Canada. Canada had never made any territorial claims over waters regarded as the high seas.

"It would be difficult to argue that the Arctic waters between Canadian territory have been regarded as part of the high seas."

He said the trip of the Manhattan in Canadian waters with Canadian acquiesence and co-operation was evidence of that position.

Outside the House Mr. Sharp told reporters:

"We have regarded the Arctic waters as our waters, as Canadian waters. This has always been the position of the Canadian government."

A reporter asked when the government was going to proclaim this position. Mr. Sharp replied:

"Well, I said it."

Earlier Thursday, the public works department announced that Herschel Island, in the Beaufort Sea about a mile from the Yukon shore, may be developed as an Arctic deep-water port.

The works department has allocated $500,000 this year for a feasibility study of the project.

A department spokesman said the government is not convinced the Northwest Passage will be used by super-tankers carrying oil but wanted to be ready if it happens. The Alaska coast offers no suitable site for such a port.

Nuclear Attack Would Kill Eight Million

Ottawa Rejects EMO Suggestion $269 Million Be Spent on Shelters

OTTAWA (CP) — The Defence Research Board estimates that 8,500,000 Canadians would be killed in any nuclear assault on Canada in 1975.

The government regards the estimate as so pessimistic or alarming that it refused Jan. 21 in the Commons to make public the report containing the calculation.

The report, by the Canada emergency measures organization and entitled Project Phoenix, is secret but a copy of it has come into the hands of The Canadian Press.

It recommends that the federal government spend $269,000,000 over a period of six years to increase the chances of more Canadians surviving nuclear attack.

The government has rejected the recommendation and announced an apppropriation of $5,000,000 for the 1970-71 fiscal year for the emergency measures organization, a cut of about $1,500,000 from 1968-69.

The Defence Research Board estimate contained in Project Phoenix assumes that a total of 250 megatons—the equivalent of 250,000,000 tons of TNT—would be dropped on Canada's 17 major cities.

Of Canada's estimated 1975 population of 22,0000,000, little more than half, or 11,880,000 would survive such a nuclear attack uninjured.

Project Phoenix estimates that the number of those surviving uninjured could be raised by 1,320,000 persons with the expenditure of $269,000,000 — or about $207 each—on public fall-out shelters and related measures.

The report says that radiation would be so severe that its estimates do not take into account any possibility of recovery from radiation.

It implies that Canada might not be able to call on its own air defence command—anti-bomber missiles and manned interceptors—for any protection in event of an assault on North America.

Canada's air defence command is committed to the joint Canada-U.S. North American Air Defence Command.

The report says:

"The only defence system totally under national control and within Canada's own capability to implement is the reduction of the vulnerability of our people, institutions and resources."

Trent Canal Route in Main Follows Historic Iroquois Trail

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

This is the concluding article in a series.)

Familiarity is often said to breed contempt.

Contempt may be a rather harsh term to use to describe the attitude of inhabitants of Sidney Township toward the Trent Canal System. Indifference might be a more accurate description. Those whose daily lives have led them to accept the existence of the Trent Canal as a matter of course need to stop once in awhile and reawaken the awareness of such a great phenomenon.

The term "Trent Canal" is applied to that series of rivers and lakes which, by a system of dams, locks, short artificial channels, and two marine railways, provides 8 - Jesuits amongst them.

from Lake Ontario to Peterborough and 6-foot navigation for an additional 135 miles to Swift Rapids, as well as for eight miles from Georgian Bay to Big Chute.

It began in a small way in 1833 with the construction of a few locks on the Trent and Otonabee Rivers and on the Kawartha Lakes in order to connect the small pioneer settlements along their banks and shores. In addition to performing this vital service, these early locks and dams, supplemented by an extensive system of log slides, contributed for many years to the flourishing lumber trade of the district.

With the depletion of the forests, however, traffic began to settle down to a more prosaic freight - carrying trade. Good roads and motor transport made inroads on this traffic during the nineteen twenties and thirties, but they have also brought about a very extensive development of the route as a holiday and tourist playground, in which the canal facilities play no inconsiderable part.

This route follows in the main the historic Iroquois Trail, the pathway followed by the Iroquois in their deadly descents on the Huron tribesmen.

This was the route followed by Champlain when he discovered Lake Ontario while on a retaliatory raid with the Hurons in 1618. It may have been by this same warpath that the Iroquois returned thirty years later to annihilate the Hurons and the flourishing mission of the Jesuits amongs them.

From the western end of the Bay of Quinte at Trenton, the canal route follows the Trent River to the eastern end of Rice Lake, rising 367 feet through 18 locks. Midway along the length of Rice Lake, the route enters the Otonabee River which it follows upward through Lock 19 into Little Lake at Peterborough. The 8 - foot navigation terminates at the lower entrance to Lock 19.

Balsam Lake is the summit level of the canal. It is 598 feet above low water on Lake Ontario and 260 feet above Georgian Bay.

As all locks from Lake Ontario to Sparrow Lake are 33 feet wide, the beam of vessels navigating this section

Year of Decision

Direction of Quinte Area Planning at Crossroads

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

March 5 could be a crucial date in Quinte municipal affairs.

That's the time slot selected last night by the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board for a conference with local government representatives now agonizing over area planning.

Hopefully, the session will be a decisive influence in reshaping areas of planning authority along the lines of an economic expansion which is crossing traditional municipal boundaries.

That expansion has suddenly cast planning boards in a newly-appreciated and vital role — and 1970 will be their year of decision in the Belleville-Trenton expansion orbit.

Signalling it are the words of Zdenek Kvarda, young Belleville businessman, an outspoken, articulate vice-chairman of the board last year, who last night was acclaimed its 1970 chairman.

"This is the crucial year — and there are a lot of challenges coming," predicted Mr. Kvarda later.

"The top priority?" I think we have to settle this area planning business first."

It's a complex issue with confusing complications.

Added urgency is given the planning situation by the presence of the provincial government. Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough earlier placed three proposals for area planning before Quinte local governments.

The minister suggested three options: a county planning board, the replacement of existing planning boards with three new boards - one for Belleville, one for Trenton and one for the rest of the county; or the establishment of a joint planning area for Hastings coupled with the continuation of the Belleville area board and the revival of the Trenton and Suburban planning board.

Actions since the Dec. 3 proposals of the minister have been concurrence by the county council with the suggestion of a Hastings County planning board; endorsing of option two by Trenton and the veto of all three options by both Belleville and Thurlow Township. The latter two communities have opted for a fourth proposal of a planning board across the south portion of the county which might include Trenton and Belleville along with the townships of Murray, Sidney and Thurlow.

To compound the issue there is the village of Frankford, north of Trenton and nestling on the boundaries of Sidney and Murray townships.

Each municipality, under the Belleville - Thurlow proposals, would have a subordinate board involved with local zoning details.

Enter Sidney township . . .

Sidney council, in a letter to Mr. McKeough, dated last December and available at last night's meeting, emphasized the importance of a planning area involving the township and Frankford — now with a sizeable combined population of 10,000.

It also felt it could be part of a joint planning committee involving its municipal neighbors — but that the county could "do a real service" by co-ordinating a local planning program.

A county presence was one major issue involved, Alderman Arnold Orr told the board last night.

"I think the essential print is whether we're going to have a Hastings County Planning Board or a planning board for the southern part of the county — possibly with Murray township added — for what is commonly known as the Quinte district."

Ald. Orr was reluctant to reach any decision, however, until hearing from Sidney Reeve Jack Bush. Mr. Bush was not present at the meeting.

"I think he has some ideas and I think we should toss them around here," Ald. Orr said.

Added Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey: "I think Sidney, Thurlow and Belleville have to work together. They've been working together and they have got to continue."

The debate lies in the shadow of senior authority.

Queen's Park conceivably could see it in perspective as another we - want - this - we - want - that municipal medley and tire of waiting for local autonomy to decide the issue.

A hint of such a possibility was contained in a warning from Ald. Orr as he pressed the urgency of reaching municipal mutuality as soon as possible.

The Belleville - area board, he said, soon must produce a formula or "be stuck" with a municipal affairs department proposal for a Quinte planning area.

"We've got to come up with another positive suggestion that's acceptable to the department of municipal affairs and that we think is workable," he asserted.

The presence of yet another Bay-of-Quinte shoreline municipality at the March 5 meeting also was discussed.

Newly - acclaimed board vice - chairman pondered why Tyendinaga township should not be included.

Assistant city planner Frank Stokmans told the board he had attended a Tyendinaga township council meeting and had received the impression it desired to remain a "rural municipality."

It was decided to include Tyendinaga on the March 5 invitation list being sent to all bayshore municipalities.

'We'll All Get Together'

Some of more than 400 Trenton area youngsters celebrating Boy Scout - Girl Guide Week gather around a campfire Thursday evening on the Bay of Quinte at the mouth of the Trent River. The occasion was a mammoth skating party for scouts, guides, cubs, rovers, venturers, brownies and rangers. Tonight the joint organizations in Belleville will stage a Hobby Show of stamps, coins, handicrafts and natural science exhibits at Christ Church from 6 to 10 p.m. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Record Year at Stake

Students Tops at Blood Clinics

Mrs. W. Berry, chairman of the Trenton blood donor committee for the Red Cross was a guest speaker at the February executive meeting of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary held recently at the hospital with Mrs. W. Ellis, president in charge. Mrs. Berry spoke to the executive bringing them up to date on statistics on the blood donor clinic, stating that in 1968, 679 pints of blood were collected in Trenton and 776 pints in 1969. The first blood donor clinic to be held this year in Trenton on Monday, March 2 has an objective of at least 275 pints and Mrs. Berry is hopeful of making 1970 a record year. She also stated that 20 per cent of all the blood collected across Canada is donated by high school students.

Mrs. W. G. Norman, co-chairman of the Petticoat Lane "Good-As-New-Shop" attended the meeting and reported that they are pleased at how well the shop is doing. Cartons of articles are coming in every day said Mrs. Norman but there is a shortage of men's clothing for which there is a big demand and donations along this line would be much appreciated. Articles may be left at the shop any day, except Wednesday, from 2 - 4 p.m. Anyone wishing to make a donation may call Mrs. Norman 392-8839 and she would be pleased to pick it up. The committee of Petticoat Lane is grateful to Mr. Wayne Stratton and Mr. G. Talsma for their help in laying the rug on the shop floor and to Mrs. W. S. Bailey for the donation of a desk for the use of the workers.

Mrs. W. McLaren, director of Volunteer Services of Trenton Hospital Auxiliary attended the first general meeting of the newly formed Ontario Association of Directors Hospital Volunteer Services in Toronto Jan. 30. Although the Association is in the initial stage, Mrs. McLaren thought it a very worthwhile organization.

Mrs. H. I. Carswell, representative, C.F.B. Women's Auxiliary said the C.F.B. Auxiliary would be holding a mixed couples dessert card party Tuesday, March 17 at the A.M.D.U. at 8 p.m. and they would be pleased to have any members of the Trenton Memorial Hospital Auxiliary attend.

Mrs. Ellis, president, stated that this year the rose tag-day would be held May 8 and 9.

Mrs. Hamilton served tea and the meeting adjourned at 4 p.m.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE

Proclamation

"ONTARIO HEART FOUNDATION WEEK"

FEBRUARY 22 - 28, 1970

This is "Heart Foundation Week". During the week of February 22nd to 28th, 1970, the Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation will launch an appeal for funds.

Heart disease can affect each of us. The disease can be, and is being controlled, but this is only possible through medical research and an informed public.

The rate of progress towards the elimination of heart attacks and strokes depends on the funds available to underwrite the qualified and dedicated people who undertake this work in our university hospitals. In Ontario, your Heart Foundation has been asked to support over a million and a quarter dollars in grants-in-aid and fellowships.

Had it not been for the concerted drive in heart research over the past few years, life expectancy in Canada would not be as high as it is today. Many thousands of Canadians owe their lives to the doctors and scientists who have devoted their time and talents toward a better understanding of diseases of the heart and circulatory system.

THEREFORE, by the virtue of the authority vested in me as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I hereby proclaim the week of February 22 - 28, 1970 as

"ONTARIO HEART FOUNDATION WEEK"

Dated at the Mayor's Office
February 20, 1970
Belleville, Ontario.

Russell Scott, M.D.C.M.,

Gerald Hyde, city official, former mayor, alderman, PUC commissioner and one-time school trustee, leaves city hall, a building which has been much of his life for years.

Mayor, Trustee, Official

Hyde's Departure Ends Close Ties with City

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

In the mobile society, hometown departures can be a fairly faceless stream.

Occasionaly there's a glitter of personality in the flow that catches public attention — like Gerald B. Hyde.

Mr. Hyde this week confirmed he was resigning as city purchasing and personnel director to launch a personnel department for the Western Ontario municipality of St. Thomas.

As a city hall official Mr. Hyde has been obscured from much public attention for some years — a time when his native community itself was emerging into a new economic environment.

Yet, that emergence can be directly linked to his name.

Once, 12 years ago, Belleville fought to annex land from its township neighbors for acreage it claimed was vital for expansion.

Today, much of that hard-won space had disappeared—swallowed in unprecedented colonization by industry, commerce and housing.

Annexation — once so bitterly resented — became a fact through the persistence of the 1958-59 city hall administration.

At the time, Gerald Hyde was in his early thirties, one of the youngest mayors in Belleville's history.

His departure now from the hometown civil service is ending a record of municipal contribution — on school boards, councils and public utilities.

It's also a family tradition. His father, Charles Hyde was a city councillor whose three election campaigns produced 18 aldermanic years. At one time both father and son sat on the same council.

After a political apprenticeship on a city school board Gerald Hyde first sought election to city council in the early 1950s. He served as alderman from 1953-57.

At the end of that time, he made a bid for the mayoralty — and won.

In 1958 he took office — the second - youngest mayor in Belleville's history, a time in politics when youthful leadership was still not fashionable.

He pushed a number of objectives, notably a sewage disposal plant.

But topping them all was annexation. Belleville, at the time still had the dimensions of a large-size country town, its population 20,000.

The city's ambitions were angrily contested, particularly by the suburbs — which then began at College Street in the north, Sidney Street in the west.

"The biggest problem," recalls Mr. Hyde, "was to make the people in those areas feel they were part of Belleville — not outsiders." There were urgent reasons for annexation. "The thought, back then, was we had to get room to expand," he recalls. "This is what happened."

At the end of his one-year term he again sought the mayoralty — and was unopposed. In 1959 he continued as mayor — one of the rare occasions when the city's highest office has been held by acclamation. Simultaneously the new and bigger Belleville came into being — a city of 30,000.

Soon after, Belleville McFarlands went to Czechoslovakia and returned the world's hockey champions.

It was a crowning achievement of community spirit in a city that felt itself entering a new era.

Then came the day when Mayor Hyde called a caucus of council on the hockey team financing. Shortly after he publicly requested a royal commission to inquire into municipal financing. The investigation reported the city, seemingly unwittingly for some years, had been engaged in deficit financing.

The incident made a shambles of city hall politics, and, although he'd be the last to admit it, the political future most seriously injured belonged to Gerald Hyde.

His personal qualities, experience and proven administrative abilities, had marked him in many a local observer's mind as a sure candidate for senior government.

Typically, today he shuns revealing any conjectures on a time now past.

The hockey incident he recalls as a "tough period to go through. But that's all history, it was an unhappy set of circumstances."

Then, after four years out of public office, he again returned to the scene — this time running in an election for the city's utilities commission. As always he won — and repeated the victory two years later.

"These two elections made me feel the majority of the people of Belleville had confidence in me," he says.

The elections confirmed a hometown appreciation of the Hyde integrity. It was a quality that showed up in different circumstances later.

In 1966 he successfully sought appointment to the vacant post of city purchasing agent.

After much time spent in public service by way of politics he was continuing the record — this time as a public servant.

Every politician has relied on support. At times, the supporters of former years may seek a return of aid rendered.

Mr. Hyde was a political veteran and —, despite his public appointment — found himself in just such a position at times.

Lifelong friends and supporters from former days at first sought out the aid of his political experience in their own campaigns.

"I just can't do it as a city employee. I've put that behind me," he says. "But it's darned hard to say to a friend I can't help you — I work at city hall now."

"The world of politics is behind me. I don't intend to revive it either."

But his community activities are still as varied. For seven years he's been treasurer of Bridge Street United Church; he is secretary of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

And in recreation, he has for years been one of the city's greatest lawn bowlers — when he's not indulging a passion for bridge.

In fact, one of his first acts when deciding on the Western Ontario move was to check the availability of bowling greens.

The Hydes — including three children — move to St. Thomas where Mr. Hyde takes up his post April 1.

Dealing strictly with personnel is a job he's anticipating, he says.

Working with people is fascinating," Mr. Hyde says.

He leaves his hometown at a time when it's expanding faster than ever before in its history.

Mr. Hyde notes the number of industrialists and other new residents who have been recent arrivals.

"I'm sure they feel it's a pretty good place to be," he concludes. "Ive always felt that way.'

Hydro Asks Trenton PUC To Approve Loan Plans

TRENTON — Consideration will be given by the Trenton Public Utilities Commission to two electrical modernization plans presented to the commission Thursday evening by representatives of Ontario Hydro.

The three - man Hydro delegation asked the commission to study loan and secondary financing proposals which would be carried out by Ontario Hydro through the Trenton PUC.

Purpose of the proposals is to promote and increase the use of electricity by consumers within the PUC's jurisdiction.

Ontario Hydro representatives stressed adoption of the plans would increase electrical consumption in Trenton, and with it the PUC's revenue as well as Ontario Hydro's competitors — mainly oil and gas — have adopted similar plans and the Hydro plans would enable the PUC to remain competitive. A secondary factor mentioned is that the PUC's efficiency increases when the consumption of electricity within each individual homes increases, but decreases when the consumption drops, for the same amount of capital investment is required for each home regardless of the amount of electricity used.

Under the loan plan, assistance would be available from $100 to $2,000 with 10 per cent down payment and up to 10 years to pay at an annual interest rate of 10.5 per cent.

The money would be available for electrical appliances and installations, but 25 per cent of the loan could be spent on non - electrical expenditures.

Hydro officials said the plan would be contractor-participating and that all contractors in the plan would have to be bonded.

In the case of a dispute the bonding company would act as the final arbitrator between the customer and contractor to prevent the PUC from suffering a public relations setback.

Capital for the plan would be provided by Ontario Hydro and the PUC would be responsible only for checking the credit rating of applicants, registration fees and the role of mechanical collector with no responsibility for billing or collecting.

Under the secondary financing plan (second mortgages), Ontario Hydro through the PUC, would negotiate an agreement with the contractor to provide up to half the difference between the down payment of the property and the purchase price.

Ontario Hydro would guarantee the loan and borrow the money from a third party then charge the going interest rate for second mortgages. The degree of electrical usage in each development would be negotiable but would have to be over 80 per cent, a Hydro spokesman said.

Hydro officials said that the PUC would be wise to adopt the two proposals, stressing that the commission would get an agreement with a guarantee of business, and with the higher degree of electrical use a proportionately higher return for each dollar of capital invested.

Trent Canal Route

may not exceed 32 feet 6 inches. Their maximum length, however, depends on their build. Square - built scows are limited to a length of 110 feet but vessels of standard build may be longer. They may be up to 127 feet long if their beam does not exceed 21 feet. Vessels 35 feet longer may be accommodated up to the lower entrance to Lock 19.

In addition to being a picturesque waterway, the Trent and Severn watersheds cover an area of 7,200 square miles.

Operated from Peterborough, this system constitutes a major flood control area and contributes a considerable amount of power to private companies and to the central and Georgian Bay Divisions of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

Specifically, locks one and two are considered to be located in Trenton. Lock one with a lift of 17.6 feet, is found where the CNR tracks cross the canal and lock two just north of Highway 401. It has a further lift of 20 feet.

Lock three at Glen Miller has a lift of 27 feet.

Locks four and five in Sidney Township have identical lifts of 18 feet each. Lock six with a lift of 16 feet is located at Frankford, while lock seven at Glen Ross has a lift of 10 feet giving a total lift through Sidney Township of 126.6 feet.

There are hydro-electric power stations at locks two, three and five.

Charts for the Trent Canal are supplied by the Department of Transport and may be obtained from Trent Canal Offices, P.O. Box 567, Federal Building, Charlotte Street, Peterborough, Ont. The chart for Bay of Quinte to Rice Lake is numbered 2011 and can be obtained for a fee of $1.

The development of the Township of Sidney over the years into what it is today is due, in large part, to the fact that the Trent Canal has its beginning here. The benefits to be derived in years to come will be limited only by the degree of awareness of its importance by the inhabitants of the area.

Trenton PUC Sets Rates For Water for Sidney

TRENTON — This town's Public Utilities Commission passed a rate structure for supplying water to Sidney Township, at its regular meeting Thursday afternoon.

Trenton PUC will now send the proposed rates — more than 150 percent of the current industrial rate in Trenton — to Sidney council for its approval.

Similar to the PUC's agreement with Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, the proposal would have Sidney Township pay 100 per cent of its share of the cost of operating the PUC's filtration plant, as well as a fluctuating percentage of capital depreciation and general office expenses.

Initial rate for the water will be 35.6 cents per 1,000 gallons, but this will rise as Sidney's demand on the system increases. Based on the estimated 200,000 gallon consumption per day by Sidney in the first year, the PUC's return will be $71 per day.

In addition Sidney will pay 31 per cent of the water department's general office expenses and undistributed expenses. The ratio for capital depreciation in the first year was set at 19 per cent.

Do It Yourself

If you want to get anything done, then do it yourself. This is as good advice today as ever it was, and probably more so because of the intrusion of government in so many aspects of our affairs.

Take the wheat crisis, with prairie grain either rotting in the fields or filling the granaries with nowhere to go. One western farmer decided to do something about it; he went to Romania, at his own expense, and was told by officials there that they were willing to purchase a large quantity of Canadian wheat. They would pay less than that obtaining under the International Wheat Agreement, but no matter it would be a deal.

The farmer was interviewed on radio in Edmonton recently and by his accent it was clear he himself was European-born. He said that other wheat-growing countries were not honoring the wheat agreement; to do so would be to sell no wheat. Moreover, he charged the government with dragging its heels over finding markets for wheat.

We did not catch the farmer's name, but we are sure if there were more people willing to exercise personal initiative in this way the country would be in better shape and there would be less worry about inflation. Certainly there would be fewer farmers faced with ruin out west and more money in circulation and more business being done.

One-Upmanship

Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees, in one of his frequent brushes with the Prime Minister on the subject of living costs sparked Mr. Trudeau into a little display of one-upmanship recently. Nevertheless, Mr. Hees had the last word in the exchange (that is, not counting Mr. Speaker who then directed the Commons to another subject).

Mr. Hees had asked a question in these terms: "As the government has been urging organized labor to limit wage demands to five per cent a year, thus indicating that wage demands of that magnitude can be reconciled with the government's inflation control program, will the Prime Minister take the first opportunity on motions to explain why, during the last five years, the government has refused to grant yearly wage increases of this amount to workers on federal minimum wages, thus enabling them to keep level with the annual rise in the cost of living?"

Mr. Speaker thought the question was argumentative, but Mr. Hees persisted with a supplementary question. Mr. Trudeau protested that the question was out of order and he was not allowed to answer. Mr. Hees bore on anyway . . . "and since it is reliably reported that the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance are the two who have blocked minimum wage increases, how does the right hon. gentleman square this reactionary attitude —

Mr. Trudeau — "with the just society."

Mr. Hees — "with his promises to introduce a just society made during the last election?"

Mr. Speaker then got the Prime Minister off his "just society" hook by calling on the hon. member for Peace River, G. W. Baldwin, who proceeded to ask a question about infiltration of members of the Cosa Nostra from the United States.

Such are the niceties of Commons debate!

60th Anniversary

In a world that is undergoing many social changes and revealing many new and disturbing facets of human behavior, the Scout and Guide movements, which have been celebrating their 60th anniversary, still offer stability, companionship and sound character building for young Canadians.

The same qualities of preparedness and self-reliance which Lord Baden-Powell had in mind when he founded the Boy Scouts are still the hallmarks of the movement today, and of the Guides who became a separate branch after the first Scout rally at the Crystal Palace in London in 1909.

Spanning the years from that earlier time, a living symbol of a movement that is worldwide is Lady Baden-Powell, who at 80 is still very much involved in the work of the Scouts and Guides. She travels widely and last year was in Canada.

Scouting and Guiding have stood the test of time. They had their beginnings in the days of an Empire now vanished, and still meet the needs of youth in a society which must cope with differing concepts and new pressures.

German Talks Expected to Be Slow and Tortuous

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's latest expression of readiness to meet the prime minister of East Germany means that a new stage has begun in the still-tortuous process of thawing relations between the two governments now in charge of the old Reich.

Announcement of Brandt's attitude, which remains wary, and a negative-sounding reply from East Germany both came as Soviet and West German representatives were taking time out from their talks in Moscow to consider how these sessions have been going.

Any conference between Bonn and the Communist East in general is bound to be slow and strewn with complications.

But on Feb. 1, the cause of reconciliation apparently was strengthened by an agreement providing for the supply of Siberian natural gas to West Germany in exchange for pipeline equipment furnished by the federal republic to Russia on special terms.

A possible sign of Russian gratification over such events was Foreign Minister Gromyko's acceptance of an invitation to dine at West Germany's Moscow embassy.

Moreover, he gave many hours of his official time to the currently-adjourned talks, which have been aimed at determining how future negotiations for a mutual non-aggression pact might be arranged.

The Russians may consider it in their interest to reduce some of the snags hindering a degree of improvement in relations between their bloc and Bonn.

One report suggests that, in line with this, they may have agreed at the Moscow talks to prod their East German allies into a less rigid insistence on Bonn's full recognition of Walter Ulbricht's government.

Such recognition has consistently been termed by Ulbricht a precondition for any conference between his prime minister, Willi Stoph, and Brandt.

The conference on common problems was East Germany's idea and would confront Brandt with a stern test of his ability to walk a tightrope if it materializes.

The East Germans, commenting on the chancellor's Wednesday acceptance of the conference project, accused him of being evasive on "basic issues of ensuring peace."

But Brandt probably feels the need for great caution on the conference issue since hostility to the idea of talks is reported considerable inside his cabinet as well as among the opposition Christian Democrats.

Justice Canadian-Style—or Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction!

Kingston Whig-Standard

There is no need to go to science fiction or fairytales for grownup children for the bizarre and the quixotic. The daily annals of the administration of justice in this great country of ours provide those with an eye for them a depressingly full complement of stories of the absurd and the shocking.

Take the case of Dale Martin, age 22, an entertainer in Vancouver. Young Mr. Martin was recently unwise enough, or misguided enough, to get into trouble with the police for possession of an offensive weapon. He pleaded guilty to the charge after the court was told that he pulled a knife on a man during an argument in a cocktail lounge.

This is anti-social behavior and calls for corrective — but not necessarily punitive — action by society. Judge Leslie Bewley, who heard the case, gave Mr. Martin a suspended sentence and put him on probation, which would seem a pretty mild punishment.

But this is only to tell the lesser part of the story. In the course of the trial the court was told that Mr. Martin was responsible for three pregnancies, all of them out of wedlock. The average untrained observer might be forgiven for dismissing such evidence as immaterial, irrelevant and inadmissible at the trial. But Judge Bewley was far from taking that view.

The Judge, in the acceptable judicial manner, pontificated: "This gives me considerable concern, particularly in view of the problems communities are having due to the population explosion and the expense to which communities may be put to look after children of such unions. Therefore, I consider it wise to include in the probation order that you impregnate no further females." The prohibition is for three years — and it applies even if Mr. Martin should get married.

The temptation, of course, in commenting on something as incredible as this, is to go on and on until the details have been dragged out and laid bare in all their mad variety. But is it really necessary to perform such a dissection? Surely even the most casual consideration of the case will result in almost hilarious disbelief. Is it possible that a Canadian judge could really have passed such a sentence? Surely there must have been some mistake in the reporting. What about the maidens who were deflowered, for instance? Who is to say that they were unwilling? The court didn't say no: Mr. Martin was not on charge for rape.

When does a human being cease to be a human being and become a machine to be regulated at will by the functionaries of society — such as judges?

And, finally, how is it possible in a court of law to try a man for a specific crime and then sentence him for an alleged action which had nothing at all to do with the original charge?

In spite of the ingrained scepticism which the recorded lunacies of the administration of justice have left with us after all these years, we still confidently expect that an appeal judge will eventually be forced to make a gesture in favour of sanity (and justice, too, possibly, although the two are by no means inseparable) in this case.

Betsy Clifford

World Champion at 16

Ottawa Journal

Betsy Clifford had no business winning a skiing gold medal this year. Next year maybe, or the year after that. But she has spoiled Canadians hopelessly by moving to the front the way she did on Saturday at Val Gardena, Italy.

Those who have watched Betsy from the time she was on her first pair of skis at Camp Fortune are not surprised. There has been an air of predestination about her career from the first. All logic and experience warned that a 16-year-old should not be expected to beat the world's finest skiers. Yet once she showed that she belonged with them Betsy set us all dreaming of championships for her every time she raced.

Ottawa and Camp Fortune must now share Betsy with Canada. The secret is out; everyone knows how good Betsy Clifford is. How good she may yet be, the days and races ahead will tell. But once more Canada's ski reputation is being upheld by a daring young woman racing with the best, years ahead of her time.

Tactics of Dissent Smear U.S. Court Procedures

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP) — The shouting, swearing and fist-swinging that disrupted trials in Chicago, New York and Washington may be over for a while at least, but the tactics used and precedents set will be around to haunt the courts for a long time.

While the defendants found that antics they used so successfully on the streets and campuses did not work so well in the courtroom, the court also learned it lacked means to maintain order in controversial trials.

The disruption of court proceedings, officials fear, has become a fixed policy of groups determined to frustrate the judicial process. Because of the dangerous effects such a policy could have several committees now are studying courtroom procedure.

It started with the five-month-long trial in Chicago of eight persons on charges of conspiracy to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic national convention. It spread to New York and Washington where Black Panthers and anti-war clergymen tried to turn their trials into similar arenas.

In Chicago, defendant Bobby Seale was at one point bound and gagged on instructions of Judge Julius Hoffman because of his outbursts in court, which included calling the judge a "racist pig." He later was sentenced to four years for contempt of court.

At the conclusion of the trial last week the other seven defendants and two defence lawyers were also sentenced for contempt.

In the New York trial for several Black Panthers accused of plotting to blow up public buildings, one defendant, when asked to identify a gun, pointed it at the judge and pulled the trigger. A woman spectator shouted — "that's one dead pig." The gun was not loaded.

In Washington, where nine anti-war clergymen were found guilty of breaking into and damaging the Dow Chemical Co. office, the trial was interrupted several times by shouting and fist fights. One defence lawyer was sentenced to 30 days for contempt.

While the disorder and violence delayed and interrupted the trials, it did not stop them. It convinced the court, however, that some means of coping with these tactics must be found.

One committee of lawyers and architects is studying the possibility of keeping unruly defendants behind soundproof plastic shields except when they are testifying. Others have suggested the defendants be held in jail with the right to watch the trial on television.

No ideal solution has emerged, however, to control such antics which, during the Chicago trial and others, buried the real issue—the integrity of U.S. law in times of traumatic dissent.

The disorder in the courts helped no one. It outraged many Americans who now deplore dissension more than ever. It also convinced many young people that the U.S. system is a tool for repressing dissent.

Regional Development Is Issue

MacNaughton May Clash with Darcy McKeough

KITCHENER (CP) — The Record says Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton is preparing legislation which may lead to a power showdown between his economics and treasury department and the department of municipal affairs.

The newspaper says the legislation is expected to be introduced at the next session of the legislature and is aimed at defining the role of regional development councils in relation to provincial programs of regional government and economic planning.

The Record says there is some confusion at present in municipal circles in trying to understand how regional development councils fit in with provincial development schemes.

The Record says the proposed legislation could give new status to the regional development councils. Exact details were not available.

Mr. MacNaughton has said the role of the regional development councils is to advise the province in economic planning for local areas.

But The Record says senior civil servants in Darcy McKeough's department of municipal affairs have expressed doubt the regional development councils serve any useful purpose and are representative of local thinking.

Crossing Guards May Get New Powers

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation to give school-crossing guards authority to control traffic may be introduced soon, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Thursday night.

"I hope to have something early in the session," he said. The legislature opens Tuesday.

Toronto Ald. Ying Hope, who has advocated such a law, commented that at present Windsor is the only Ontario municipality where it is an offence for a driver to ignore a crossing guard's stop signal.

New Hamburg Police Chief Dismissed

NEW HAMBURG, Ont. (CP) — Police Chief George Thomas was convicted on three counts under the Ontario Police Act Thursday and dismissed from the force by Perth County Judge Harold Lang.

The three charges were insubordination and using abusive language, a second charge involving using abusive language, and failure to attend a police committee meeting.

Judge Lang dismissed charges of refusing to lay a charge of robbery and failing to order a constable to duty.

The convictions stemmed from a Dec. 8 police committee meeting to discuss the chief's request for overtime pay and extra vacation pay.

On Dec. 6 the chief had a conversation with Reeve David Crossman which resulted in the insubordination and abusive language charge.

The second abusive language charge was laid Dec. 8 after the chief had talked with Mayor C. L. Roth, reeve Crossman and clerk-treasurer Grant Swartzentruber.

In handing down his ruling Judge Lang said:

"I find the chief called council a bunch of crooks, that he did refer to a land deal suggesting that council made something out of it, that he did suggest that councillors 'share the cake' and that he did call the mayor a 'damned liar' more than once. . . . I find the chief guilty of this charge and the penalty is discharge."

Crime Facts, Fallacies

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Facts and fallacies about Crime in the Streets:

Fallacy: Most robberies occur "in the streets"; Fact: The majority of robberies occur in the hallways, lobbies and elevators of apartment buildings.

Fallacy: Most people who are robbed these days are also physically attacked; Fact: Fewer than 10 per cent of robbery victims indicate to the police that they had been injured during the attack.

Fallacy: Physical assaults, including rapes and murders, are mostly perpetrated upon whites by blacks; Fact: About 90 per cent of all murder, rape and assault victims are attacked by persons of the same race. The overwhelming majority of white rape and murder victims are assaulted by whites, and the same majority of black rape and murder victims by blacks.

Fallacy: The prosperous are more likely to be robbed than the poor; Fact: The poor are far more likely to be robbed than the well-to-do, and a person making less than $3,000 a year is five times more likely to be robbed than someone making more than $10,000 a year.

Fallacy: Almost all robbers are armed; Fact: only one-third to one-half of robbers are armed.

These figures are taken from an intensive 10-week study made by the New York Police Department in three different neighborhoods in the Bronx, which make up a typical cross-section of urban society. They include a black precinct, a changing neighborhood, and a white, middle-class area.

And they are substantiated by the recent study made by the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence. These studies confirm that the muggings on the street, of which so many citizens are frightened these days, are committed largely by narcotics addicts desperate for funds to get a fix, and are a matter of economics, not of race.

Actually, violent crimes cut across race lines much less frequently than non-violent burglaries and robberies; while murders, as every criminologist has long known, are in 75 per cent or more of cases committed by relatives, friends or acquaintances in the same milieu, and not by strangers. The poor, the black, the unemployed, the alienated, the alcoholic and the addicted, are the chief murder victims.

Certainly crime has risen in the U.S. in the last decade, and we must be concerned about it. But the best way to take effective action is to begin with the facts and to reject hysterical fallacies.

Nixon Says Aid to Catholics For Schools Is Vital Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Thursday that he would "have to consider the implications" for his position if the party's annual meeting rejects a legislature caucus statement on extension of public financing to senior grades in Roman Catholic high schools.

Mr. Nixon told a news conference at the opening of the two-day meeting of the provincial party that the separate school issue "is the most important issue facing delegates from the viewpoint of the party leader."

The 27-man Liberal caucus last fall issued a statement calling for extension of government support to senior grades in the separate school system where assistance now ends at Grade 10.

The statement said this should be done if the grades, now considered private schools, were turned over to elected school boards. It asked for a legislature committee to study ways in which the extension could be put into effect without an undue increase in the costs of education.

The statement was immediately rejected by the president of the university Liberals and by Liberals who were running on a party ticket in Toronto's municipal elections.

Mr. Nixon Thursday said he is unaware of any split in caucus over the statement. He did not believe that some members of caucus had reversed themselves, as was reported in Toronto.

Ontario Liberals Will Challenge Tax White Paper

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal policies on Indian affairs and tax changes will be challenged today and Saturday when the Ontario Liberal Party in Ontario acts on 40 resolutions submitted to the annual meeting.

A resolution on the federal government's white paper on tax change, mild in its criticism and confined to two sections, is likely to be much stronger in tone before a final decision is made on it.

The resolution prepared by the provincial party's policy committee says "the Liberal party in Ontario disapproves of sections of the white paper on taxation dealing with the plan to tax the first $35,000 in earnings of small businesses at the same 50-per-cent rate as large corporations, and with the proposal to collect capital gains tax on a five-year accrual basis."

Finance Minister Edgar Benson will attend today's discussion of the federal proposals.

A second resolution aimed at the federal government urges a "go-slow policy" toward proposals made in a white paper on Indian affairs.

It calls for further consultation with Indian people before any policy proposals are adopted.

Only 16 of the 40 resolutions are new ones. The remainder were left over from the 1969 annual meeting and include such minor items as a suggestion for bounties on wolves—an old chestnut in Ontario—and for compensation for victims of crime—already in effect in the province.

The new resolutions include a call for a provincial ombudsman, a criticism of Canadian Pacific Railway for discontinuance of some passenger lines and a proposal that all residents make payments to the unemployment insurance fund.

Prime Minister Trudeau will address a noon luncheon in the National Arts Centre today and Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon will speak at noon Saturday.

Mr. Nixon also will face delegates in defence of the performance in the legislature of his 27-member caucus.

Fire Prevention at Belleville Hospital Topic of Interest at WHA Meeting

'Fire prevention at the Belleville General Hospital' proved to be an interesting and informative talk as given by Walter F. Todd at the February meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. Introduced by Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, the members learned that Mr. Todd is the superintendent of building services, also a consultant on the fire prevention committee at the hospital.

"It is a fallacy to believe any building can be made fireproof, at best, it can be fire resistant," stated Mr. Todd. This is particularly true when referring to hospitals. Every member of the hospital staff should be aware of the existing dangers involved in a fire and equipment to control the fire should be located at strategic points. The use and operation of this equipment must be known by the staff.

Although many fires may be small in origin, it is strongly recommended that the fire department be notified as soon as the fire is discovered. Fire extinguishers are for immediate use, as they contain a limited quantity of extinguishant. These extinguishers, which require care and maintenance at regular intervals, should be properly located and of the proper type. Mr. Todd brought several types of fire extinguishers which he displayed at the front of the room. He told the women about their contents and demonstrated their utilization.

Fire hoses are located throughout the buildings, however, it is recommended that only those people who are familiar with their use should employ them. There are also many sprinkler heads in the hospital, along with a control centre, often called 'the brain'. Every call is relayed here, which enables the personnel to reach the affected area quickly.

Through the new and old buildings are installed many hundreds of heat detectors. The garbage and laundry chutes have a water sprinkling device which is activated when the temperature rises beyond a certain level. Manual fire alarm stations are installed in all corridors and exits. Bells create confusion when warning of a fire, but are effective.

In the parking lots five hydrants are connected to that water main in the event the water supply within the hospital fails. In order to prevent the fire from spreading, automatic and semi-automatic fire doors are situated in the corridors. If a fire occurs in a patient's room, the nurse is well versed on proper procedure as to evacuation.

The all clear is announced by the switchboard. Fire drills are held once a month. The appreciation of the members were expressed to Mr. Todd by Mrs. N. K. Manning.

Mrs. B. E. Burley welcomed two returning members to the meeting. It was noted in the holiday treats report that heart - shaped book marks had been placed on the patients' trays for Valentine's Day. A motion was made to give Easter plants to the patients.

A member of the Opportunity Shop committee, Mrs. F. A. Beeby gave a cheque to the auxiliary in the amount of $800.00, the proceeds from the January operation of the shop. In order to enter the March meeting, each member must bring an article to be sold, the proceeds of which will aid the shop.

In the hospital volunteer statement, Mrs. H. W. Adams asked for library cart, paediatric playroom and cradle picture volunteers. Mrs. Brian Shouldice will interview these prospective volunteers on Tuesday mornings, while Mrs. Adams will do it on Wednesday mornings. Magazines are desperately needed. Please leave any that you have at the admitting desk.

Congratulations from the auxiliary were extended to Rt. Reverend J. P. Sullivan now chairman of the Board of Governors. The president, Mrs. Burley, has been honored with appointments both to the planning and property and the public relations committees.

Mrs. J. E. Nelles in her report regarding the annual luncheon stated her pleasure at having a sell out. She also extended sincere appreciation to members of her committee.

Extensive plans are being formulated to honor the last nurses' graduation class from the Belleville General Hospital's School of Nursing. The auxiliary is privileged to have Mrs. D. G. Burr on the planning committee for that weekend and Mrs. J. B. Durrant on the social committee.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

STIRLING HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

STIRLING — On Monday afternoon Feb. 16 32 members of Stirling Horticultural Society convened in River Valley WI centre.

The president, Mrs. Floyd Armstrong presided and the various officers gave their reports. In the correspondence a letter was read from the nursery which will supply two premium plants.

The next meeting will be held Monday afternoon, March 16 in the basement of St. Paul's United Church. Plans were made for the annual flower show on Thursday, June 11.

Several readings centred around garden help, bulb culture and insecticides. Hot house flowers were given by Mrs. Ashley Brooks, Mrs. Harry Waite, Mrs. Ted Reynolds, Mrs. Harry Jeffries, and the president. Tulip bulbs were displayed as well. One article stresses that flowers should always be worn as they grow "blossoms up, stems down". Flowers add grace and charm to every costume and they can be worn on the wrist, collar and belt of a dress. They can also be worn in the hair.

Mrs. Harry Morrow conducted a sing song of old favorites after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. Goldie McInroy thanked those who had assisted with the work.

VICTORIA WILLING WORKERS

In spite of the stormy unpleasant evening on Tuesday ten members of the Victoria Willing Workers gathered at the home of Mrs. Harry Knox for the February meeting.

The persident Mrs. Wetherall called the gathering to order and opened in the usual manner. Among business matters considered was the games night to be held at the Montgomery Home on March 24 for which plans were made. Mrs. Eldon Adams, program convener, assisted by other members with readings presented a fine program.

At the close Mrs. Knox and committee served lunch.

Computer-controlled Dream Kitchen

COLOGNE, West Germany (Reuters) — Computer - controlled cooking, decor like the inside of a spaceship and a television monitor to watch the baby may be commonplace in the European kitchen of the future.

Swiss - Polish designer Luigi Colani included these features in his exhibit at the international furniture fair here.

The housewife no longer will have to pace between shelves, stove and sink, but will sit comfortably in a swivel chair. In Colani's eight - foot - diameter kitchen globe, she is surrounded by control buttons, television monitors and cooking equipment — all an arm's length away.

Colani doesn't believe in sophisticated recipes requiring complicated preparation. He forsees deep-frozen, ready - made meals which can be thawed instantaneously in a microwave compartment.

TV monitors attached to the ceiling keep a watchful eye on the rest of the family elsewhere in the home.

To make his kitchen look less like an efficient space laboratory, Colani has the whole interior colored bright orange.

The dream kitchen costs $114,550 but it is not for sale.

Western Plant Now Making Clog Shoes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Because of Wagner Munk, more girls are clip-clopping around in clogs these days.

Mr. Munk set up his Phoenix Manufacturing Ltd. plant, which makes the leather-and-wood shoes, in 3,000 square feet of rented space in nearby Port Coquitlam when he returned from his native Denmark last year.

But before he came back to Vancouver, he brought with him the contents of a clog-and-sandal-making factory.

Then, with a staff which now totals 18, they began turning out what he claims to be the first clogs and wooden sandals made in North America.

He says production runs between 300 and 500 pairs a shift and there is no letup in sight.

Currently he and partner John Vanderhorst, a former Manitoba rancher, are planning expansion of the line by introducing high-heeled clogs and sandals and a workman's wooden-soled shoe with a metal safety cap.

They say the shoe will have excellent potential in places like slaughterhouses or chemical plants where leather boots deteriorate quickly.

Mr. Munk also holds a patent for a clog with a reversible upper. This means the fashion - conscious clog-wearing girl of the future will be able to reverse the leather part, which will have a different color on the other side.

All of the footwear starts as white poplar wood—chosen because it is light and tough. The raw material is shaped in copying machines which make four shoes at a time. The shoes are then sanded, fitted with rubber undersoles and mated with the leather upper.

St. Andrew's UCW Holds Bake Sale

MARMORA — "Hearts and Flowers" gaily decorated the tables at the Valentine bake sale held by the UCW on Friday at Bennett's Insurance Office. The home-baked goodies were attractively displayed and many a "sweet-tooth" must have been satisfied over the weekend.

Appreciation of the UCW is extended to Mrs. Ron McGarvey, convener, to members for their assistance, to friends who patronized the sale, and to Mr. Gordon Bennett for the use of his office for the sale.

Ontario Climate Colder Than Nurses Expected

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The decision by eight of 16 nurses from the Korean Railroad Nursing School class of '67 — that they should come to southern Ontario for its warmth — must seem ludicrous to them with the record-breaking below-zero cold spell which has plagued the area.

Mrs. Young Sook Hanna, a graduate from the school in Seoul, South Korea, who now works in geriatrics at London's Westminster Hospital laughed at her decision as she looked out the window of her London apartment at the snow on the ground.

Jededi Weeks, an American missionary who is spiritual counsellor at the Korean nursing school, encourages all graduates to work in North America to broaden their experience, she said.

Immigration to Canada is less difficult than to the United States and there is less racial discrimination, so he suggests the girls come to Canada. Because Korean girls prefer warm weather, southwestern Ontario is the best he can do for them in terms of climate.

To enter the U.S. a nurse must work two years at her profession in Korea and then is allowed in only as an exchange student for further study.

"Mr. Weeks said that because of the restriction this would cause, one couldn't fully integrate into the society and learn about it," Mrs. Hanna said.

In the last 10 years, 30 of the 44 Korean nurses who have come to North America from the nursing school have come to Ontario, most of them to the southern part, warm weather or not.

"I like it here even though it is cold," Mrs. Hanna said. "There is more opportunity for me in Canada."

But she has found some warmth. She married a Canadian, John Hanna, a newspaper librarian in London.

Recipe for Genuine Italian Pizza

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Praise be! My daughter has decided she wants to make her own Pizza. is because she has a wonder- This is because she has a wonderful Italian boy friend who dislikes the commercial product. Mary would you give recipe in your column for she reads it all the time? — SUSAN M.

ANSWER: Hurrah! Another youthful follower.

GENUINE ITALIAN PIZZA
(Repeated from July 1967)
(Two 12")

Dough:
1 cup lukewarm water
1 tsp. sugar
1 pkge. granular yeast
1 tsp. salt
¼ cup cooking or salad oil
2¾ cups sifted al-purpose flour

TOPPING:
1 tsp. oregano
1 tsp. salt
One 6-oz. can (2-3 cup) tomato paste
½ cup water
½ lb. sliced or cubed Mozzarella cheese
2-3 lb. sliced Polish sausage (or cooked pork sausages) 1-3 lb. mushrooms, sliced (gently sauteed 3 min. in 1 tbsp. butter)
12 sliced stuffed olives (or salad olives)
2 or 3 tbsps. chopped greeen pepper
2 tbsps. olive or cooking oil.
2 tbsps. grated Parmesan or old Cheddar cheese

PIZZA DOUGH:

Add the 1 tsp. sugar to the 1 cup lukewarm water in a large mixing bowl and sprinkle yeast over top give it one stir; let soak for 10 min. Then add the salt and oil and all but ¼ cup of the flour. Mix as well as you can, then turn out on board floured with the remaining ¼ cup flour and knead 100 times. Return to greased bowl and let rise until doubled. Punch down dough and with floured hands divide into two balls. Have ready two large oiled baking sheets or proper 15" pizza pans and on each press a ball of dough with palms to form a very thin uniform circle 12" in diameter, slightly thicker at edges.

TOPPING:

In a little bowl mix together the oregano, salt, tomato paste and water (using water to rinse out tomato paste can). Set aside. Then on each round of dough arrange all over in rings, the Mozzarella cheese, then the sausage, mushrooms, green pepper and olives. They will overlap. Spoon half of the tomato sauce mixture evenly over each. Sprinkle half of oil and half of the grated cheese over each. By this time the dough has risen a little and it is ready to be baked. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 25 to 30 min. until dough is well baked on bottom, cheese is melted and top is bubbling hot. Serve hot if possible.

NOTES: 1) I like this variation: Use one small can drained anchovies instead of the sausage. 2) If you use pork sausage sprinkle a little garlic salt over pizzas before baking.

Surgery Not Cure For Some Snoring

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Because of your advice, I contacted a surgeon to have my snoring corrected by "simple surgery."

ANN LANDERS

I was informed that surgery cannot cure normal snoring. If a polyp or other growth is causing the snoring, surgery might help. I am enclosing a note from my doctor substantiating these facts. And, incidentally, I am $10 poorer, due to your lousy advice. Thanks for nothing. — J.G.F. — Austin, Tex.

DEAR TEX: Enclosed is my cheque for $10 plus two 6c stamps. You broke even. Or, perhaps, you came out ahead. You had a physical examination which you would not have had otherwise. And you learned from the examination that you do not have polyps or any other type of obstruction. (Good news, wasn't it?)

My advice was misleading, however. What I should have said was some snoring can be corrected by simple surgery, but there is no cure for physiologic snoring. It is caused by a loss of muscle tone. The only solution is to ask the snorer to please turn his head to the side (this doesn't always help) or use earplugs. Bring on the wet noodle. I'll take my 20 lashes.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I comment on the letter from the irate telephone information operator whose nerves were shot because she kept getting calls from kooks wanting to know how to get gum out of a kid's hair, Robert Young's home address and how many eggs go into an angel food cake.

The United States has the largest communications network in the world yet we have no general information operators to handle offbeat questions. In Switzerland any party can call General Information and get a true "A" note for tuning his violin or instructions on how to change a tire or deliver a baby.

It is inexcusable that a sophisticated electronic system such as ours is so backward. Please say so. — WORLD TRAVELER.

DEAR WORLD: I don't happen to agree, but thanks for a provocative letter.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to respond to the woman who described her life with an alcoholic — before she got wise and tossed him out. The real reason is why would a woman spend 38 years with an abusive brute who knocked her around and terrified her children? Why did she rescue him repeatedly from jails, hospitals and women's bedrooms? A wife who would do this is as sick as her alcoholic husband.

I was one of those women, but it didn't take me 38 years to get smart. The change came when I accepted the notion that each of us is responsible for himself. Me included. — FOUND SERENITY.

DEAR FOUND: You can't say what happened to your husband, but a great many women who wrote to me said their husbands straightened around when it became apparent they would no longer clean up after them, pay their bills and bail them out of jail.

* * *

Confidential to NEED A PAL: I hope your facts are correct, Buster, because I'm going to bat for you. Parents sometimes impose too heavy a sentence when they are angry. A 17-year-old boy shouldn't have to sweat a 90 day grounding for slapping his sister. Thirty days is more like it.

Successful Living

Learning from Experience

By DORIS CLARK

A story is told about little Jimmy who went to see Snowwhite and the Seven Dwarfs. They arrived in the middle of the picture, just at the point where the wicked stepmother offers Snowwhite the poisoned apple.

When that spot comes around again in the second showing, Johnny and his mother are leaving the theatre. Johnny glances back as they walk up the aisle, exclaims, "If she eats that apple again, she's crazy!"

At least Johnny knows something about learning from experience.

Dear Doris: After reading a letter in your column I had to write to tell ypu of the help the Family Bureau of Winnipeg has given our family.

After so many unhappy years and when the friction in our home made it impossible for me to even think I could keep the family together, I was directed by a lawyer to call the Bureau. I thank him and the Winnipeg Family Bureau for the help we received.

This works slowly, but you stick with it as this is your only hope. In time, and not as long as you might think, everything takes its proper place. We have a whole new marriage now and our children are happy and good kids.

My husband and I are enjoying our marriage as we never had. I thank our worker at the Winnipeg Family Bureau. — It's All Worth It.

Dear Worth It: I'm glad. I know you can't mend a broken heart or a broken family overnight.

Your report will encourage others to give it the good old college try — and to hang on like the proverbial British bulldog.

Dear Doris: I would like The Telegram (poem) so I can recite it to my four lovely grandchildren. I don't know what this poem is about but I hope it will help the children to realize what a good loving mother they have, what a good husband and father my son is and what a kind, loving and considerate daughter - in - law I have.

I live with them, and I know you must give love to receive it; you must be kind to receive kindness. Life is a two - way street, let us all walk on both sides.

Your column is the first I look at when I receive the paper. It reflects the type of person you are. I am happy, through our paper, to call you my friend. — Granny.

Dear Granny: And your warm remarks give me a picture of a wise and loving grandmother. You know the secret of give - and - take and how to bring about a successful three - generation home!

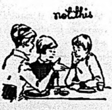
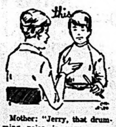
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jerry, for heaven's sake, sit up straight and stop drumming on the table with your knife. Why can't you ever show better manners at the table?"



Mother: "Jerry, that drumming noise is very annoying to me. I can't hear what your father is telling me about his day at the office."

Teen-agers may drive parents to distraction with annoying actions. Sometimes, it's on purpose; sometimes they are unaware of the annoyance. Put a stop to such action as calmly as possible without making a major issue of it.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange were mixed in light mid-morning trading today.

The market posted a small gain Thursday after a strong rally that began Wednesday ran out of steam about mid-session Thursday.

On index today, industrials were up .03 to 179.19 and base metals .20 to 112.45. Golds lost .79 at 145.62, a 1970 low, and western oils .41 to 202.83.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 489,000 shares compared with 588,000 at the same time Thursday.

Losses outnumbered gains 115 to 106 with 213 issues unchanged.

Chrysler dropped 2½ to 28½. The company said it expects first-quarter loss of $10,000,000 to $40,000,000 in 1970 compared with a profit of $48,000,000 in the similar 1969 period.

Last week, Chrysler cut its quarterly dividend to 15 cents from 50 cents.

Electrohome gained ½ to 33. The stock dropped 1⅛ Thursday although the company reported 1969 earnings of $3.69 a share compared with $1.57 in 1968.

Atco Industries slipped ⅛ to 14¾ despite first-quarter earnings of $445,000 compared with $2,600 in the similar period last year.

On Thursday, the market posted a small gain but closed well below its best level of the season.

The market opened fractionally lower but turned around in the first hour of trading and continued a strong rally that began Wednesday.

The peak of Thursday's advance was reached about three hours after the market opened and after that prices began to come back.

Wednesday's sharp gains more than erased Tuesday's heavy losses.

'Special' Youngsters' Greatest Need Is to Be Accepted

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

These children are exceptional, but they are special, too. And their greatest overriding need is to be accepted as people in their own right.

That's what Mrs. Kay Pryor, principal of then ewly renamed Belleville School for Retarded Children will tell you if you ask about "her children."

You have only to talk to her for five minutes to realize how much she cares about her "special" youngsters as she calls them, and how hard she strives to carry this compassion and understanding to the hearts of the public.

But she equates helping her 39 young students just as important as fostering their acceptance by the world outside.

The school was originally founded for the care of Mongoloid children — but the picture has changed a great deal since then — and so has the name.

Now unofficially known as the William R. Kirk School, all that remains is the formal ceremony to be held later this month.

"William R. Kirk has been known throughout the province for his work with retarded children. He was also executive director of the Ontario association for eight years, and has continued to be recognized for his efforts on behalf of these children," said Mrs. Pryor.

She emphasized the need for education of the public, saying an ill-informed public results in gross misunderstanding of the children and their problems.

Students in the school are not admitted simply on the basis of IQ, but on whether the child can cope mentally and emotionally with a regular school curriculum.

"Most of the children can be trained and are often retarded in one area only," explained Mrs. Pyror.

"Some cannot remember, and therefore cannot retain facts. This drastically limits their ability to progress academically. Others cannot reason. An overwhelming percentage of these inabilities is the result of brain damage suffered at birth or at a very young age. And brain damage is permanent."

"It is rare indeed to find a child retarded in every way," she added.

The school offers these children the opportunity to go as far academically as they are able by providing a stimulating environment.

"Let me get back for a moment to how the picture for these children has changed. The programming has changed too," observed the principal.

"We are not here simply to entertain these youngsters, or occupy them doing crafts all day. We are here to help them learn as much as they can".

And the key is effort.

"Each child in this school tries to the limit of his or her ability . . . even though the odds are stacked against them, they try to use every bit of IQ they have . . ." said Mrs. Pryor.

Children are admitted to the school between the ages of five and 18, and come from all parts of the county — which, according to Mrs. Pryor, points up the need for more schools like William R. Kirk in the Quinte area.

"At the present time our facilities are becoming inadequate for our growing number of students. We are at full capacity now, and will have to establish a waiting list for any future enrolments," she remarked.

"We are hoping to be able to move into larger and more suitable facilities in the near future", said Mrs. Pryor.

But perhaps even more pressing is the need for her students, and thousands like them to be accepted by the public and educators like Mrs. Pryor are tireless in their efforts to help make this happen.

"I try to involve our students in as many outside activities as possible — visiting the library, riding a bus or going to a restaurant," she remarked.

As part of her efforts, Mrs. Pryor has spoken to several groups in the city, attempting to bring home the understanding of the problems these children face — particularly to the young people in the community.

Mrs. Pryor, who taught English for ten years at BCI, has been principal of William R. Kirk for the past two years.

"I had taught several terminal classes during my career at BCI, and a school inspector suggested I specialize — and I haven't regretted it since," stressed Mrs. Pryor.

She spoke about the qualifications needed for teachers who decide to specialize in this field.

The minimum qualification is an elementary school teaching certificate, plus summer courses in teaching trainable retarded children," said Mrs. Pryor.

"All teachers involved in this work have to de dedicated, because that's the type of work it is. Frustration is bound to occur when a child is using his utmost capacity to learn, and shows so little improvement over long periods of time."

"But, then — even the slightest breakthrough is a reward," she continued.

"Our project right now is the school band, which the children are very enthused about," Mrs. Pryor related.

She explained that the children, even though they may be limited in their mental capacity, always seem to have an amazing innate sense of rhythm.

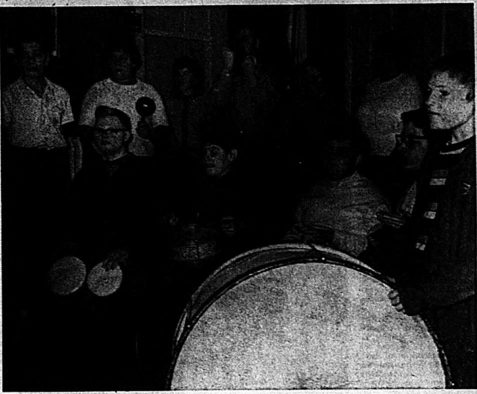
"In fact, they are so good we hope to have them playing before the students of BCI at an assembly in March."

Mrs. Pryor expressed the need for extra musical instruments — so the band can sound even better. "If anyone has any spare instruments that they no longer use and are just taking up space around the house, our students will make good use of them, believe me."

Looking back on her two years as principal of the William R. Kirk School, Mrs. Pryor said, "I have found these youngsters more like than unlike others. And their greatest need still remains to be accepted as people in their own right."

Looking Forward

Principal of the newly re-named Belleville School for Mentally Retarded now known as the William R. Kirk School, Mrs. Kay Pryor looks forward to an improved program for her students, and possibly bigger and better facilities in the near future.



Wealth of Musical Talent . . .

The senior class at the William R. Kirk School has been working hard in preparation for their stage debut. The group will play before BCI students at an assembly scheduled sometime in March, and have been rehearsing diligently for quite some time to ensure a top performance.

Need for Services Always Greater Than Supply H. Fast Says

Members of the Belleville Family "Y" crowded into the YMCA building auditorium for the organization's annual meeting last night.

Following dinner, the members conducted the business of electing new officers, receiving reports and acknowledging the past year's events.

President of the YMCA in Belleville for 1968 and 1969, Harry Fast gave the president's report before passing his office to new president John Hayman.

Mr. Fast said that the family 'Y' is working hard to become an even more vital and relevant part of the life of Belleville.

"The need for services to people is always greater than available funds to provide such services," he said. "Your Y directors have explored ways and means of putting the association on a sounder financial basis."

"I can report progress in the reduction of the capital debt against our Y building. All building fund receipts in 1969 were applied against the mortgage. The balance owing on Dec. 31 was $80,966," he said.

YMCA members learned last night that the organization operated in the red in 1969.

A report by treasurer Jack Mosley, showed an operating deficit of $7,621 which included unpaid taxes of $6,190.

Total revenue for 1969 amounted to $72,985, including a United Community Services shot-in-the-arm of $31,000. Expenditures amounted to $80,607.

John Hayman was elected president of the YMCA with Jack Mosley and Eric Runacres serving as first and second vice-president. Mrs. D. Lockyer was elected secretary.

New directors to serve on the Y board until 1971 are D. G. Burr, Gerald Cunningham, Fred Deacon and Mrs. D. I. MacKinnon.

Serving until 1973 are David J. Davey, Richard Ellis, Dr. C. Lenk, Jack Mosley, Jack Parrott, Mrs. H. J. Rowe, Maurice Switzer, Eric Runacres and Donald Williams.

Posted to the organization's advisory board were Judge J. C. Anderson, J. W. Deacon, Walter Elliott, G. A. Freeman, Jack Ireland, W. L. McDougall, C. B. Morgan, D. G. Williams, W. S. Wills, Vern Weir, and C. I. Wilson.

Two leadership fellowship certificates were awarded at last night's meeting.

Mrs. Edith Rowe received the citation for outstanding leadership in aquatic instruction for the past three years. William Rushlow, coach for the YMCA diving group for four years also received the

Create Youth Programs Tuned to Problems, Y Told

Members of the Belleville Family YMCA last night were challenged to become more aware of youth problems and make the rest of Canada take note of meaningful work that can be done with young people.

The challenge was offered by John Pyper, under contract with the National Council of YMCAs to examine youth problems.

Mr. Pyper began his address and discussion by showing a film concerning the work of detached youth workers in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto.

The film outlined needs for youth centres and such detached workers. It showed some of the problems, the desire of youth — to work out problems — including drugs—together.

Following the film, Mr. Pyper told the YMCA members that they would have to get involved in the national task group on youth.

He said that different ideas in coping with youth were being tried elsewhere.

"Everyone felt they were doing something meaningful. They wanted other people in organizations to do something," he said.

At Mr. Pyper's suggestion his address took on the image of a discussion with the Y members, and all opinions were aired before the meeting.

In discussion, he added that the Y was not participating in programs with youth who were more interested in "rapping" than participating in athletics. Nor were schools or the churches interested.

He recommended non-athletic programs and spoke of detached youth workers who sat in restaurants and talked with youth.

"Any program a kid is not enthused with is a useless program," he said.

He said there was a growing number of youth out with placards in the major cities of the world trying to do something.

Mr. Pyper added that drugs were a problem now, but it was only a symptom of the real problem. In four years, if it was not drugs, it would be something else, he warned.

He said that many young people were saying they had nothing to do.

"So many kids are saying it that we must find it significant," he added. "Many want to sit and smoke hash and talk about love and the world's social problems."

Mr. Pyper told the YMCA members that they could grapple with the problem because it was right in their back yards.

Responding to a statement by a member of his audience he admitted that society was built on time and that this fact meant many people felt they didn't have time to work with youth.

Another Y member suggested that detached youth workers would need training.

Mr. Pyper explained that there was a feedback of training as the numbers of such workers grew. Money is no problem in hiring trained youth workers. The benefits would repay the cost.

"You find the worker who does a good job and you'll find the money," he said.

A third Y member suggested that adults could take a good look at themselves before they analyzed youth and its problems.

Township Council Suggests Road Changes

TWEED — The Township Council for Huntingdon met for its February meeting in the hall recently when a number of business items were discussed.

It was decided that the clerk will write the Hastings County Road committee requesting their support to the resolutions passed by the Township of Huntingdon to have passing lanes on Highway 37, at Roslin, and on Highway 62 at the Ridge Road corner, and that two single lanes be put under the railway at Moira Lake.

It was also noted that the 1970 fire wardens are: chief fire warden, John Stephens; fire wardens, K. A. Holland, Leonard Jones, Donald McInroy and Elmer Wilson.

A number of bills were presented for payment and the meeting adjourned.

Murray Defers Decision On Attending Workshop

WOOLER — The possibility of sending council representatives to the Diamond Triangle planning committee workshop in Port Hope March 7, was deferred for further study last night by Murray Township council.

Created to steer planning toward formation of a growth centre in the Port Hope-Cobourg area and filling the space between the Oshawa and Belleville - Trenton areas. The Diamond Triangle planning committee is sponsoring the workshop to prepare the area for regional government.

D. F. Taylor director, community planning branch, department of municipal affairs, will be the guest speaker at the workshop which will also hear a report from a committee of planning boards chaired by Read Budge.

Murray council's decision to study the workshop's importance was deferred because the township is located in the eastern end of the Northumberland - Durham County and is economically and geographically oriented towards the Trenton - Belleville area.

In recommending three area planning boards with joint planning committees to the department of municipal affairs, Trenton council asked that Murray Township be included with Trenton in any regional planning system.

Murray Seeking Answer To Firm's Waste Disposal

WOOLER — Murray Township council agreed last night to try and arrange an open meeting of council, township ratepayers and Stokely-Van Camp of Canada Ltd. officials and engineers, as well as representatives of the Ontario Water Resources Commission and the province's Air Pollution Board.

Purpose of the meeting would be discussion of the Trenton firm's proposed waste disposal system.

Former councillor Walter Thompson last night headed a 12 - member delegation of township residents voicing concern to council over the proposed waste disposal system on a 49 - acre site in Murray Township.

Expressing the fear that: "We're going to be left holding the bag", the delegation said that they would not tolerate the Trenton plant's proposed waste disposal system if there was a remote chance of a pollution problem.

However the residents stressed that they were not against the company disposing of its waste on the Murray Township site if it would do no harm.

Council is currently awaiting a decision from the OWRC and the Air Pollution Board on Stokely-Van Camp's proposal to pump their liquid effluent through an irrigation line onto the Canadian National Railways land which the company has leased for 10 years.

Company officials told council previously that the waste disposal system would be in operation for only three or four summer months and that the possibility of odor from the effluent was remote.

Last year the OWRC ordered the Dufferin Street firm to stop deumping its effluent into the Bay of Quinte and suggested the firm hook into the Trenton sewer system or find a suitable alternative.

However, Stokely - Van officials emphasized that the cost of joining Trenton's sewer system would be prohibitive and the plant would have to cease its operations here unless another alternative was found.

Delegation members wondered who had the final say in the matter and spokesman Thompson demanded: "They (whoever has the last say) should give us a full guarantee in writing that if there is a pollution problem we should have our taxes paid or the disposal system would be moved off the Murray Township site."

The fact that all commercial taxes paid by Stokely-Van Camp go to the town of Trenton and Murray's Township's only financial return from the company is the revenue farmers derive from selling crops to the vegetable processing firm prompted the comment further:

"It's Trenton's industry so it should be Trenton's worry. Why are they picking on Murray Township when they could spray the liquid effluent onto Hannah Park (located in and owned by the town of Trenton)."

Another delegation member feared the effect the effluent would have on local water supplies, which come underground from the north, not from the Bay of Quinte to the south. Stress here was placed on the fact that Trenton wouldn't supply water to the township and the township couldn't afford to take on this service itself if the supply were affected by the liquid waste.

Spokesman Thompson claimed: "Our homes are only worth what our wells are worth," and suggested that the proposed site included slightly swampy land vulnerable to problems such as odor, flies and rats.

Reeve Harry Lafferty assured the delegation that council has only listened to the firm's proposal and has not granted any authority or approval as yet.

Councillor Stan Brown asked the delegation to submit its thoughts in writing so that council could have something tangible to refer to so there could be no misrepresentation of the delegation's stand.

Cy Macdonald, the chairman of the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority, said the authority had no power to act in a case such as this. He said the decision lay in the hands of the OWRC which will conduct soil and air pollution tests on the site before rendering a decision on Stokely-Van Camp's proposal.

Hawks Nip North Stars to Tighten Race for Bottom Berth

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The torrid East Division race for a National Hockey League playoff spot tightened up again Thursday night as Chicago Black Hawks nipped Minnesota North Stars 3-2 and Detroit Red Wings hung on for a 3-3 tie with New York Rangers.

In the only other NHL game, involving West Division clubs, the hometown Los Angeles Kings were drubbed 6-1 by Pittsburgh Penguins who moved into a tie for second place with Philadelphia Flyers.

The Chicago victory moved them to within one point of fourth-place Detroit. The Black Hawk victory also extended Minnesota's winless streak to 17 games while the Rangers, leading the east were prevented from winning their 1,000th game since joining the NHL.

At Chicago, Bobby Hull, with his 26th, Doug Jarrett's first of the season and Jim Pappin were the Black Hawk scorers. Pappin's goal came at 11:35 of the third period and gave Chicago a 3-1 lead.

Scoring for Minnesota were Jean-Paul Parise and Bob Barlow, the North Stars 34-year-old rookie.

The team's traded first-period goals before Jarrett's 65-foot blast eluded Minnesota goalie Ceasar Maniago to give the Hawk's a 2-1 lead. The Hawks blistered Maniago with 43 shots, including 37 in the first 40 minutes, while Chicago's Dennis DeJordy handled 31 in the Black Hawk goal.

New York needed goals by Bob Nevin and Vic Hadfield in the third period to overcome a 3-1 Red Wing lead before 14,388 Detroit fans.

Defenceman Arnie Brown scored the other Ranger goal while Detroit got scores from Garry Unger, his 30th of the year, Wayne Connelly and Billy Dea.

The game was a costly one for the Rangers who lost defenceman Brad Park for an indefinite period. Park suffered torn tendons in his ankle after he and Detroit rearguard Carl Brewer collided in the first period.

The tie moved the Rangers two points ahead of second-place Boston Bruins, idle Thursday.

Bryan Hextall's ninth and 10th goals of the season, sparked Pittsburgh's 37-shot assault on Los Angeles goalie Gerry Desjardins in front of only 5,298 fans.

Michel Briere, Jean Pronovost, Val Fonteyne and Ken Schinkel were the other Pittsburgh marksmen. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh each have 48 points, 12 behind division leading St. Louis Blues. Bill Flett put Los Angeles on the scoreboard at 7:12 of the third period after the Penguins had built a 5-0 lead and ruined goalie Al Smith's bid for a shutout.

The loss was Los Angeles' 40th of the season. They have won only nine of 55 games.

The only scheduled game tonight has St. Louis visiting Oakland Seals.

Saturday the Flyers are in Montreal against the Canadiens, Detroit visits Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago is host to the Rangers, Pittsburgh plays Oakland on the west coast and St. Louis is in Los Angeles.

Three games are set for Sunday with Montreal at Detroit, Toronto in New York and Boston playing the Black Hawks at Chicago.

Scandal Shrouds Baseball

Kuhn Suspends McLain

NEW YORK (AP) — Denny McLain's once-bright baseball future was shrouded by the ugly spectre of scandal today following his suspension for what commissioner Bowie Kuhn called "involvement in 1967 bookmaking activities and his associations at that time."

The 25-year-old Detroit Tigers pitching ace, who won 31 games in 1968 and 24 last season, was set down indefinitely Thursday, to await investigation of the alleged indiscretion, after his second meeting with the commissioner in six days.

The suspension of the two-time Cy Young Award winner is the worst blight suffered by baseball since the infamous 1919 Black Sox scandal, which resulted in lifetime suspensions for eight Chicago White Sox players for conspiring to fix the World Series against Cincinnati Reds that year.

In a prepared statement following his lengthy meeting with McLain and his attorney, William Aiken, Kuhn said:

"I have decided on the basis of facts developed at these conferences that Mr. McLain's involvement in 1967 bookmaking activities and his associations at that time leave me no alternative but to suspend him from all organized baseball activities pending the completion of my review of his situation.

"It should be made clear that the action taken today is based substantially on certain admissions made candidly to me by Mr. McLain and not on allegations contained in a recent magazine article, many of which I believe will prove to be unfounded."

McLain, who testified Wednesday in Detroit before a federal grand jury investigating widespread U.S. gambling operations, appeared haggard and grim as he left the commissioner's office minutes before the suspension was announced.

Neither Kuhn nor McLain would elaborate on Kuhn's statement or answer questions.

McLain was to have reported today for spring training at Lakeland with the other Detroit pitchers and catchers. But he will not be permitted to participate in any baseball activity, nor will he be paid, while under suspension.

Black Sox Recalled

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sports scandals in the United States have ranged from the college basketball point-shaving incidents of 1951 and 1961 to the pro football betting affair of 1963 to boxing, horse racing and kindred fields of activity.

But Denny McLain's suspension Thursday for alleged 1967 bookmaking activities marks the most devastating blow to baseball since the Black Sox scandal of the 1919 World Series, which resulted in the banning of eight Chicago players for life.

The 1919 Series pitted Chicago White Sox against Cincinnati Reds. The Reds won the best-of-nine Series, five games to three. It was not known until mid-1920 that the White Sox, hence to be known as the Black Sox, had thrown the Series.

Ban Johnson, then president of the American League, said he "had heard statements that the White Sox would not dare to win the 1920 pennant because the managers of a gambling syndicate alleged to have certain players in their power had forbidden it."

No names were mentioned until the owner of the Sox, Charles A. Comiskey, suspended seven players in late September, 1920. An eighth player, first baseman Chick Gandil, had been suspended previously for refusing to report after a salary dispute.

The eight—Gandil, pitchers Eddie Cicotte and Claude (Lefty) Williams, shortstop Charles (Swede) Rosberg, third baseman Buck Weaver, left fielder (Shoeless) Joe Jackson, centre fielder Happy Felsch and utility infielder Fred McMullen went on trial in Chicago the following year.

They were found not guilty of defrauding the public.

But Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who had been named baseball's first commissioner a few months earlier, threw the book at them—banning each for life.

The most critical case occurred in 1963, when National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle suspended Paul Hornung of Green Bay Packers and Alex Karras of Detroit Lions indefinitely for betting on league games. They were reinstated the following year.

Bowerman Has Foot in Tour Door

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Rod Funseth, who hadn't planned on being here in the first place, found the answer to the raw cold and blustery winds that turned the Pecan Valley Golf Club course into a monster.

"I guess those long putts made it look easy," Funseth said after firing a three-under-par 67 for the first round lead in the $100,000 San Antonio open.

Funseth was the only man in the field of 144 pros to break par 70 and only two others, Mike Hill and John Schlee, could match par on the 7,138-yard layout.

"It's just too cold," said Lee Trevino, the pre-tournament favorite and winner of last week's Tucson Open. He had a 75.

GARY BOWERMAN

Three Canadians were grouped at 74—Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver, Al Balding and Gary Bowerman, both of Toronto.

It marked the second straight week Bowerman qualified for a PGA event after trying unsuccessfully to get his foot in the tour door since the New Year.

The 28-year-old Belleville native — assistant professional at Toronto's Maple Downs Country Club — qualified for last week's Tucson Open, but failed to survive the cut after two rounds. If he survives today's 36-hole cutoff at San Antonio he automatically will be a starter in next week's Doral Open.

Bowerman earned his 1970 touring card at last fall's annual PGA school in Florida, along with another 11 aspiring young pros.

"In the two years I've been on the tour, I can remember only one day that was colder," said U.S. Open champion Orville Moody. He had a 76.

Defending champion Deane Beman had a 77. Dan Sikes was disqualified after signing for an incorrect card.

Last year's leading money winner, Frank Beard, had a 71.

The temperature was only in the low 40s, but a chilling wind that gusted to 36 miles an hour greatly increased the discomfort factor, particularly for the morning starters.

Worsley, Duff May Have Last Laugh at Ruel's Expense

by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

Greater love hath no coach than to lay down his ulcer for the good of his hockey club.

And Claude Ruel may just have paid first instalment on a cracker-barrel in the hot stove league yesterday. The stocky Gaul told Montreal Canadiens' top brewer David Molson he will resign as Habs' coach if it will help the team.

It should be explained that the Canadiens — defenders of Lord Stanley's Bowl — are mired in a horrendous three-game losing streak.

Now for, say, Minnesota North Stars, losing three consecutive games only once in two years would probably earn them the freedom of the Great Lakes.

But down Montreal way, that's worse than singing Alouette off-key.

"I told them (Molson and Hab mastermind Sam Pollock) if they felt someone else could get more out of the team, not to be afraid to make the move," Ruel told newsmongers Thursday. After the Habs lost their third straight, (by 5-3 in Toronto Wednesday night), he was similarly disconsolate.

"Maybe the change should be made behind the bench."

Ruel has been the centre of criticism since being named as "Toe" Blake's successor last year. How could a 30-year-old, without any NHL playing experience of his own to draw from, a virtual nobody, fill Blake's capable shoes, the critics asked.

Even after the Canadiens ho-hummed another pennant and Stanley Cup with Ruel at the helm, the detractors continued.

The gist of the anti-Ruel camp's argument was that the Canadiens had a roster that Grandma Moses could coach to a Stanley Cup.

That may be so, but that would only mean Ruel was lucky, not inept.

Rumblings have it that the main malfunctions in the Ruel regime have been internal in origin. The new coach reportedly had spats with players unconvinced of his ability to handle his job.

There were bound to be problems. What, for instance, could a 30-year-old who never played higher than junior hockey tell 17-year NHL veteran Jean Beliveau about the game?

It wasn't until this year's training camp that mutiny was sniffed by the general public. Dick Duff, after a sparkling Stanley Cup series last spring, left the club.

Next was "Gump" Worsley. Four Stanley Cups and a Vezina Trophy after joining the Canadiens, Worsley told the world he didn't like airplanes. After refusing to accept a farm-club stint suggested by Ruel to "work into shape," Worsley also left the club.

On or off the record, Worsley may have some of the answers tonight as he comes into Belleville to referee the 8.30 Firemen-Police underprivileged children's benefit game at the Memorial Arena.

One story from, as they say, a usually reliable source, says the outspoken Worsley got downright physical in his objections to Ruel's tactics.

But as many problems as the Canadiens seem to have, nothing — short of hiring Billy Reay — would do much damage to their Stanley Cup hopes.

Any Answers Tonight?

Kinsmen Bantams Hope To Stay on Offensive

For the Belleville Kinsmen Bantams, the best defence is a good offence. As coach Murray "Moe" Hunter assesses his team, "We have a skating hockey team. We have to move the puck to win, we're not great defensively."

The bantams have skated well enough in the past to win two OMHA AA championships in as many years, and after knocking off Trenton in the opening round of this year's play-offs, they have a chance to make it three in a row. "It's really amazing," comments team manager Bob Ricketts, "Some of these kids have the opportunity for their fourth Ontario championship, counting peewee and bantam. Lots of boys compete for years and don't even win a crest."

The team is currently doing battle with Whitby in the second round of play-off competition. "They have a few big guys," says Hunter, "But if we play hockey like we're capable of I'm sure we can beat them." Belleville won the first game of their best-of-three series 5-2 on Wednesday night.

"It's not like last year," claims the coach. "We don't have a John Mulvihill or a Danny Lupenette, but I think we might have a little better balance. Our goaltending has improved over last year." Bruce Clarke and Bob Moore share the Kinsmen twin-guarding chores and have allowed only 2.06 goals per game between them.

Hunter names right winger Andy Ricketts as the team's main offensive threat. "Andy is big, he skates and shoots well and plays good positional hockey. He's getting his confidence and is carrying the puck much better than at the first of the year."

"He's very good from the blue line in," says Ellis Junior coach Floyd Crawford. "A few of my players should watch the way he breaks for the net."

Another top-flight Kinsmen forward is port-sider Mark Coates. "He's a little small," notes Ricketts, "but pound-for-pound he could very well be the best player in the league."

Wally Dainard, the only returnee from last year's defence corps, is the top rear-guard. "I shifted him to forward this year, but later moved him back on defence," says Hunter. "The team has really improved since then."

"You certainly can't give all the credit to one line," claims the Kinsmen manager. "Tim Whelan and Dave Flesch, along with Dainard have played well on defence and our other forwards have done a good job of checking the other teams' big lines."

The only problem with players of this age group would seem to be the occasional conflict of interests.

"Things like basketball and girls tend to take up some of their time," says Hunter, "but where hockey is concerned, they come to play."

Lacrosse Needs Double Time

The Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association held its first meeting of the year last night at the Belleville Recreation Centre.

It was decided to send delegates Roy Payne and Jim Nuttal to the Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association meeting at Elora on Saturday, Feb. 28.

Mr. Jim Wood, who recently moved into the area from Hamilton was appointed as publicity director for the eight-team league, which hopes to have double that number of clubs in operation this season. In conjunction with league expansion, the city will be requested to provide more arena time and to make two outside practice pads available which are currently being used for hockey in the winter months.

President Roy Payne announced that the association is thinking of holding a peewee or bantam tournament in Belleville this summer.

It was also decided to run a referees' clinic some time in March and to hold registration March 20-21. The league is in need of referees for the coming season and officials hope, that possibly some of the city's hockey officials will take an interest in this area.

The Kinsmen Trio

Belleville Kinsmen forwards Andy Ricketts, Grant Goegan and Mark Coates hope to lead the bantams to their third consecutive OMHA AA championship. The team is currently leading Whitby 1-0 in the best-of-three, second-round series. Belleville's top line has accounted for 76 of the team's 134 goals this season.

Ellis Suspenders Tested

Belleville Ellis Juniors' forward unit of Danny Lupenette, Ted Waite and Dennis "Toody" MacCormack could very well be referred to as the Suspenders Line. Like the hockey pants' hold-up mechanisms, the unit never draws much attention, but the team would be in sorry shape without them.

Against the Trenton Golden Hawks, the line will have to turn in another steady performance in tonight's game at the Trenton Community Gardens. The game will be the last one of the regular season for both teams.

The Lupenette trio ranks third, fourth and fifth in the Ellis scoring statistics but are even more valuable for their outstanding defensive work than for their scoring efforts.

Lupenette, who centres the line and does much of the threesome's forechecking, is undoubtedly the finest skater on the Ellis squad. He draws high praise from coach Floyd Crawford. "Lupenette skates miles out there," says Crawford, "but the thing that impresses me most is that he's totally involved with hockey."

Waite and MacCormack are both steady two-way hockey players, who do an excellent job of backchecking against opposing wingers. "Waite has really improved lately," says the Ellis coach. The scrappy right-winger turned in his best performance of the season in a crucial 7-4 win over Cobourg, scoring three goals and adding an assist.

The Printers open their play-off schedule Tuesday night when they travel to Oshawa to take on the pennant-winning Crushmen.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Need for Sleep Varies Greatly

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I enjoyed so much your column tonight (Too Much Sleep Harmful?) in our Philadelphia Bulletin. I just had to say Thanks. I have always believed when a person feels like sleeping, let him sleep. So many people disagree with me, but I ignore them.

The two women I work with get eight hours sleep a night, the same on Saturday and Sunday, and are always dog-tired. Especially on Monday mornings.

One woman has to wake her husband Saturday and Sunday at 7 a.m. to send him out golfing. She says he complains, and would like to sleep longer, but she thinks it's best for him to exercise, as all he does is sit in his office all week.

She and the other woman never sleep any longer than eight hours. They believe that you will hurt yourself if you sleep any longer.

Now here is why I loved your column. During the week I can't sleep more than seven hours — tension, no doubt. But comes Saturday and Sunday I sleep 10 to 14 hours and my husband never wakes me.

And I feel wonderful. Even during the week I never feel tired going to work. The extra weekend sleep recharges my energy.

These other women (eight hours) are always complaining. They say they don't know how they're going to last the day — tired, achy and nervous. I keep telling them they should sleep longer on weekends but they won't listen. They think I'm a nut. I've showed them your column. Maybe they'll reconsider. — Mrs. O.'M.

Comment: The important point I'd like to make is this: There is no common measuring-stick for sleep formula. Some people get along on seven hours and make up the deficit in sleep on weekends, as you do. While others, like your friends, think that eight hours is sufficient.

It's possible they need as much as nine or 10 hours nightly. There are such people, you know. The only way to find out is to experiment.

If they're still tired on a nightly allowance of nine or 10 hours, they'd better look elsewhere for the cause of their fatigue.

For Mrs. Y.: Since I recommended the Dorothea Brande book "Wake Up and Live" to readers who want to overcome the unconscious desire to fail in life, I've received many requests for the name of the publisher. They can't seem to find it anywhere.

I know it's out in soft cover. I don't recall the name of the original publisher. I suggest that you can get this information at your bookseller's or in your public library.

• • •

For Mrs. T.: I doubt your husband's snoring is stressful enough to actually injure his heart. The long interval before he is able to get a breath as he shifts position and resumes normal sleep is common to many snorers. The main question is: How are you holding up under the nightly barrage?

• • •

For Mrs. B.: The most common cause of "heart attack" is coronary thrombosis. And it is this closing off of a large artery of the heart which produces myocardial infarction—the term that you are interested in.

Infarction simply means that a portion of the heart muscle has been deprived of its normal blood supply, causing it to lose its vitality and life.

Later as the infarcted muscle heals, it becomes scar tissue; while other parts of the circulation and heart muscle take over the job of supplying nourishment to the rest of the body.

• • •

For Mrs. O.: Can diabetes be cured? Not in the true sense. What we really do with treatment is "control" it.

• • •

But the controlled diabetic (with diet, insulin and oral medications) can live out his lifetime as well as his sugar-free neighbor. This is one chronic illness in which so much depends upon both patient and doctor — better consider it a partnership.

Canada Is to Get Postal Zip Code

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will get a postal zip code beginning in April, 1971, Communications Minister Eric Kierans announced in the Commons Thursday.

On that date, implementation will begin with a pilot project, probably in Ottawa. Trials will be analyzed before the national public address postal code is applied in other parts of the country.

The Canadian code will comprise six letters and numbers. The first three characters will designate the general area of the addressee, the last three the specific area, such as street, block and apartment building.

Mr. Kierans said basic design of the national code will not be completed until November this year. The pilot project would follow in April, 1971.

The minister gave no estimate of when the system might be completed.

Major Problems of Big Tanker's Sinking in 1967 Now Solved

LONDON (CP) — The major problems of Britain's Torrey Canyon disaster of 1967, the big brother of the tanker Arrow's grounding off Nova Scotia this month, are just about getting cleared up. There will be lesser backwashes for years.

The United States-controlled Torrey Canyon, with 119,328 tons of crude oil aboard, hit a reef off Britain's southwestern tip on March 18, 1967. Most of the cargo leaked out, forming the biggest and most expensive oil slick in history.

It also brought on Britain's largest bombing operation since the Second World War, played havoc with beaches and marine life around the "Cornish Riviera" and stimulated a round-the-world chase to pin down financial responsibility.

The Italian skipper was taking her inside the Scilly Isles instead of outside to save eight miles and 29 minutes rounding Land's End, which adds up to one of the costliest shortcuts ever.

An unoffcial estimate of the cost to Britain was £5,000,000 ($13,000,000). The French government also claimed heavy losses from oil washed on tourist beaches across the English Channel.

Late last year the two governments agreed to accept a settlement of £3,000,000 ($7,000,000) from the owners and insurers of the tanker and to divide it up evenly between them. It was half the amount for which they were suing.

The Torrey Canyon was bound for Milford Haven, Wales, with a cargo of crude from Kuwait in the Persian Gulf. Normally she would have taken the open-sea route around the Scillies.

Capt. Pestrengo Rugiati—who lost his master's ticket over the affair—told a court of inquiry he decided to cut through the inside passage for fear of missing a tide at Milford Haven that would have led to a five-day delay costing $26,000.

The Torrey Canyon struck the hidden Seven Stones reef at 17 knots and quickly broke open. During the next nine days 100,000 tons of oil gushed into the sea, about three miles from land.

While the oil slick grew ever wider, British authorities, baffled at first, settled on a number of experiments. One was to plaster the hulk with bombs, napalm and combustion inducing chemicals to burn the oil.

It later was estimated this accounted for about 20,000 tons, with the remainder forming into a slick 35 miles long and 15 miles wide to threaten 1,000 miles of beaches in England, France and the Channel Islands.

Enough explosive was dropped to destroy a city of 100,000. In addition, relays of planes dropped 25,000,000 gallons of detergent, costing $4,000,000, in the hope of breaking down the slick by chemical action.

This was partly successful but the oil piled onto beaches on both sides of the southwestern corner and at least $1,000,000 was spent cleaning up.

The Wildfowl Trust later estimated that 50,000 seabirds died from the effects of oil and detergents, including a generation of guillemots and razorbills.

A survey found dead starfish, crabs, lobsters and rockfish, and others with claws and legs missing.

One of the intriguing aspects of the Torrey Canyon saga is how the British government chased around to find someone to sue.

The Torrey Canyon was registered in Liberia, merely a convenience haven, while its owners, the Barracuda Tanker Corp. of California, had an office in Bermuda, where its assets consisted of little more than a post office box.

British treasury agents around the world were alerted quietly to keep an eye out for a sister ship of the Torrey Canyon. In Singapore, an agent was tipped off that the sister, the Lake Palourde, was heading for port to pick up a coil of wire rope.

When it came in, he slapped a £3,000,000 arrest writ against the ship. The insurers put up the money to free the Lake Palourde, and that's the amount the British and French governments eventually collected.

Street Rallies, Jail Riot Protest Chicago Trial

WASHINGTON (CP) — Scattered demonstrations, skirmishes with police and a jail riot broke out Thursday around the United States in reaction to the conviction in Chicago of five anti-war leaders for inciting riots.

In Boston's Hub Thursday, about 5,000 marched up Tremont Street smashing windows after a rally of 20,000 persons that began in the Common. Police clubbed about a dozen demonstrators. At least a dozen persons were arrested and four ambulances hauled away the injured, including several policemen.

At Michigan State University in East Lansing demonstrators smashed 1,000 windows and fought with police, who arrested several.

Police arrested 123 persons here during several hours of skirmishes in the aftermath of a demonstration by about 300 outside the apartment where Attorney-General John N. Mitchell lives. Police had dispersed the demonstrators but they moved into side streets, disrupted traffic and pelted police with rocks, bottles and chunks of snow. Police said three civilians and one policeman were treated for minor injuries.

Several hundred police remained on overnight duty outside the apartment building and White House guards were reinforced.

Five of seven defendants were found guilty Wednesday in Chicago of charges carrying maximum sentences of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

The Washington march, which began fairly peacefully, converged on the expensive and elegant Watergate complex on the Potomac River where Mitchell and other senior government officials and congressmen live.

But before they could get close, the chanting, singing marchers encountered the strong force of police, which drove them back with tear gas and clubs and made charges on motorcycles.

A number of demonstrators were hurt when the steel-helmeted and visored police closed in.

In San Jose, Calif., prisoners in the jail rampaged after watching a television program about the Chicago case. Guards used fire hoses to quell the rioters and put out six fires which had been set.

About 50 youths smashed windows in a hotel and adjacent shop in Evanston, Ill.

Police arrested five persons among more than 500 who clashed with them near the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles. Windows were smashed in branches of the First Western Bank and a brokerage.

About 50 persons chanted "power to the people" outsi the Baltimore courthouse. There were peaceful marches of 100 at the University of Wisconsin and 150 at Cornell University, and about 300 rallied peacefully at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dairying Industry Is Milked Of Incentive, Money Says MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Adrien Lambert (Créditiste—Bellechasse) said Thursday the government, by failing to develop an over-all farm policy, has "milked the incentive and the money out of the dairy industry."

The comments came during debate on a Créditiste motion condemning the government's dairy policy. Under Commons rules, the motion is not voted on.

Before the debate began, the House was embroiled in a procedural hassle over a motion by Bruce Beer (L—Peel-Dufferin-Simcoe), chairman of the Commons agriculture committee, for concurrence in the committee's report on dairy policy tabled Tuesday.

One of the committee's recommendations is that the government maintain the $125,000,000 annual support level for the dairy industry. The government has said it wants to reduce the subsidy by $10,000,000.

Robert McKinley (PC—Huron) moved an amendment that would send the report back to committee for inclusion of a stronger recommendation that the subsidy be maintained at $125,000,000.

Mr. McKinley's amendment was provisionally accepted and the debate adjourned.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson drew a round of jeers from the Créditistes when he said during the debate that efforts to increase consumption of dairy products have failed to solve the farm income problem.

Créditiste spokesmen argued that the government should put more money into the hands of consumers so they could afford to buy dairy products now in surplus.

Mr. Olson said any solution to farm problems lies in controlling and eventually reducing surpluses as the government is trying to do through its administration of subsidies and quotas.

The Créditiste motion received full support from both Conservative and NDP MPs as well as one Liberal, Ross Whicher (Bruce).

Mr. Whicher said he had supported the government fully until now. But he could not endorse the decision of Mr. Olson and the government to decrease dairy subsidies.

Mr. Olson said the butter export situation is one of the most serious in the industry. A European country had recently sold butter to South America for 10 cents a pound. Canada's support price was 65 cents.

"We have to face the facts of life," Mr. Olson said. "We are running at production levels 10 or 12 per cent above the consumption market in Canada and there is no export market anywhere in the world at our prices."

Metis Reported Hungry

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Thursday the government is considering possible emergency welfare measures to bring food to hungry Metis in Saskatchewan.

Welfare Minister John Munro said this would involve buying wheat for the hungry.

The government was bombarded with questions about the Metis after Albert C. Cadieu (PC—Meadow Lake) was denied the required unanimous consent to move a motion calling for immediate government action.

This was followed by questions from T. C. Douglas, the New Democrat Leader, who wanted to know whether the government was prepared to make any special arrangements to bring food to some 800 hungry Metis. Western farmers had offered to make grain available, but Canadian wheat board regulations prevented them from doing so.

Mr. Munro said later outside the House a department official is being sent to Saskatchewan to confer with the provincial government to find out how serious the situation is.

"Before everybody gets hysterical, it would be better to get the facts on the way," he said.

Laotian Plain Seized By North Vietnamese

Fierce Assault Led by Tanks

VIENTIANE (AP) — North Vietnamese forces swept across the Plaine des Jarres today, driving U.S.-supported government troops back in a bloody withdrawal. More than 500 Lao defenders were reported killed or missing.

A high-ranking Laotian army officer said one-third of the 1,500-man government garrison at Xieng Khouang was dead or missin.

"There is utter confusion and chaos," he said. "We do not know where the government units are, whether the wounded are still lying on the plain, or whether they have got into the mountains."

North Vietnamese casualties were not known.

Supported by tanks, the North Vietnamese attacked the Xieg Khouang airfield at 1 a.m., and by mid-day controlled virtually all of the plain.

The attack was the climax to a 10-day offensive to recapture the strategic plateau, 125 miles north of the capital, and its road network. The victory set the stage for more assaults against government positions to the south and west.

Information about casualties on both sides was sketchy, but military sources said government losses were likely to be high because of the scale and intensity of the North Vietnamese attack.

Sources said the government forces, some 10,000 tough Meo tribesmen commanded by Gen. Vang Pao, were still fighting a bitter rear-guard action and trying to consolidate new positions in the hills south and west of the plain.

They hoped to block a possible attack on Van Pao's secret mountain fortress at Long Cheng, which western military sources say is likely to be the next major target if the North Vietnamese elect to push beyond the Plaine des Jarres.

Also threatened are two other towns, Sam Thong, about 10 miles from Long Cheng, and the former neutralist town of Muong Soui, which the Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese seized last summer and later relinquished.

Sources in Saigon said that U.S. Air Force F-4 and F-105 jets, flying from bases in Thailand, and propeller-driven Laotian T-28s and C-47s flew more than 200 sorties in support of Laotian ground troops in the Plaine des Jarres area.

The air strikes were intended to slow down the attacking North Vietnamese and give the defenders time to withdraw and regroup.

The government forces still held positions on hilltops along the south and southwest rim of the plain, sources said.

The sources said the Laotian withdrawal appeared to have been "as orderly as any withdrawal can be under fire." But one source added: "There's no doubt about it, the plain has gone."

Military sources said the North Vietnamese had committed two divisions and two independent regiments—some 20,000 men—to the Plaine des Jarres campaign.

Five Sentenced

Chicago Police Expect Rioting

CHICAGO (CP) — Squads of riot-trained police were on weekend alert as a major rally was planned today outside the federal court building where five anti-war leaders were sentenced in the Chicago conspiracy trial.

Similar police preparations were reported in Washington, where a second rally was planned near the justice department. A spokesman for New York anti-Vietnam groups said thousands of young people had left the city for Washington to join the demonstration.

Both protests were scheduled after federal district Judge Julius J. Hoffman brought the controversial 4½-month trial to a conclusion Friday by assigning maximum prison terms of five years each to David T. Dellinger, 54, Rennie Davis and Thomas Hayden, both 29, and Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, both 31. The five were convicted of crossing state lines to incite riots at the 1968 Democratic national convention here.

He also hit each of them with $5,000 fines—half the legal maximum—and ordered them to pay prosecution costs.

Thomas A. Foran, U.S. district attorney and chief prosecutor, estimated the cost of prosecuting the case at more than $50,000.

Judge Hoffman ruled that the defendants cannot be released from prison until the court costs and fines are paid, but the five men could avoid the payments by declaring themselves paupers.

Two co-defendants, John R. Froines, 31, and Lee Weiner, 31, were acquitted by the jury of 10 women and two men.

All seven are serving prison sentences of variable lengths for multiple contempt of court charges levied by Judge Hoffman last weekend.

The judge ruled Friday that the sentences for rioting would run concurrently with the contempt sentences—meaning that none of the defendants would serve more than five years.

Sentences for contempt also were given defence lawyers William Kunstler and Leonard Weinglass. Both are free until May 4 to prepare appeals.

There were demonstrations Friday in seven cities.

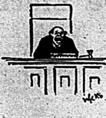
Los Angeles police arrested 28 persons after a crowd of 500 refused to disperse near the campus of the University of California.

There were protests also in Buffalo, N.Y.; Philadelphia; Milwaukee; Lansing, Mich.; Louisville, Ky.; Salt Lake City and Evanston, Ill., and in New York City.

At the mid-winter meeting of the American Bar Association in Atlanta, Ga., the individual rights and responsibilities section decided to have a committee investigate various aspects of the trial and report at its next meeting in May.

In court Friday, Judge Hoffman allowed the defendants to give pre-sentencing statements.

In colorful language, they condemned the administration of American justice and predicted that the new revolution of ideas would sweep away the old traditional methods and manners of American society in the next decade.



'I'll find the defendants guilty of contempt... and the lawyers and the jury and the police and...'

Two Held For Murder

TORONTO (CP) — Two men were charged with non-capital murder Friday night in the slaying of Joseph Pizale, a 58-year-old linen company employee found stabbed and beaten earlier in the day.

Police said Thomas Daniels of Toronto had been arrested and charged here and Edward John Waterson, 20, of Toronto, had been arrested and charged in Aylmer, Ont., about 10 miles east of St. Thomas.

Pizale's body was found midday in the rear of a truck owned by Star Linen Supply Co. Ltd., which had employed him as a shipper and supervisor.

Metis Chief Refuses To Name Starving

SASKATOON (CP) — Dr. Howard Adams of Saskatoon, president of the Saskatchewan Metis Society, refused Friday to give a federal investigating committee a list he says contains the names of 900 starving Metis families.

Dr. Adams said the list is confidential—he will show the list to the delegation but will not give it to them.

"These people are proud," Dr. Adams said. "They don't want the delegation to publicize that they have applied for free flour. I said in the beginning their names would be treated in confidence and will keep my word."

The delegation was appointed to investigate charges that Metis in northern Saskatchewan are starving.

The charges were made this week by Dr. Adams after the Canadian Wheat Board turned down a request that surplus wheat be made into flour and given to the Metis.

The four-man federal investigating party is headed by Dr. Stanley Haidasz (L—Toronto Parkdale).

Blueprint for Future

Hundred Channels In School TV Seen

TORONTO (CP) — In 20 years educational television could comprise a 100-channel network put together by satellites and computers, says T. Ronald Ide, head of the television branch of the Ontario department of education.

With advanced satellites "somebody in Sudbury will be able to put a card in a slot and get whatever he wants from a video library in Toronto," he said in an interview this week.

Currently, Mr. Ide's staff of 150 is working seven days a week preparing programs for the Sept. 1 debut of Ontario's first completely educational television station, Channel 19.

They will be turning out 500 programs a year with an annual budget of $7,500,000.

Elwy Yost, head of Metropolitan Toronto's educational television association, sees education programming of the future as a dial-a-program process using a catalogue-style listing.

When Channel 19 starts this fall it will cover an area bounded by Whitby to the east, Aurora to the north, Acton to the west and Hamilton and St. Catharines to the south with 3,220 hours of programming scheduled for the first year.

Toronto is not the first city in Ontario with the multi-channel idea. London, Windsor and Ottawa each is experimenting with a system.

In Ottawa, a 12-channel system is piped into four high schools where each classroom has a videotape receiver and telephone.

In London, there is a four-channel system, with programs beamed to schools from a central transmitter.

Windsor has videotape playback machines in each high school and some junior high schools. Program tapes are duplicated at a central point and delivered to the schools by hand.

No Challenge Planned To Canada in Arctic

WASHINGTON (CP) — A state department spokesman said Friday there has been no attempt or any intention to challenge any Canadian claims of sovereignty over waters in the Northern Archipelago.

"The last thing we want is to get involved in a challenge," he added, stressing that President Nixon's State of the World comment Wednesday on territorial problems was general, not aimed at Canada or any particular country.

The president had expressed the need for an international agreement to combat nationalistic claims on the high seas.

Canada's Foreign Aid Contribution Lowest of 17 Associated Nations

OTTAWA (CP) — All-party approval for a government bill to create a centre for research on international development served as an occasion in the Commons Friday for some tart remarks about current spending on foreign aid and Canadian hypocrisy.

The bill was heartily endorsed by Robert Thompson (PC—Red Deer), although he noted that Canada's contribution to foreign aid in 1968 was the lowest of 17 nations on the development assistance committee of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

"We are really not doing yet what we should be doing so far as international development is concerned," he said.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Greenwood) sadded that passage of the bill ought not to "induce any self complacency or self-satisfaction."

Canada's ranking in the OECD list, he said, is deplorable.

"There seems to be an awful lot of hypocrisy talked on this subject of aid to developing nations. It seems to me that the richer countries are failing to provide even the proverbial half a loaf which is better than nothing."

Warren Allmand (L—Notre-Dame de Grace) told the House Canadians annually spend approximately $200,000,000 on dog and cat food; $400,000,0000 at race tracks; $1,000,00, on alcohol; $50,000,000 on travel abroad.

The government's spending for development both at home and abroad is increasing, he said, but not fast enough. "when we are currently discussing a white paper on taxation in this country, it is a bit sad that so many people are disturbed because they may have to pay $200 or $300 a year more when there is so much suffering and poverty throughout the world."

The bill, which received third reading after the short debate, provides for appointment of an international board of directors and an initial $1,000,000 to get the operation underway.

The centre will administer research programs to improve the effectiveness of foreign aid. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said the centre "will make a significant contribution to international development."

Keeping "a roof over the heads of county school children" this year will cost Hastings county board of education $2,280,000.

This is the budget estimate for plant and maintenance proposed by the board's business staff last night at one of a series of pre - budget presentations for trustees going on this week and next.

The estimate is about a half million dollars above last year's expenditure of $1,780,000, business administrator Kenneth Wormald told the board.

"Higher utilities costs and salaries account for about one - half the increase," Mr. Wormald said. "The other half of the increase will go to up - grade and give better maintenance to the facilities in the county."

The board's investment in school buildings throughout the county now totals $34,000,000.

"This is a bare - bones budget for gross expenditures," Mr. Wormald said. Part of the costs, perhaps as much as 50 per cent, will be covered by provincial government grants," he indicated.

The business administrator told the board its plant department inherited a "diversity or lack of standards" in 1969 from the 13 individual boards in existence before the county - wide unit was formed.

"The estimates include very few items that will actually improve the learning situation," he added. "By far the large bulk of the costs are aimed at keeping the plant running on a reasonably efficient basis and upgrading the plant to a standard that will reduce operating costs in the long run."

As an example of the latter, achieved last year, he informed the board that up grading of the boilers in two high schools had eliminated the necessity for stationary engineers in the buildings for one - third of the school day.

Priority in 1970 is being given to upgrading lighting, fire alarm systems, interior and exterior painting, roofing and general repairs and preventative maintenance.

The plant report indicated that 129 classrooms in the county have substandard lighting. A lighting improvement program is proposed over an eight-year period — four years for converting incandescent to fluorescent lighting and four years to upgrade existing fluorescent lighting. Reduced hydro cost for fluorescent lighting is expected to pay for the change-over work in a six year period. Since fluorescent lighting requires less electricity, existing wiring is expected to last longer by reducing the load.

"Inspectors from various government departments have been critical of fire safety standards in some of the board's building," the plant report read.

George Umb, assistant controller of plant, said four schools have no fire alarms, 10 have hand pull systems and nine have electric push button systems.

"The local fire department has been after us for years to install a $3,400 automatic alarm in Queen Victoria School in Belleville," Mr. Umb reported.

The board gave immediate approval to installation of the system.

Not included in proposed expenditures for 1970 is the cost of grading and draining school grounds in several places in the county where water lies on the play areas during the spring and fall.

Trustee Donald Williams of Stirling drew the board's attention to the Batawa school, where water is often 18 inches deep on the grounds and where, area superintendent J. M. Cousins said, a "hazard for little children" exists. Cost of improving the drainage was estimated at about $2,000 to $3,000.

"The Batawa problem was there some years before the school came into our system; now they want us to do something about it," commented Mr. Wormald.

Trustees were told the same drainage situation exists at several other schools in the county.

"At Centenary school in Sidney, a creek runs in the north door, through the school and out the front door every time it rains," said Mr. Cousins.

The director of education asked the area superintendents to do a survey of the school drainage problem over the entire county and bring in a report.

"If the same hazard exists at other schools, it should be taken care of," said board chairman James Clarke.

Stopped to Help At Accident, Hit by Car

A Belleville man is still in Belleville General Hospital after being struck by a car Wednesday night at the intersection of Moira Street East and St. Charles Street.

In hospital is Ronald Angus Langabeer, 26, of Murney Street who, as he assisted Miss Nancy Schwager, 18, of East Moira Street was struck by another vehicle, police said.

Deputy Chief Harold Reid explained that at 11:05 p.m. Miss Schwager was eastbound on Moira Street and attempted to turn north on St. Charles Street. In so doing her car skidded and collided with a tree.

Mr. Langabeer, driving by the scene with his wife, stopped to offer assistance. As he was standing with Miss Schwager at the scene, he and the girl were struck by a car which was making the same turn, police said.

Both persons were taken to hospital, but Miss Schwager was treated and released with bruises and a sprained ankle.

Mr. Langabeer sustained torn ligaments and injuries to his right leg.

MPPs Ponder if 1971 Will be Election Year

An Ontario election in 1971? If so, when?

Local members of the provincial legislature conjectured on the possibilities today.

"That's four years after the last, 1967, election and governments traditionally go to the people ever four years," said Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Quinte.

Dr. Potter seemed to favor the possibility of a spring election, but Norris Whitney, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox was not certain of the time of year.

"In all probability 1971 will be an election year, because the trend has been to hold elections at that interval; instead of the five-year period permitted. But I don't know now whether the election will be called for the spring or the fall," said Mr. Whitney.

Their comments followed a Canadian Press story from Toronto today on the opening of the present legislature's third session Tuesday.

Overshadowing the session, reports Canadian Press, will be the spectre of an election which observers say could come as early as the spring of 1971, although the government's mandate does not expire until 1972.

No new major legislation is expected for the session, says the news agency.

The tempo, at least in the early weeks, should be low-key now that Premier John Robarts has indicated there will be no tax increases this year.

Major announcements in the speech from the throne, to be read by Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald, are expected to deal with pollution, voting age regulations, collective bargaining procedures for civil servants, aid to separate schools, regional government and a bill to permit unattached men and women to drink in the same beer parlor as they do now in cocktail lounges.

CBC will provide television coverage of the opening starting at 3 p.m. EST.

Standings in the 117 - seat house are Progressive Conservatives 68, Liberals 27, New Democratic Party 21 and one independent Liberal.

Madoc Prepares to Welcome Students from U.S. Capital

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

MADOC — This village is bracing itself for the Sunday rush of 33 school children and five teachers from a Washington, DC school.

The entire centre Hastings village has made hospitality more than just a word as it goes all out to welcome the grade 6 pupils from W. B. Patterson elementary school in the U.S. capital.

Over 65 people offered accommodation in their homes for the 37 visitors — forcing principal John Murphy of Madoc Public School to adopt a "share a visitor" plan by placing some Washington children in two homes during their visit — three days with each host family.

When the group from the Negro section of Washington tumble off their bus at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. — after a 600-mile ride — they will be greeted by Madoc pupils and teachers, their hosts for a week of classroom instruction and winter fun in the village.
MORE

Although the visit began as an exchange between the Washington and Madoc school as a result of a teachers' trip to the U.S. capital in 1966, the village has entered into the spirit of the week-long event. Some main street merchants have put "Welcome Washington Tour" signs in their windows, restaurant owners have offered free meals, the Kiwanis Club is providing food for outdoor sporting events and Reeve Tom Burnside has proclaimed Feb. 22 to 28 a "good neighbor week" in the village.

The Home and School Association and other community organizations have arranged a community welcome at the school Monday night.

The young visitors will join in regular classes in the new open-area classroom at Madoc Public School each morning during the week.

The Washington and Madoc teachers will combine in team teaching on an international scale.

Tuesday afternoon the action will shift to Moira Lake, with a hay - ride, taffy-pull, skating, snowmobiling and other winter sports the Washington group has signified it would like to sample.

Wednesday, the Madoc and Washington grade 6 pupils will tour Ottawa, and on other weekday afternoons skating, square dancing and other recreational activities are planned.

Friday night, the visitors will be taken on a shopping tour of neighboring cities like Belleville and Peterborough to see small urban areas at first hand.

To prepare them for the experience, the American children have heard lectures from members of the Canadian embassy in Washington and have done geographical studies of the terrain between Washington and Madoc.

This week, Mr. Murphy received a long-distance telephone call from Jay Cohen, the teacher leading the Washington group.

"We have got as far as Moira Lake in our studies," he said. "How do we get from there to the school?"

A grand farewell is planned Saturday morning to see the visitors off on their return trip to Washington.

Geological Map Displayed at Library

TWEED — Cloyne residents do not believe in doing half a job. When asked to give a small sample of rocks to display with hobby books, Mrs. M. Brumell replied with the donation of a 4 x 4 foot geological map of Ontario. The map was hand - painted and studded with various kinds of rocks and minerals found in Ontario.

The map is simplified by accurate representation of the geological formation of the Precambrian Shield and the Paleozoic limestone which laps its edges on the Great Lakes and Hudson Bay.

Many residents of Cloyne contributed their skills, artistry, equipment, knowledge, money and active assistance in making this map.

The display is fitted into a case which will enable it to be moved from one library to another without damage. Requests to borrow the map have come from both public and high schools.

Not being content to rest on their laurels after completing the map, an explanation of it was composed by Mrs. M. Brumell in rhyming couplet.

The display is entitled "Rocks and Minerals of Ontario", and is on display in Cloyne Public Library, in the Township Hall basement, for the month of February. After that it will be moved to Hartington branch of the Frontenac County Public Library and eventually to all interested in having this display.

Foster Ward Rezoning Meeting Set

March 19 has been set for a public hearing on rezoning in Foster Ward.

The date has been decided by the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board.

The meeting will climax a long-drawn protest from Foster Ward residents against the area's restrictive zoning.

The Ward, almost totally residential, has been zoned for industrial purposes since the mid 1950s. This has frozen house construction and even impeded home improvements. ments.

The protest has been spurred by a petition circulated through the ward demanding permissive residential zoning.

LEASING COST REDUCED

Jack Ireland, Belleville's foremost television rental centre, has announced drastic reductions in the cost of leasing color television in 1970. Now you can rent a 19" color TV for $16. a month or a 25" set for $20. a month - plus tax. These are deluxe 1970 General Eelectric color TV with the latest features including automatic tuning.

On these yearly leasing contracts there are no hidden charges — and no expensive repair bills to worry about. It is also standard procedure to include an "option to purchase" feature which allows you 100% of the leasing cost after 90 days.

For more information on this modern leasing plan phone 962-3401 — Ireland's Furniture and Appliances, 380 Front Street, Belleville.

Area police and the Belleville General Hospital were faced with a wave of motor vehicle accidents yesterday and early this morning.

An area child was seriously injured yesterday afternoon in a mishap on the Massassaga Road.

John Joseph Robertson, six, RR7, Belleville, was transferred to Kingston General Hospital for treatment for head injuries.

Driver of the vehicle which collided with the boy was Franklin Charles Allin, 36, of RR7, Belleville.

A single-car accident also sent three people to hospital.

The mishap occurred on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, just west of Highway 49.

Treated and released at Belleville General Hospital were Gavin Shepherd, 22, Kingston, and passengers Nancy Poole, 18 of Napanee and Geraldine Timlin, 20, of Kingston.

Early today a mishap on Highway 2, west of the Bay of Quinte Golf Course near Montrose Road, saw four people admitted to hospital.

Injured were Stewart Hadley, 23, of 485 Bridge Street, Nicol Magdycz of Trenton, his wife, Doris, and Mrs. Nancy Jane Gryce of 82 Foster Avenue.

Mr. Hadley sustained cuts to his face. Mr. Magdycz received chest, arm and leg injuries, Mrs. Magdycz suffered multiple abrasions, a hospital spokesman said.

Mrs. Gryce sustained cuts to her forehead. Two other persons, not identified by provincial police were treated and released.

Police say the mishap occurred at 2.23 a.m. The cars were driven by Mr. Hadley and Mr. Magdycz.

A third car, driven by Robert Gordon Thomas, 27, of North Front Street in Belleville, collided with the damaged automobiles.

Winterama on the Bay

Trenton Project Puts Glitter in Long Winter

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Mayor Duncan McDonald's challenge to take on Quinte-area Mayors and reeves in a snowmobile race at the Kiwanis Winterama Sunday has been accepted and met by a counter-challenge from Trenton councillor Paul Tripp.

Councillor Tripp, who has been known to oppose the Mayor in some council matters, Friday demanded the opportunity to race against the Mayor.

His request was granted by a committee of Kiwanians but a rider was attached and that's where the fun begins. The stipulation was that the Kiwanis committee has the right to choose Councillor Tripp's mode of transportation.

Knowing that Mr. Tripp was an experienced snowmobiler, the Kiwanis committee directed the councillor to use that old reliable method of winter transportation — dog team and sled.

So Councillor Tripp has secured the use of a giant St. Bernard named Sam and Sunday he'll be mushing through the snow on the Bay of Quinte just off the shore of Bain Memorial Park at the east end of Trenton shortly after 1 p.m.

Each of the contestants in the race will be required to break a series of balloons as he negotiates the course the Kiwanians have carved out on the frozen bay surface.

Belleville Alderman Gerald Joyce will represent Mayor Russell Scott and encounter opposition from Mayor McDonald, Councillor Tripp, Sidney township reeve Jack Bush, Frankford reeve Bill Rose, a Murray Township alternate to replace reeve Harry Lafferty and, possibly, Middleton Park Mayor Lt. Gerald Montenko.

Expressing the hope that the Kiwanis Winterama becomes an annual event, Mayor McDonald said he was "game to go in the race" when he challenged other Quinte-area mayors and reeves. His present plans call for some pre-race practice since he has only driven a snowmobile once.

The mayors' and reeves' race will follow a 1 p.m. paradrop in the middle of the circular race track and a snowmobile parade.

Eight classes of snowmobile races plus junior races, a powder puff race for the ladies and a club relay race will be other features of the gala afternoon.

A special feature for snowmobile operators will be the "speed check strip". Each machine will travel over a plowed strip within six feet of a radar machine. Speeding tickets which can be affixed to snowmobile windshields will be provided to each driver to certify the speed of his machine.

The fastest run is worth a man's watch and a second prize will be presented to the machine which hits a more modest predetermined speed.

Broomball enthusiasts will hold fort when six Trenton junior elementary schools compete in the town playoffs. Grade five and six students of St. Mary's, Dufferin Street, College Street, Queen Elizabeth, Prince Charles and V. P. Carswell schools will compete in the elimination tournament.

A second paradrop will take place over the area midway through the afternoon for the enjoyment of spectators and 24 trophies, plus prizes, will be presented to the winners of the various competitions.

Proceeds from the Winterama will go towards Kiwanis projects in the Trenton area. St. John Ambulance personnel will be at Bain Memorial Park to meet any emergency.

A Day at the Races

Trenton Councillor Paul Tripp and Sam the St. Bernard prepare for a big challenge — a duel with Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald in the Mayors and Reeves snowmobile race Sunday. The councillor borrowed the big pet for the race, which begins at 1 p.m., and is the featured attraction of the Trenton Kiwanis Club's Winterama at Bain Memorial Park.

Piasecki Waits For Word From Ottawa

PICTON — Piasecki Aircraft, Picton, has not yet received a government decision concerning a contract bid to build and manufacture light helicopters for the armed forces.

Originally, a decision was expected in late January. Retive Walter Symmons explained earlier this year that, should Piasecki fail to win the government contract, development of its Pathfinder helicopter would become an important part of activities at the Picton branch of the Philadelphia based aircraft company this spring.

According to Mr. Symmons the entire Pathfinder program now is under "expert review".

He said governments "for years have endeavored both by policy and financial assistance to encourage technical and industrial progress in Canada, particularly in new fields. Therefore, it is expected that to obtain economic benefit from the new concept Ottowa will, following this thorough investigation, furnish considerable financial assistannce under one of its various votes."

Mr. Symmons said that the Pathfinder is a new concept, and, consequently, eligible for such consideration. He said that the Pathfinder helicopter definitely has a future even if denied financial aid from the government.

'Breath of Scotland' Stage Show Scheduled for Belleville Performance

There'll be music, comedy and dances galore on March 10 at Centennial Secondary School auditorium as the top Scottish talent visits Belleville for a one - night stand sponsored by the Y's Men's Club of Belleville.

Star of the show is the famous Scottish comedian, Alec Finlay, billed as Scotland's gentleman. Also apeparing on the program is Will Starr, acclaimed accordionist.

Now in its sixth year, the program, called A Breath of Scotland, has played to capacity audiences all over Canada and the United States.

Added attractions in the show are Dennis Clancy, Scotland's ambassador of song, Billy Leslie who sings, dances and plays various instruments, and the Royal Clansmen, a music, comedy and dance act.

Also to be on hand are Gwen McKenzie, Arthur Spink, Blanche McInnes, Ronnie Coborn and Grant Frazer.

Tickets, are on sale at Barton's Pharmacy, Leslie's Shoe Store, Thompson's Grocery, the Belleville Family YMCA and Mitchell's Food Market in Rossmore.

The event has caused critical praise wherever it has been presented.

"A Breath of Scotland brings you the scent of the heather," one critic wrote after seeing the show.

Although it is billed as a first class Scottish production show that aims to bring Scottish theatre entertainment to Scots all over the world, it is the type of entertainment for the whole family, Scottish or not.

All proceeds collected from the event will go towards the work of the Y's Men's Club of Belleville.

What Sort of Sunday? Hearings Next Week

TORONTO (CP) — What sort of Sunday do Ontario residents want to observe?

The Ontario law reform commission will delve into the question in four months of public hearings starting here next week.

The federal Lord's Day Act at issue was introduced in 1906. From time to time it has been amended and the provinces have granted exemptions.

Sunday sports were permitted in Ontario in 1950, Sunday movies and other theatrical entertainment in 1961, alcohol with meals in 1967 and horse racing after 1:30 p.m. in 1968.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart asked the commission, headed by Dr. H. A. Leal, to study the history and background of the legislation and its relevance to modern society.

In recent months the Act provoked controversy over Sunday shopping. A growing number of big supermarkets have started to remain open Sundays. Charges are laid only if there are complaints from the public and the attorney-general finds opposition in the neighborhood.

Short-Changed

PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Michael Gallucci was given a week to prove that pennies are "legal tender" after he settled a court judgment with $561.42 worth of them. Judge Jacob J. Alprin ruled that pennies were not legal tender. Gallucci was held in contempt of court and he and his lawyers were given a week to submit briefs. The court also pointed out that Gallucci, who shelled out 56,100 pennies, was 42 cents short in his payment.

Youthful Teach-in

It would be interesting to know what impression the young people of Moira secondary school took away from the Grade 13 students' teach-in held at Albert College earlier this week.

Main speaker was Steven Langdon, former president of the University of Toronto's students' administrative council who talked about a commitment on the part of students "to change the high schools and universities."

All well and good — just so long as the changes they seek are positive, are built on the best of what already serves society and are not brought about in an orgy of destruction and paranoic behavior reminiscent of recent events in Montreal and Chicago.

Mr. Langdon had some observations on secondary school education being "a pattern of strict rules and strict courses, a pattern of expected responses."

He spoke of individualism — of the need of students to have more say in the courses they take and the way in which they are presented — and of conformity as something those resisting change saw as desirable "for the sake of society."

From a reading of Mr. Langdon's remarks it is difficult to know just which side he is on, for at one point he said education "doesn't . . . help build a better society but is turning out cynics who retreat into individualism, do their own thing."

Individualism in our opinion needs more emphasis. We need less conformity in a society in which this trait is already strongly ingrained. At the same time the general welfare of the student body and the society to which it belongs must also be served.

On this theme of individualism we have already referred to the western farmer who on his own initiative went to Romania and was told that that country was willing to purchase substantial quantities of Canadian wheat.

In another sphere of activity — sport — it used to be that people got together themselves and organized their own clubs. That is why in Britain and in most parts of the Commonwealth there are countless groups playing football, field hockey, tennis and so on. In this country we seem to have a different concept of recreation; often it means simply driving off into the blue and exhausting oneself in the process, or else spending a lazy afternoon at the beach.

Or recreation may be the province of one individual who is empowered by the municipality to try and galvanize people out of their sedentary ways. Thus we see in Toronto newspapers advertisements for program developers (more than one in this case) to promote recreation in the new amalgamated city of Thunder Bay. Having some knowledge of that city we recall that in 1957 a small tennis club in what was then Port Arthur organized coaching for the youngsters; we still need that kind of individual initiative.

Whitehorse, in The Yukon, also is looking for a development officer, only in this case the job is to promote tourism and industry.

Individual or groups of individuals could do more in this regard. Must everything be left to the government or to the municipality before anything gets done?

But to get back to the schools, it is good to see that students are taking initiatives in many directions. But along with the responsibility and the obligations they must display toward society, we think they have a need for more fun in the form of recreation (including active sports), travel and the like. For it is still true that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

Wise Decision

Wise is the man who steps down from crushing responsibility while there is still time.

The Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, is doing that. He has announced his resignation because the physical demands of the office have become too great.

Dr. Clark is reported to be suffering from spinal arthritis and from this standpoint alone his decision is understandable. But how many are there today whose executive responsibilities are such that they have no time, let alone inclination, for a more leisurely schedule?

Hard work does not harm the person who watches his health, but the growing incidence of heart disease indicates there are many who carry things too far — who do not permit themselves enough fresh air and exercise to go with that penchant for the go-go life of business.

Former New Brunswick Premier's Theory

Jets Could Bring Government Into Closer Touch

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — While the spending of $56,000,000 for four new 707 Boeing jets is not exactly his conception of government "austerity," New Brunswick Conservative MP Hugh John Flemming can see the purchase paying more than the obvious dividends.

These more obvious advantages have been catalogued, of course, by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux, and Services and Supply Minister James Richardson whose departments are splitting the bill.

The big plus of the new jets is their ability to transport more cargo, passengers and freight, at far greater speeds over a longer range than could be managed by the fleet of four aging Yukon air-buses now going into retirement.

For passengers it will be the difference between flying in a sleek, swift, comfortable jet and in a clumsy, lumbering, infernally noisy prop-job.

The not - so - obvious dividends as seen by Hugh John Flemming could be the increased mobility the jets will give Prime Minister Trudeau and the Cabinet.

Mobility, not for junketing, but for jetting around Canada and by more actively involving distant sections of the land in the process of government, perhaps reduce the feelings of neglect and even alienation increasing in the West, and to a lesser extent in the Maritimes.

The Prime Minister has had the Jet-Star all along, but because of its limited passenger capacity, it was more of a personal aircraft.

Pack in the Prime Minister, a couple of advisers, a secretary or two, a press officer and a bodyguard and that about took care of the seats in the tiny Jet-Star.

Now with the 707, the Prime Minister — and the entire Cabinet with their aides — are within hours, five, to the West Coast, two to three of the Atlantic shores, of any point in Canada.

It is Hugh John Flemming's idea that the Cabinet could pick up its attache cases, pertinent files on current problems, key advisory staff, and jet off to, say, St. John's, for a meeting or conference on Newfoundland's fishing industry.

Or to Thunder Bay or Vancouver for an on-the-spot inspection of grain-handling for export.

To Edmonton or the Arctic Coast for a look-see at the oil industry and its problems — to here, there and anywhere a basic industry has problems, a region is in economic difficulty, or a section of the population feels "left out" of the federal action.

Hugh John Flemming, a former premier of New Brunswick, a 10-year man in the House of Commons, and a veteran of John Diefenbaker's Cabinets, is a quiet, unobtrusive, thoughtful man, a good parliamentarian who addresses himself faithfully to the problems of his constituency, his province and his nation.

He believes that a travelling Cabinet, instantly mobile with the 707's, flying out of the Capital perhaps once every two or three months for a Privy Council session or a conference, would let the country know that the Federal Government is not the exclusively central Canadian enterprise that many sections of the nation suspect it is.

Take the idea a step further, suggests Hugh John Flemming, and let the Prime Minister establish a part-time official residence in the West and another in the East.

No better way, insists the Maritime MP, for the Prime Minister to "identify" with the East and the West than to be a resident, if only for a week or so, even a few days.

President Nixon has done something like this, setting up a "Summer White House" at San Clemente, California, and a "Winter White House" at Key Biscayne, Florida.

As it is now, and has been since the St. Laurent era, the Prime Minister lives at 24 Sussex Drive, across the road from Rideau Hall, and weekends, when he has the time, at Harrington Lake Lodge across the Ottawa River in the Gatineau Hills.

Both pieces of real estate are in the National Capital Region, and like so many regard the Federal Government, exclusively Eastern Canadian.

Provision of a West Coast or Prairie "24 Sussex Drive" and a Maritime "Harrington Lake Lodge" of course would not be just for this particular Prime Minister.

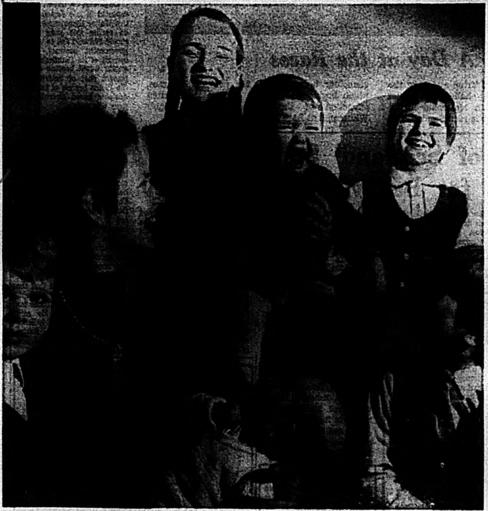
Just as neither property in the National Capital is a personal possession.

The government of the day purchased, and spent $100,000 repairing, redecorating, equipping and furnishing 24 Sussex Drive, the old home of a long deceased Ottawa Valley "Lumber King," for Prime Minister St. Laurent. The Lodge at Harrington was part of the property package.

They were acquired when it was discovered that dear old "Uncle Louie," living in an apartment in the since-demolished Roxborough, currently the site of a government parking lot, was so cramped for space he was stacking files under the bed for lack of anywhere to wedge a cabinet.

But on a broader plane, if President Nixon can fly to Chicago for a pollution conference, and to Indianapolis for a session on urban problems, now that he is getting the 707's, why could not the Prime Minister, with his Cabinet, jet out to Winnipeg for talks on wheat marketing, or to Vancouver or Montreal for a straightening out once-and-for-all of the harbor labor difficulties?

No reason he could not, says Hugh John Flemming, why does he not think about it?



Women in Politics

Hannelind Feilcke would seem to have her hands full with six children, the oldest 11. But that is far from being the case. She is a member of Hamburg's city parliament, serves on two parliamentary committees and is a precinct chairman in the Christian Democratic Party. A neighbor looks after the children when mother and father are away. Frau Feilcke is an example of the increasing participation of women in West German politics.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 21, 1970 . . .

Robert Southwell, English poet, was hanged 375 years ago today—in 1595—the day after his trial for treason. He had been imprisoned and tortured for three years for the crime of being a Roman Catholic priest. The law forbade any Englishman in the Roman priesthood to stay more than 40 days in England and Southwell, trained in Paris, volunteered to defy the ban as a missionary. He was beatified in 1929.

How to Establish A Canadian Identity

Just Tell A Fellow He's No Different from an American

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

• • •

(The second in a series of articles.)

Canadians resemble people at a party that is not quite getting off the ground but may do so, they hope, at any moment—perhaps with the arrival of some dazzling doll.

Canadians are dwarfed by their country and rarely understand it—or even try to—because of enormous fallacies of history and holes in their knowledge of geography.

Any attempt to stifle the French - Canadian spirit — which tends to soar and plummet in a peculiarly un - English way — would be a fatal mistake by English-Canadians.

These were some thoughts expressed in interviews by Ontario figures regarding Canadian and regional sentiments, while Porf. C. J. Jansen, a sociologist from South Africa, declared:

"I haven't been able to find a Canadian."

Dr. Jansen, who came to Toronto two years ago after stays in Italy, Belgium and Britain, said Canada looks far different from within than from Belgium, which is struggling with a similar language problem, involving Flemish and French.

"I had the impression people were fighting in the streets in Canada," said the York University professor. "Now I realize you could live all your life in Ontario without knowing there was a problem in Quebec.

"In Canada, unlike Belgium, you can live with the problem without being involved in it. That's partly because of geography and I think, too, because in Belgium the situation is much more of national proportions. . .

"I've formed the purely personal opinion that Canada consists of Ontario and Quebec. Look at the news every day . . .

"Sometimes I ask students which province lies to the west of Ontario. They have to think a while and then come up with the answer. Ask what province is to the east, and the answer comes fast."

Toronto artist Harold Town was asked his views of what holds Canada together despite cultural, language and geographic divisions.

"Just that," said the busy painter. "Diversity. Just the fact we don't know who we are. It's a mystery we're always hoping to solve.

Happenings of the last few years must at least have shattered Canada's international "Mountie image," he feels. Foreigners surely could no longer reconcile that image with computer-smashing, Molotov cocktails and the Montreal beheading of the statue of St. Jean Baptiste.

"I think we've even lost the sober-sides image of the fellows who always stepped in to stop the fight at parties," said Mr. Town.

"Why do we assume that so many things divide us?" demanded London, Ont., artist Philip Aziz whose works, like those of Mr. Town, are internationally recognized in their different styles.

Mr. Aziz, looking at contrasts between the mainstreams, declared:

"The French have these moments when they soar up and produce great ideas, then they come down again. With the Anglo-Saxons it's more of a gradual thing.

"But the French - Canadian pattern . . . I think we should encourage . . . if we don't we'll alienate ourselves from them. We've got to encourage it knowing the risk might be separation. If we try to stop this natural flow of energy and intelligence we'll never be able to get along with the French - Canadians. They'll never accept us or trust us again."

Mr. Town said Canada seems shaky from time to time but there is "always a chance for a country with sense enough to give an award to a town fool" — the Canada Council's grant to a Vancouver puncturer of pomposity.

Canada is beset by regional problems today because it has never been truly a country — "only an idea" — in the opinion of Mr. Town, and his thought was picked up by Rev. Orlo Miller, Anglican priest, historian, playwright, former television producer and actor, newspaper man and novelist.

"Separatists would, of course, be fatal because Canada is a state of mind more than a nation," said Mr. Miller, now minister at Point Edward, near Sarnia.

"Canadian history is Dullsville," added the clergyman, whose verbal bombs are dropped in quiet tones and whose theory of history has been summed up this way:

"This geography thing just is not understood. One of the difficulties of being Canadian is we are dwarfed by our country . . .

Mr. Miller has experienced 9-below temperatures in the Yukon, seen a million acres of virgin soil being made ready for farming and flown over the prairies when they looked "like a kitchen floor that has just been mopped."

"When you truly get to know this country, and realize its immensity, and establish a feeling of identity with it, instead of a crushing awe, I think you become a Canadian.

"But we're not. We're Haligonians, Torontonians, Winnipeggers. It should be compulsory for every Canadian to make at least one trip across the country with his eyes open."

Oddly enough, Canadians travelling outside Canada somehow know one another and besides, foreigners can recognize Canadians, said Mr. Miller.

"We have an identity. We just don't recognize the fact."

The Soviet Union, the world's biggest country, saw the significance of Canada long ago.

"It has been forgotten that in the 1920s a great group of Soviet scientists came to Canada, agronomists, and studied the settlement of the prairies," said Mr. Miller.

"They looked into our history, ecology. Today, the enormous agricultural development of Siberia and the process of settlement there is known in Russia as Canadianization."

Dr. Jansen also said he got little response last year when he asked first-year students to define Canadianism and differences with U.S. and British cultures.

Then he told the students their reaction confirmed his impression on arrival — "there is no difference between Americans and Canadians."

"But the moment I said that, they began defining Canadianism, and defining it in terms of what an American is not. This comes back to the point that there is no pressure in Canada on being Canadian, and I think that is a good thing.

"But they truly become Canadian when they go to the U.S. or Europe. Then they want to make sure nobody mistakes them for Americans."

Church Quirks Are Lampooned

NEW YORK (AP) — A Jesuit priest said to his bishop: "Your Excellency, an official of your chancery office has informed my superior that I am not to take part in any more racial demonstrations. I would like to know whether this was done with your knowledge and approval."

The bishop: "Father, it was done without my knowledge but with my approval."

That's the sort of ecclesiastical ambiguity and absurdity, collected mostly from church publications and parish bulletins and sent in by readers, which are the object of zestful, often peppery satire in a lighthearted column, Cry Pax!

Subtitled A Column Without Rules, it appears in the National Catholic Reporter, an independent weekly published in Kansas City, and it gleefully lampoons each week's accumulated accounts of oddities and inanities in the church.

Selections from the column now have been gathered and issued as a paper-bound book under the title The Best of Cry Pax.

Here are a few examples from the glimpses into the comic side of the religious enterprise, along with the editor's postscript comments in some cases:

—The Baltimore Catholic Review reports the wording of a sign on the wall of a local estate: "Trespassers will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Sisters of Mercy."

—An advertisement sponsored by the Lutheran Laymen's League announces availability of a free booklet entitled Life After Death—Fact or Fiction, and asks, "Why not find out for yourself?"

—The editor of Catholic Miss recently asked her readers to describe their fondest wishes and dreams. A 13-year-old responded:

"If I could have my fondest dream come true, I would wish for a life using all my natural talents for God's glory until they are exhausted. If I could have this wish I would have fulfilled God's command to know, love and serve Him in this world. If I couldn't have this, I would wish for a color television set."

Secular Marriage Service Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — Couples who are not regular churchgoers but do not want a civil marriage ceremony may have an alternative if a United Church minister has his way.

The service proposed by Rev. Fred Styles of Newtonbrook United Church lacks the religious aspects of a church service but has some of its beauty in the form of two love poems by Kahil Gibran, a Lebanese mystic and writer who died in 1931.

Mr. Styles said he created the service because he found some of the people he counsels "have very little real interest in the church or in the things for which it stands."

"Some are honest enough to say that they don't share the beliefs of the church and have no intention of having anything further to do with it once the wedding is over.

"The alternative is a civil ceremony—a city hall special—and many people find this an unsatisfactory alternative to the traditional wedding. There, a civil servant who cares nothing for the individuals at all as people, but regards them as one more application to be processed, hurries through a two-minute formula, without looking up from his paper, stamps the form and collects the $10 fee.

"My secular marriage service is designed to bridge the gap, to provide an esthetically satisfying ceremony for those persons who have no religious convictions or whose convictions about religion are negative ones."

He denies that his service will weaken the church.

"The position of the church is not compromised but strengthened in this way. People who want a church wedding now will clearly be saying that they want their marriage based upon the principles for which the church stands, while people who do not want to be involved with those principles have an acceptable alternative."

University Women Hear Talk on Handicap of Deafness

As there is no clear cut definition of deafness, Dr. John Boyd explained to the University Women's Club that the population to which he would refer was a person either born deaf or deafened prior to age two (some extend this to five years) and he is unable to hear his native language adequately, either with or without a hearing aid, to enable him to learn it for either understanding or expression.

Dr. Boyd, principal of the teacher education centre on the O.S.D. campus, Belleville, was well qualified to speak on the educational, psychological, sociological and economical implications arising from the handicap of deafness. His career of over 20 years has encompassed that of learning about the deaf and working with them.

At age five a normally hearing child has a vocabulary of five or six thousand words while a young deaf child has very few words, if any with either receptive or expressive value. Great effort is being expended through home visiting teachers, parent education and nursery schools to try to close this gap. While the hearing child in his first year or two of school is learning to read and write the words he already knows, the young deaf child is just building a basic vocabulary and the beginning of sentences.

By age 19 many normal hearing adolescents have completed secondary school. The best of the deaf students may have reached somewhere between grades 8 and 10. The average will reach somewhere between grades 6 and 8 academically. Few deaf students go to regular secondary schools or universities. Higher academic education is available at Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. For the majority of the deaf, vocational training leads to jobs in the skilled or semi-skilled areas. The Provincial Schools for the deaf have developed educational programs in shops which rank within the top half dozen in North America.

A psychology of deafness has developed. It appears that with sensory deprivation, especially of the auditory sense, the behavior pattern changes. The deaf must rely primarily on vision to keep him in contact with his environment, his avenue of communication input plus all of the other uses to which we put vision. The deaf generally do not show any greater incidence of mental illness than exists in the general population. Unfortunately if they do need counselling or treatment it is almost impossible to receive the services of a psychologist or psychiatrist who knows how to communicate.

Socially the adult deaf tend to use manual communication among themselves. This provides a common bond, similar to any lingristic - ethnic group. Due to their limited numbers they tend to congregate in urban centres where they establish their own clubs and churches. Deaf men frequently marry later than hearing men and usually marry deaf women. Their families tend to be smaller than average, but unless the cause of deafness of the parents is hereditary, the possibility of their offspring having normal hearing is as great as any.

Although the bulk of the deaf population work in the skilled and unskilled occupational levels, the vast majority do work and are not economically dependent on welfare. As a group they do not receive special concessions or pensions as do some other handicapped groups. They frown on "deaf alphabet card peddlers." Because of their occupations, their income levels tend to be lower than average. Several companies have reported that the deaf worker's job performance is as good or better than the normal employee.

Deafness, with the one exception of severe mental retardation, presents the greatest barrier to the acquisition of language, an academic education and all that follows. In skills involving motor and visual functioning, the deaf individual is highly competitive. In spite of the costs involved in educating the deaf, in terms of economic returns for the investment, this is one group for which the money and time are well spent.

"As the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville marks the 100th anniversary of its founding, it is up to the educators to seek new ways and means to improve the academic level and the preparation of the deaf for new jobs in this ever changing world," Dr. Boyd concluded.

Mrs. J. Musgrove introduced the speaker and Mrs. J. Nelles expressed the thanks of the club.

Anyone willing to help with the Register renewal campaign on Feb. 22 and Mar. 1, please contact president Clarke.

Due to the poor attendance at last year's communion breakfast it was decided to cancel it for this year.

President Clarke asked anyone not at present receiving the League Magazine to contact Miss M. Cleary, 115 Third St., Cornwall.

An appeal for girls' clothing, size 14 and boys' clothing sizes 2, 4, 8 and 10 was made by Mrs. Labelle. Anyone wishing to donate articles please contact her.

Mrs. Belanger moved adjournment of the business meeting.

Mr. Frank Buckley was introduced as the guest speaker for the evening. Mr. Buckley, who is with the English Dept. at BCI, spent 1967 on sabbatical leave in Ireland. Mr. Buckley's presentation of Ireland, through slides, tapes and maps was enjoyed immensely by all present. One left the meeting feeling a little wistful if he had never been to that beautiful country and a little prouder if he was of Irish descent. Mr. Buckley was thanked and lunch was served.

U.C.W. Meetings

COLLEGE HILL UCW

The February meeting of College Hill UCW was opened in the usual way by the president, Mrs. A. McIntosh. During a business period the final plans were made for the annual turkey supper to be held Feb. 25 and for the World's Day of Prayer to be held in College Hill United Church on Friday, March 6.

Mrs. Olive Williams assisted by Mrs. Frayne McDonald presented the devotion period with the theme, "A true sense of values". The reading and poem were most appropriate to the theme.

The program convener, Mrs. Evelyn McIlquham introduced her co-convener, Mrs. Florence Watson who had prepared a talk and display on handicrafts. Mrs. Watson is most talented in art work. She displayed a great variety of her sketches and paintings. Then she spoke on her current hobby - papier mache. She said no person can be taught this craft but learns through doing, according to one's adaptability. A demonstration of how the paper is processed and a display of her many articles was also presented. She reminded the members that now is the time to be making some articles for the fall bazaar and interesting items for sale can be made from papier mache.

A display of handicrafts from other hobbyists revealed talents such as needlepoint, knitting, woven table mats, drawn work on linen and floral arrangements. One woman spends many hours pasting attractive pictures and cards in scrap books for children in the hospital. Any donations of cards or scrap books would be appreciated.

A tasty lunch was served by the lunch conveners.

Grandmother: "You'll probably have to give him a hard spanking every time he disobeys. He'll soon learn."

Mother: "Johnny, come and light the fire in the fireplace for me. Then I'll have you light the oven for me and also help me burn the trash. You know you must never light matches when I'm not here."

As a special privilege, let a child, who seems fascinated by fire, light fires whenever possible under supervision. Remind him each time he must not do it unless you are present. This should help him curb his desire to play with fire and at the same time teach him the safe way to light one.

YOUR ANTIQUES

by Jack Jamieson

First Wall Clock Cases Made Entirely of Wood

The clock illustrated is labelled Seth Thomas, Thomaston, Connecticut, Eight-Day Movement. It strikes hours and quarter hours on a coiled spring gong with deafening intensity. It fascinates children who can crank up the weights and advance the strike to see how often the clock will chime.

Seth Thomas, born in 1786, was the son of a Scots immigrant to the United States. He was apprenticed as a carpenter and joiner. In 1807 he became one of the partners of Eli Terry and with another partner named Hoadley. They made 4,000 clocks in the years between 1807 and 1810.

The partners made their clocks according to a plan devoting their first year to the manufacture of mill machinery powered by water. The second year they used the machinery to produce 1,000 clocks and in the third year, in full stride, produced the other 3,000.

Thomas did the joinery. Clocks had wooden works and wooden cases and works were frequently sold separately. Thomas eventually bought out Terry's share of the business, then sold his interest to Hoadley.

There was a trade depression in the States in 1837. By the time clock making got underway again in the 1840s a method had been developed to roll brass, inexpensively, for the works.

Brass lent itself to mass production. Thomas bought rights to manufacture Terry's clock and built a mill for rolling brass. In 1853 he organized the Seth Thomas Clock Company in Plymouth Hollow, Connecticut. He died in 1859, to be suceeded by his son Seth who carried on the business.

Brass clock works were found to be economical and efficient: It did not warp and could be shipped by sea. American clockmakers invaded English and European markets and dominated-production in Canada for many years.

In 1875 an act of the legislature was passed dividing Plymouth into two parts, the new half to be called Thomaston after Seth Thomas. Labels with the address, Thomaston can be assumed to be after this date, although by 1875 the clock illustrated would be considered old fashioned.

Works for this type of clock are still known as "Plymouth Hollow Works" and are in demand by collectors. The case is well made and this example includes a special bracket shelf made for it. In working order the clock is worth about $125.

Successful Living

Loneliness Sometimes the Absence of Love

By DORIS CLARK

The amount of solitude which is attainable or would be wholesome in the case of any individual life is a matter which each of us must judge for himself . . . A due proportion of solitude is one of the most important conditions of mental health.

Therefore, if it be our lot to stand apart from those close natural ties by which life is for most people shaped and filled, let us not be in haste to fill the gap; let us not carelessly or rashly throw away the opportunity of entering into that deeper and more continual acquaintance with the unseen and eternal things which is the natural and great compensation for the loss of easier joys.

The loneliness which we rightly dread is not the absence of human faces and voices . . . it is the absence of love . . . Our wisdom therefore must lie in learning not to shrink from anything that may lie in store for us, but so to grasp the master key of life as to be able to turn everything to good and fruitful account. — Caroline E. Stephen (1908) From: "Christian Faith and Practice in the Experience of the Society of Friends".

Dear Doris: Word gets around, and now my aunt is looking for two poems. She has just bought herself an electric typewriter (at 72), the better to carry on a lifetime hobby of sharing poems with friends.

She lives with and cares for an elderly woman, then goes out all day babysitting a little girl who can't walk. But she still has time to hunt up poems for friends.

At present she is looking for two special ones: How Katie Knocked at the Door of Heaven, and Cats At Law.

I wonder if you truly realize what a profound effect your words of help, wisdom, cheer and hope have on the lives of others? — Appreciative Reader.

Dear Appreciative: You make me feel good all over.

I see by your aunt's enclosed note that the poem about the cats involves a certain rogue Jocco, who acts as judge in dividing one piece of cheese between two cats.

He cuts one piece larger than the other, then has to shave off the extra and eat it. Again and again he does this and the fast disappearing cheese eventually becomes his "lawyer's fee'.

That will teach cats not to fight over cheese — I hope. Wo knows it?

Dear Doris: I am a widow of a year and a half. I have a framed photograph of my husband, also my deceased father, on my dresser.

My boy friend says I should keep them out of sight as they are constant reminders of the past.

Do you agree? — Young Widow.

Dear Widow: Is there a nose - out - of - joint here? Surely your memory of past happiness is important to anyone who cares about you.

No reason for your friend to look at the pictures, since they are kept in your bedroom. If you were to marry him, that would be something else again.

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Co-ordinator Says

New Approach in Styles for 70s

MONTREAL (CP) — The fashion industry in the 1970s will be at the mercy of intellectual, highly selective and individualistic women, says fashion co-ordinator Iona Monahan.

In the next decade women will choose one of two possible attitudes—relegating fashion to its essential service of covering the body when and if needed, or treating it with humor as a kind of adult toy.

"A toy which she will manipulate for her own amusement and the amusement of others—for her own satisfaction and the satisfaction of others," predicts Miss Monahan, who has produced some of Montreal's best fashion shows.

"For the sake of the future of the industry, let us hope she takes the second route. If she does, the industry has a kind of future."

However, she warned that manufacturers can no longer get away with leaving the advertisement of Canadian designers to fashion writers.

"The so-called designers of the '60s will die in the '70s unless manufacturers get into the communications act. The introduce -a- designer-at-a-party - with-a-show-and-six- photographers-plus-a-press-release is not going to work in the selective '70s.

The educated, sophisticated consumer of this next decade will lead the retailer —towards functionalism or towards costuming."

Discussing the mod fasnion shows of the late '60s where child-like models frugged, ran and hopped up and down the runways, Miss Monahan says:

"These were shows with shock value. . . . The idea was to shock the industry and to wake it up to its own potential . . . to show that fashion was a living thing.

"The fashion show of the future is film. Not the static kind of commercial . . but the film that is as contemporary in its story, setting and editing as Easy Rider.

"Fashion is, after all, primarily a visual thing. It takes two seconds for an image to register . . . but in the late '60s, Canadian buyers were still sitting through hour long presentations and complaining that the clothes went by too fast."

A major question in the next several years will be whether Canadian designers have any real importance on the international scene. Do they make a valid contribution or are they just part of a game to keep the industry alive?

"Canadian fashion identity surfaced in the '60s," she says. "Never in the history of human endeavor has so much editorial support been given to so little from so few."

"We will probably be singing the same old song eight years from now," Miss Monahan says, "but I don't think that it is important that there is (a Canadian style).

"Canadians are part of the North American concept. We don't really have a Canadian identity so why must we be able to identify Canadian designers?

"It can't simply be a matter of inflated egos." ..

The 1970s should be a period of greater concern for the consumer, a time to move from a "planned obsolescence phase into the era of intellectual individualism."

A speed-up in communications will make fashion even more international. Relationships will become more intense. Young designers have attacked millinery with enthusiasm—"they may even get to shoes before the end of a trend."

"Thus, we will be spared the clunk and chunk of footwear in stores at the same time as soft, clinging fabrics, lengthening hemlines, etc."

As a final prediction, Miss Monahan says "age will have less and less significance as an intellectual approach to living increases."

"There will be respect only for the individual."

Ann Landers

Disposal of Gum Astonishes Fiance

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had a date the other night with a girl who has done secretarial work in foreign countries. Pearl is bright and attractive. I liked her very much until she did something that shocked me.

ANN LANDERS

Last night we went to dinner in a chic little cafe. I ordered expensive wine because I wanted to make an impression. When the food arrived, Pearl took a wad of gum out of her mouth and stuck it behind her ear. May jaw must have dropped because she asked, "What's the matter?" I told her I was surprised to see her do that. She replied: "It's an old Chinese custom. I learned it in Hong Kong. The most elegant women do it. I prefer it to putting gum on the wrist, as they do in Japan."

Have you ever heard of these customs? I'm flabbergasted. — CHAPEL HILL, N.C.

DEAR CHAP: She's putting you on. It's a childish hang up and an indelicate one to say the least. If she does it again, tell her the depression is over and hand her a nickel for a whole new package.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Here's one for the fellows who responded in praise of Miss Ice Cube — the man who married the girl who said no.

One must not generalize where females are concerned. Many girls will have an affair or two — before marriage. This doesn't mean they are tramps. Some girls go to bed with every guy who asks — for a variety of reasons. Most of them sick. Then there are the professional virgins — dames who come so close to having total sex that it makes no sense not to. These hypocrites are a dying breed, I'm happy to say.

It's a well known secret that girl can fake it and a fellow can be fooled. So — unless you marry someone straight from the cradle, boys, chances are that all you get was the crate the fruit came in. — JUST HUMAN.

DEAR JUST: And now in anticipation of the thousands of letters from readers who will ask if there is any sure way to ascertain virginity — the answer is no. So save your stamps, kiddies.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are very friendly with another couple. We have dinner together, play cards, go to movies and sport events as a foursome.

The other gal is up at the crack of dawn. She has her housework done before most people have breakfast. Then she races around all day — doing errands, shopping and visiting. By evening she is worn out. More than once she has fallen asleep in the middle of a card game. We've had to wake her up to take her out of a movie. One night she fell asleep during a baseball game and started to snore.

Please print this letter and wake her up. — GRAND RAPIDS.

DEAR GRAND: If your friend hasn't had a checkup recently, suggest it. Maybe she has narcolepsy. If the doc says she's in good health, plan earlier evenings. If that fails, your only solution is to substitute this couple with two nocturnals (night people). This gal is definitely diurnal and can't be changed.

An Economical Steam Pudding

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Just read your recipe for Spotted Dog. You say "Steam 4 hrs."!! I — and many other working mothers trying to feed families on this type of old-time economy food — simply do not have 4 hrs. all together to watch a steamer!! Why not add a line of instruction to do it in a pressure cooker? — Mrs. Phyllis T.

LETTER: I read your recipe for Spotted Dog with much interest. It is so different from what my mother made as spotted dog. I thought you would be interested in hers. I never knew it was an English pudding. So perhaps you could call hers a Hebridean Spotted Dog! — Mrs. L. C.

ANSWER: I did not anticipate the number of responses I would get for the recipe for Spotted Dog (Dick) I gave here by request on Jan. 10. By making up and steaming Mrs. L. C.'s recipe in a pressure cooker I have answered Mrs. Phyllis T's question too.

HEBRIDEAN SPOTTED DOG
(economical — no eggs or milk; courtesy Mrs. L. C.)

½ cup chopped lamb or beef suet
1 cup dark brown sugar
1 cup currants
1½ cups raisins
3 cups sifted all - purpose flour
2½ tsps. baking soda
1 tsp. cream of tartar
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. allspice
1 tsp. mace
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsps. molasses
⅞ cup water

In beater bowl cream together the suet and sugar until blended then mix in raisins and currants. Sift together the sifted flour, baking soda, cream of tartar, salt and spices and stir in along with the molasses and water.

Place in centre of large, strong, floured cloth and carefully gather up all cloth, rounding the pudding. Tie string bow securely, but allow some surplus room for creases will fill with pudding as it cooks. 1) Plunge into boiling water to cover and boil 2½ hrs. OR 2) Plunge into 1" boiling water in large pressure cooker, resting pudding on trivet and pressure cook at 10 lbs. pressure ¾ to 1 hr. Follow same pressure cooking timing for Jan. 10 Spotted Dog.

The following Rum Sauce stopped the show: 1 1-3 cups granulated sugar caramelized in heavy pan until slightly brown. At arm's length add 2-3 cup boiling water and stir until caramel dissolves. Blend ¼ cup melted butter and 3 tbsps. flour and stir in until thick. Add 4 tbsps. rum or 1 tsp. rum extract. Keep this rum sauce recipe.

The gentleman who requested Spotted Dog decided Jan. 10 recipe was the original version he wanted.

THE PERISHABLE THINGS

"The task of man - - - is to discover his own world in terms of human comprehension and beauty." — Archibald MacLeish.

* * *

Do you mind housework, girls?

You know — dusting, scrubbing, baking, washing - - - ?

"I used to," replies a Belleville housewife and mother, with whom we are discussing this phase of a woman's world, "but, since I've begun my treasury of little ordinary things, my household duties take on a different light, when at the end of the day I sort them over and hold them up to the light of my mind's eye, to celebrate their beauty.

"An example? Well, take this morning. As I took the eggs and milk from the 'fridge' to prepare breakfast, I saw my neighbor from the window, in her bright orange house coat watering the red geraniums that bloom in her windows. For a moment, I just stood, absorbing the beauty of the colorful scene before me, which even now fills my mind and this day, with a gentle contentment.

"My collection daily grows and increases, thanks to my grandmother, who in turn was indebted, she said, to my grandfather, an army man. He once told her prisoners of war became half - men, slaves, in fact, from lack of jobs to do. They became unable to derive the least joy from little daily commonplace things. 'Just as a person cannot live without some definite work, job to do,' he declared, 'so he cannot live without joy.'

"Not fond of housework, this set my grandmother to thinking: it does provide daily activity from which pride, dignity and sense of accomplishment arises. Also creating order out of chaos by virtue of housework, while baking, washing and cleaning, a woman is close to little daily ordinary things. These are important for they form her world. So she began to find enjoyment in the small joys that her household duties brought her, with a sense of greater fulfilment this gave her. This world, this acquiring a treasury of the little things, she passed on to me.

"A world of things, ordinary and commonplace, about which nothing can be done, but which exist for their own sake. These when noticed become beauty. They give serenity, comfort and joy to all whose heart says, 'yes' to food, rest, family and rain on the roof:

"Things like moonlight on the floor (nothing can be done about it, even if the shade is drawn; the moon still shines) . . . the gay artistry of a bright satin pillow against the dark sofa . . . the sparkle of crystal on the dinner table . . . baby's sudden adorable smile . . . the aroma of breakfast coffee in the morning. Listening or looking at, —

The shining of the sun, like silver, on pine needles green,
The rippling sound of water over pebbles in a stream,
The shaft of light, pouring like molten gold, through a glass of red stain."

The words of Russell Davenport take on new meaning: "Life is the sum of perishable things. The windy grass, the curved and dappling wings . . ." and we are reminded of Pearl Buck who in her "Letters from Peking" tells of sending a blanket to the cleaners to be dyed a deep rose. It came back the color of crushed roses. Of the pleasure and comfort which it gave her to lie beneath it she said,

"My comfort and pleasure are in such small things," and concludes, "It is the small things that are eternal."

Nixon Transfers U.S. Oil Policy to Arena of Public Debate

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon, by his decision Friday to maintain the status quo of the controversial United States oil policy, has nimbly transferred the question to the broader arena of public and congressional debate.

For a time—at least until after the vital congressional elections next November—he has avoided taking sides on the issues that divided his cabinet-level committee after it labored almost a year over a new policy.

The majority recommended that the present oil import quota program be phased out and a minority report urged its retention with the amount of oil imported being increased by perhaps one per cent a year. Imports now are limited to 12.2 per cent of domestic production on the grounds of national security.

Nixon accepted neither recommendation and instead named a new eight-member committee, a permanent oil policy committee, to begin work "immediately." He retains final say over its recommendations.

Additionally, he directed the state department to continue to examine with Canada "measures looking toward a freer exchange of petroleum, natural gas and other energy resources between the two countries."

The president noted all members of the committee agreed that "a unique degree of security can be offered by moving toward an integrated North American energy market."

The word "integrated" is again expected to lead to controversy in Canada similar to when Interior Secretary Walter Hickel suggested last December an all-embracing continental energy policy including Canada-U.S. co-operation on oil, natural gas, hydroelectric power, coal and the like.

Some Canadians warned this would give the U.S. too great a grip on Canada's natural resources.

A White House spokesman said at a press briefing later that "it is my understanding" that such a policy would not include Canadian water resources.

However, he said, it would include U.S. access to the Northwest Passage and possibly an oil pipeline through Canada from the vast Alaskan oil fields.

Although Nixon said the new committee will begin its work immediately, he said "major, long-term adjustments must necessarily await the outcome of discussions with Canada, Mexico, Venezuela and other allies and affected nations. . . ."

White House aide Peter Flanigan said, however, that change would come step-by-step, under the direction of the new policy committee, and it would not be necessary to await a whole new concept before a move was made.

Although Nixon chose his words carefully in sanctioning the talks with Canada, most observers interpreted his statement as a broad endorsement of the trend toward greater U.S. reliance on Western Hemisphere oil supplies.

Within that context, it was noted, Canada alone was singled out for specific consultations and linked with the "integrated" scheme.

What Nixon seemed to be underlining was that Western Hemisphere supplies are most secure, that the U.S. is going to have to look outside its own industry for supplies soon and that Canada offers the best and most secure supply.

A lot will depend—in long, hard negotiations ahead—on what price the U.S. will seek to extract in return for opening her markets to Canadian oil.

The oil-policy committee will be headed by George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness and will include most of the cabinet ministers who served on the committee and whose report was released Friday.

The continental policy recommended by both the majority and minority reports also would include Mexico but it was presumed her contribution would be minimal by comparison with the U.S.-Canada involvement.

Mexican oil imports remain fairly static at about 30,000 barrels a day and are not a source of controversy within the U.S. oil industry.

Initially, the majority report offers little for Canada. Canadian imports would be limited to 615,000 barrels a day from next July to 950,000 barrels a day by January, 1973.

Also Canada would be exempt from any increase in the present 10.5-cent-a-barrel tariff, while other tariffs would be increased substantially. It is in the long run—after the mid-1970s—that Canadian imports would increase substantially, provided there was general agreement on energy policies.

At present, Canadian imports are supposed to be held at 597,425 barrels a day but in fact they traditionally run well over the suggested limits. Last November, for instance, Canadian imports were 654,157 barrels a day—an overrun that brings strong protests from the U.S. industry.

Flanigan said Friday that talks were held in Ottawa last week concerning the consistent violation of the limits agreed on in 1967 diplomatic notes exchanged between Ottawa and Washington.

Although a draft report leaked to the press had talked of the U.S. opening its markets to perhaps 3,000,000 barrels of Canadian oil a day by 1980—which many experts considered an unrealistic figure from a production point of view—the final report limits itself generally to the period up to 1974. It adds, however, that imports could be expected to "increase substantially" by 1980.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELY
Manpower Counsellor

An analysis of the local employment picture for the past two weeks shows a decreased demand for both male and female workers.

At the same time, it is observed that the construction labor demand is displaying a strong trend for this time of the year. It is anticipated, in view of known planned local construction projects, that the construction labor demand will increase and be at a high level of activity in months ahead. Augmenting this strong local trend will be the effects felt on the local labor Hydro power plant near Bath over the immediate years ahead. This project is within commuting distance by the local labor supply.

It is a recognized fact that any industrial expansion is followed by an even larger increase in the services field.

The term 'services field' is used to describe the community business and personal service enterprises, such as schools, hospitals, hotels, motels, restaurants, sporting or recreational clubs, janitorial services, tourist operators and professional services, such as legal, dental, medical, engineering and business consultants. Locally there has been a substantial increase in the number of persons working in this area.

Here, again, it is expected that this upward trend will continue within this Canada Manpower Centre's area, which stretches north and south a distance of 100 miles.

In view of this it is a good idea to get those planned pre-spring chores done now while we are in a slower labor demand period.

Turning to the employment opportunities available at the Belleville office, there are positions calling for female workers such as housekeepers to live in, nursemaids, an experienced sales clerk, as well as in direct contact sales work.

For men seeking work the following vacancies are as yet unfilled, a real estate salesman, a work measurement technologist, a qualified cost accountant, an experienced pressman to operate a Miehle vertical press, an experienced automobile body shop manager and a maintenance mechanic foreman, experienced in packaging equipment. An apprentice vacancy exists for someone interested in learning the saddle-maker and leather trade.

Anyone interested in these positions, seeking employment or re-entering the labor market, is invited to contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church St., Belleville.

Scientist Heads Clean-up

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. P. D. McTaggart-Cowan of Ottawa will meet scientists and Imperial Oil Co. Ltd. representatives here today as he begins his six-week project to clean up oil pollution on Canada's Atlantic coast.

Dr. McTaggart-Cowan, executive director of the Science Council of Canada, has been instructed by Transport Minister Don Jamieson to get rid of oil slicks in Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay and near Newfoundland's Burin Peninsula.

After a flying visit tonight to Port Hawkesbury, N.S., he will fly to Newfoundland where oil slicks were sighted near the Burin Peninsula.

Wall Street Again Boosts Canadian Markets

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets this week moved ahead for the second consecutive week with the propulsion again supplied by Wall Street.

Canadian markets posted their second weekly gain of 1970 last week following reports from the United States—denied by major New York banks—that bank interest rates may be reduced.

This week, Canadian markets advanced fractionally Monday and then dropped sharply Tuesday.

Observers said with no positive news, investor psychology in those two sessions appeared to be dominated by fear that further price declines may be recorded.

They said the continuing tight money policies in Canada and the United States and political tension in the Middle East added to investor concern.

But Wednesday, markets shot ahead after Walter Heller, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, said he expected an easing of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board's tight money policy within a month.

The momentum of Wednesday's rally carried over into the first half of Thursday's session before dropping off.

Some of Thursday's strength resulted from a statement by Maurice Stans, U.S. commerce secretary, that he expected the Federal Reserve Board to ease the U.S. money supply "in a matter of months."

Despite the reversal of the rally, markets still managed small gains Thursday.

On Friday, as they did last week when there was no American influence, Canadian markets took the opposite road of U.S. markets and climbed sharply.

Although this week's advance was the second in a row, observers said there were lines of weakness in Canadian markets.

In each of the last two weeks, declining issues outnumbered advancing issues by a wide margin, indicating strength in blue chip stocks and weakness in speculative and middle-of-the road issues.

Volume also continued to dry up; indicating investors and most institutions have still decided to remain out of the market until some positive and lasting indications appear that the federal government is loosening its choke on money.

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange this week, industrials gained 2.00 to 180.43, western oils 2.79 to 202.00 and base metals .84 to 112.95. Golds lost 6.37 to 145.62.

Volume was 8,746,000 shares compared with 10,092,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 486 to 293 with 231 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index gained 1.96 to 177.68. Combined volume was 5,794,000 shares compared with 8,204,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 210 to 133 with 210 issues unchanged.

Interest Rates Starting to Ease

OTTAWA (CP) — Interest rates in Canada are easing downward from the record-high ranges achieved in 1969. Some statistical straws in the wind suggest the cost of borrowing money will decline farther.

While the cost of borrowing for home purchase remains stubbornly above the 10-per-cent rate reached late last year — about 10¼ for government insured mortgages, 10½ for conventional loans—key rates in the money markets are dropping.

Memorial Trophy Presented

Police hockey team representative Bob McAlpine accepts the Lorne McLinton Memorial Trophy from Bobby McLinton in the trophy's first year of police - fire department competition. National Hockey League veteran Lorne "Gump" Worsley acted as referee for Friday night's game, won 4-1 by the police team.

Short-handed Mo-Hawks Blanked 8-0

ORILLIA (Special) — There is nothing harder than wanting to win a hockey game you know doesn't mean anything.

Belleville Mo - Hawks were Living proof of that last night, dropping an 8-0 "nothing game" here to OHA Senior A pennant-winning Terriers.

With the sixth league playoff spot under their braces for three weeks now, the Mo - Hawks found it hard to get enthused about a 200-mile bus visit to the rink of the best team in the league.

Last night's Mo-Hawk lineup didn't include working Lorne Ferguson, Lionel Botly, and John Baker, Wayne Brown (torn ankle ligaments), and Davey Jones, who stayed behind the bench to look for weak points that could hamper Mo - Hawks playoff success.

The main weakness last night was an overriding inability to beat 18-year-old Orillia goaltender Ray Ryan, who kicked out all 22 Belleville shots in making his first senior hockey appearance.

The Mo-Hawks' Steve Rexe was eight goals less fortunate on 35 Terrier scoring chances. Clare Alexander, Carl Hymers, and George Westfall each beat Rexe twice, and Dave Nicolission and Grant Moore added single goals.

"It'll be a different story tomorrow," said Jones of Sunday afternoon's 2.30 Memorial visit by the Terriers. "Sure these are nothing games, but we're going to make good use of them."

Jones said defenceman Lou Kazowski made a shaky return to the Mo-Hawk lineup after a 10-game absence due to a cracked ankle. "Lou had a little bit of trouble turning, but that was to be expected."

Kazowski will make his first home appearance since his injury in tomorrow afternoon's game. The only definite non - starter will be "Weiner" Brown, whose torn ankle ligaments will keep him out of the lineup until at least next week, when the Mo - Hawks begin playoffs with Kingston.

The Aces cinched third spot last night with an 8-4 win over Galt.

Playoff dates will be announced Monday, and the Mo-Hawk Booster Club will be running buses to the Kingston games. (Interested parties should telephone 962-2605, 962-6078, or 968-9924 evenings.)

Tomorrow's schedule-closer will provide the first Belleville glimpse of the Terriers since Oct. 24 when the league-leaders beat the locals 5-2.

Sunday's game will also be the Mo-Hawks' tenth straight try in two seasons to hand the Terriers a loss.

Police-Firemen Draw 2000 To See Cops on Top 4-1

By MAURICE SWITZER

Sports Editor

As far as finesse was concerned, last night's annual police-fire department hockey game was a flop. The city constabulary outweighed the firemen about 4-1, and that was the margin of their victory.

Fortunately, lack of style seldom subtracts public interest in the annual rivalry, which last night drew Belleville's largest hockey crowd of the season — over 2,000 — to the Memorial Arena. (The game's purpose was an unmitigated success. More than $800 will go into the Firemen's underprivileged children's fund.)

A large portion of the crowd came to get a first-hand glimpse of a man who still has his sanity after 20 years of professional hockey goaltending — guest of honor Lorne "Gump" Worsley. Worsley officiated last night's game, with the aid of former pro hockey teammate J. P. Lamirande and local linesman John Emerson.

Some even came to see the game, which Deadly Don Yearwood salted away for the bobbies with three goals.

Bob McAlpine, a going concern for the police squad all evening, traded first-period goals with the fire department's Don Putnam, but that's as close as the smokies came all night.

Bob Andrus found himself in the police line of fire 22 times, including 13 in the last period, while police goalie Garney Goodwin stopped 18 out of 19 fire department attempts.

The police department proved crime can pay drawing 10 of 13 penalties assessed by arbiter "Gump". Constables John Hill and Bob McAlpine were chief villains, each sitting out three sentences.

This year's game marked the first presentation of the new Lorne McLinton Memorial Trophy, donated by the Belleville Knights of Columbus chapter in memory of the late 11-year member of the city police department.

Bobby McLinton, 12, presented a substitute for the unfinished new annual trophy to the police department's Bob McAlpine.

If they came out on the short end of the score, the firemen had their compensations.

Fire department sports chairman Don Putnam and police counterpart Bob Begbie presented Local 497 Firefighters' representative Jay Ross with some $800 for the firemen's underprivileged children's fund.

Besides, fire chief Leo Culhane salvaged some glory for the reds at the official puck-dropping ceremonies by Mayor Russell Scott.

Chief Culhane slid the draw away from police chief Douglas Crosbie with all the deftness of Syl Apps.

Worsley Going To North Stars According To Latest Report

"Gump" Worsley's refereeing days may be over almost before they begin.

The 17-season National Hockey League goaltending veteran was a smash hit in his role os celebrity referee in last night's annual police-fire department hockey game.

But his puck-stopping talents are of more concern to the NHL's Minnesota North Stars.

Worsley learned on his arrival in Belleville yesterday that word had leaked of a proposed trade between Montreal Canadiens and Minnesota, with Worsley the central figure.

"I've known about this for 10 days, but it wasn't supposed to get out," Worsley said. "I'm meeting with Blair (Minnesota General manager Wren Blair) Wednesday to see what kind of deal he'll offer me to report . . ."

Nearing 41, Worsley left the Canadiens early this season after refusing to accept Claude Ruel's demotion to Montreal Voyageurs, to play himself into shape.

After 10 dismal seasons with New York Rangers, the "Gump" enjoyed four Stanley Cups and a Vezina Trophy in his stay with the Canadiens.

McFall Spoils Ellis Comeback

By ERIC EMERSON

Staff Sportswriter

It's pretty hard to believe that the Belleville Ellis Printers could call up a juvenile centre who would score three goals in his first game, replacing injured pivot John McConnell. It's even harder to believe that the Belleville team could come from behind three different times and score the winning goal at 18.59 of the final period of the season — so Bim McFall didn't.

The tall Trenton centre, who appears to handle the puck by remote control at times, banked a shot from the corner, off Belleville netminder Paul Hopkins' skates at 19.37 of the third period, to give the Golden Hawks a 6-6 saw-off. The goal, despite the fact it could hardly be classed as a picture effort, capped a strong skating and stickhandling exhibition by McFall.

Ted Waite had given Belleville a one - goal lead with just over a minute left to play, when he banged Danny Lupenette's passout from the corner past Trenton goalie Brian Wilson.

Jim Drummond, called up from the Western Tire Juveniles for the game was the Printers' scoring star, firing three goals, including one at 16.10 of the final period which knotted the score at 5-5 and set the stage for the last minute dramatics. "He was a real opportunist for us, tonight," said Ellis coach Floyd Crawford.

In spite of the fast finish, the game was often scrambly, as neither team appeared to be in danger of combat fatigue. Trenton dominated play for two periods, while the Printers held the edge, in the final frame.

Each team replaced its starting goalie in the last period, with somewhat different results. Paul Hopkins in the Belleville nets appeared to feel the effects of his long lay-off on a couple of occasions particularly when he was hand-cuffed by a long shot by Trenton winger Craig Bennett. The Ellis back-up, who was victim of a bad break on McFall's tying goal, appeared to be sharper near the end of the period and the tune-up should be valuable for him in any play-off emergencies that could arise.

Brian Wilson, on the other hand was sensational at times, particularly on winger Dennis MacCormack's breakaway attempt.

Craig Bennett scored two goals for the Hawks and added a pair of helpers to pace the attack. Keith Bonisteel, Gary Lisle, Chris Long and McFall were the other Trenton scorers.

For the Printers, Drummond had his hat trick and Danny Lupenette, John Hill and Ted Waite each scored once. Terry Meagher added an assist on one of Drummond's goals to finish the season with 57 points, tops for the Ellis team.

The game was a mild affair in comparison with most Trenton-Belleville match-ups, with each team drawing six minor penalties.

Belleville opens their semi-final play-off round with Oshawa on Tuesday night in the Motor City. Game time is 8 p.m.

Bowerman Just Misses Cut

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)— Ron Cerrudo, a bland personality with an aggressive game said a couple of long putts, one to save par, were the keys to his second round lead in the San Antonio Open golf tournament.

But some beautiful iron play, and his complete unconcern with the miserable playing conditions had to figure into it, too, as he cut out a course record-matching 65 for 136.

Cerrudo was in a group that then switched around to a morning tee time Friday. Playing conditions were a little better for them both days.

But neither was a bargain. Friday's play was halted once for 20 minutes when sleet made it impossible to putt. Showers fell from time to time all day. The temperature didn't make 50 degrees and play was completed with officials using towels to brush sleet off the greens.

Cerrudo held a one-stroke lead over Rod Funseth, the first-round leader who slipped to a par 70 for 137. John Schlee, 70, and Kermit Zarley, 69, were three more strokes back at 140. Jim Jamieson and Lou Graham, each 70, were tied at 141.

Dave Hill, Al Geiberger and Toronto's Al Balding were in a large group at 142 along with Earl Jacobsen, course superintendent at the 7,138 yard Pecan Valley Golf Club, who had a sparkling 66.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver had a 75 for a total of 149 while Belleville, Ont. native, Gary Bowerman had a 76 for 150

The cut for the final two rounds was 148, eight strokes over par.

Novices Win Series

The Belleville Food City Novices stopped Trenton 9-2 to win their best of three play-off series two games to nothing. The Novices now receive a bye into the finals of their zone four championship playoffs.

Andy Lupenette and Randy Hutchinson scored three goals apiece to pace the Food City scorers. Bobby Crawford added two goals and Gary Fredericks one for Belleville. Each of the teams was assessed one penalty.

The novices play an exhibition game against Cobourg, tomorrow at 5:30 p.m. in the Belleville Arena.

Centennial Wins Three

Moira Seniors Stop Saints' Sweep

Moira Trojans took a 64-53 decision from the senior Saints to prevent a three game sweep for Quinte in high school basketball play last night, while in other action, the Centennial Chargers won all of their games against Centre Hastings.

Dave Thompson was high man for the senior Trojans, hooping 17 points for the runners-up in the second division. Dave Grant (16) and Martin Wormald (11) were next best for Moira. Leo "Cory" Baker had the game's high total of 22 points for the Saints, with Pete Middleton adding 10 points and Steve Ogden eight.

Despite playing without the services of high scoring guard Steve Nash, the Quinte juniors kept their unbeaten record intact with a 78-51 win. Barry Culkin led the Quinte scorers for the second consecutive game, pumping in 24 points. Darwin Easton collected 18 and Kim Hunter was good for ten points. Phil Kirby had 16 points and Brian Glover 11 for Moira.

Quinte's bantams assured themselves of a spot in the league playoffs, winning a close 46-39 game. Bruce Nickel (16), Terry Collins (14) and Ian Hayman (10) were the top point-getters. Moira was paced by John Perry with 11 points and Paul Neill and Dave Dent scored nine and eight points respectively.

At Centennial, the senior Chargers, who are assured of a first place finish in their division, came through with a 76-52 victory over Centre Hastings.

Koch had 18 points for Centennial, while Wilson picked up 15 points and Ineson 14. Centre Hastings got a big 28 point effort from Huh.

Centennial's juniors held the opposition to 10 points, while running up 58 themselves for an easy victory. Henderson (14), Derry (10) and Thompson (8) were the big guns in the victory. Empey hooped six points for Centre Hastings.

Tom Barriage paced the bantam attack for the Chargers, netting 16 points. David Harvie contributed seven points and Colen McIntyre five. Price scored 21 points in a losing effort.

Hawks Deal DeJordy, Marotte to Kings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Los Angeles Kings have a long way to go to break out of the National Hockey League wilderness, but a 12-player trade with two other clubs Friday could at least help their next-season prospects.

The Kings are mired in the West Division cellar, 17 points behind the last playoff spot held by Oakland Seals who dropped a 3-1 loss to the leading St. Louis Blues in Friday's only game.

But even with the new players acquired in deals with Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings, the Kings have a difficult task ahead in trying to improve their standing with only 21 games remaining.

The Friday trades sent Kings defenceman Bill White, goalie Gerry Desjardins and centre Bryan Campbell to Chicago for goalie Denis DeJordy, defenceman-forward Gilles Marotte and centre Jim Stanfield.

Sent to Detroit were defencemen Dale Rolfe and Larry Johnston and left-winger Gary Croteau in exchange for defenceman Brian Gibbons and left-winger Gary Monahan. The Kings claimed Detroit defenceman Matt Ravlich on waivers in the same deal.

The Kings have a record of nine wins, 40 losses and six ties in their 55 games.

"Something had to be done," said Kings general manager Larry Regan.

"We seem to be down and although you don't want to trade for the sake of trading, we just had to do something."

Regan said the Kings are talking to two other teams and further trades could be announced within the next week.

Chicago general manager Tommy Ivan was happy with the deal that brought 30-year-old All-Star defenceman White to the Black Hawks.

Ivan said White would be the replacement for Pat Stapleton who is out for the remainder of the season with torn knee ligaments.

DENNIS DeJORDY

"Marotte was not playing too badly, but we think White will be a big help," Ivan said.

"We hated to see DeJordy go. We turned him pro in 1967 and he's been with us since. But we got a good goalkeeper in return."

Desjardins, regular goalie with the Kings, will move in as backup man to Tony Esposito who this season captured DeJordy's starting position.

The Kings plan to use five of their new players immediately while Gibbons, from Detroit's Fort Worth farm club in the Central League, will go to the Kings' Springfield club in the American League.

Stanfield, 23, younger brother of Boston Bruins' Fred Stanfield, was in his third season with Chicago's Dallas form club in the CHL.

Monahan, also 23, was traded by Montreal Canadiens last summer to Detroit in a deal involving Pete Mahovlich, younger brother of Frank.

Defenceman Ravlich, 31, was drafted by Detroit from Chicago last summer.

Campbell, 25, was in his third season with the Kings.

The Red Wings likely will use winger Croteau and defenceman Rolfe in their game tonight against the Maple Leafs in Toronto. Croteau is a 23-year-old Sudbury, Ont., native who was in his second season with the Kings. Rolfe, 29, from Timmins, Ont., was in his third year with the western club.

Johnston, 26, played only four games for the Kings in 1967-68, and has been a regular with the Springfield farm club. The Red Wings will likely send him to the Fort Worth club.

The Kings expect to have their new players on hand tonight when they play host to St. Louis while Chicago tries out its new personnel in a home game against New York Rangers.

The Rangers, already missing defenceman Jim Nielson, with torn knee ligaments, said Friday that rearguard Brad Park has been sidelined with a broken right ankle.

In other games tonight, Philadelphia Flyers visit Montreal Canadiens, Boston meets Minnesota North Stars in Minneapolis and Pittsburgh Penguins travel to Oakland.

Business as Usual

Canadian Football League Commissioner Jake Gaudaur's office door is always open and so is his hospital room. Moncton Rink Top Schoolboys

ST. JEROME Que. (CP) — Ron Ferguson skipped his Moncton N.B. rink to the Canadian schoolboy curling championship Friday staving off a late bid by the hot Alberta team to tie the standings and force a playoff.

Before taking the trophy east of Ontario for the first time in 21 years New Brunswick had to supress a battling Prince Edward Island crew 7-4 in the 11th and final round when Alberta capped a seven-game comeback by defeating Newfoundland 8-6 in its last game.

Skipped by Dave Haley of Athabaska Alberta edged New Brunswick 8-7 in the first round with a big five count in the ninth end for the Maritimers' only loss.

Alberta then lost important games to Quebec's Myron Nussey and Bob Thompson of British Columbia before engineering an impressive string of seven straight wins.

The western rink needed a loss by New Brunswick to force a playoff but the Ferguson foursome rolled up nine victories after the first round to withstand the Alberta charge.

Ferguson credited the experience he and third Garth Jardine gained in last year's national championships for New Brunswick's smooth performance.

"We didn't lose interest after the first game" he said. "Whereas last year it would have affected us."

Morale was "a major key" to the title and "we all knew we had to keep the team up."

Coach Ed Steeves who also guided last year's New Brunswick entry from the same Moncton High School said: "They're a real team—off the ice as well as on."

Steeves plays third for New Brunswick's rink in next week's Brier Canadian men's curling championships.

Jardine second Brian Henderson and lead Cyril Sutherland steadily met Ferguson's calls for either draw or takeout shots while the skip switched tactics to match his opponent.

Alberta's Haley said: "It doesn't feel too good to come in second especially when you know you could have won it."

"The one consolation was that we beat the champions."

Haley blamed the two losses in the second and third rounds on himself. "I let them down by curling poorly on those rounds," he said.

Manitoba and Quebec finished in a tie for third with seven wins and three losses.

Manitoba was riding a 10-game winning streak going into the tournament but fell prey to the jinx that has left Manitoba second or third in every one of the last six years and without a trophy since the championship began in 1950. Skip was Brian Penston of Winnipeg.

Quebec came from behind on the final end in all but one of its victories, earning skip Myron Nussey a deadly reputation as a draw player.

But Quebec dropped out of the running Thursday night when New Brunswick outclassed them in the "really big one," as Jardine described it.

This year's Quebec rink the youngest at the tournament with two players aged 16 and two 14 "were told if they get into trouble to freeze rocks" says coach Bruce Ness.

He said the Quebec losses came when they were "teased into playing the other fellows' game."

British Columbia blew hot and cold to win six and lose four in fourth spot.

"We sort of fell apart in the middle" commented skip Bob Thompson.

"But New Brunswick's got a good team and they deserve to win."

Doug Hagerman of Northern Ontario and Dave Folk of Saskatchewan followed B.C. with 5-5 won-lost records. Newfoundland's Ken Baggs Ontario's Fred Osburn Eric Tweedie of Nova Scotia and Don Carmichael of Prince Edward Island trailed with two wins and eight losses each.

Sport Briefs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ace baseball pitcher Juan Marichal, stopping off here en route to spring training, said Friday that he and Willie Mays are the best of friends. He also said he expects to sign his 1970 contract with the National League San Francisco Giants shortly. Marichal, 21-game winner last season, said remarks attributed to him about Mays during the winter were exaggerated. "This fellow asked me about the Giants of 1970 and then something about Willie Mays. I did say that Willie wasn't the ball player he once was, but I want Willie behind me all the time."

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers said Friday star defenceman Brad Park suffered a broken right ankle during Thursday night's game against Detroit. The National Hockey League club said another examination would determine how long Park is likely to be sidelined.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Von Ruden cracked the 1,000-metre indoor world record Friday night while Martin McGrady equalled the 500-metre world mark at the U.S. Olympic Invitational track meet. Von Ruden won in 2:21. The previous record was set in 1967 by Pierre Toussaint of France with a time of 2:21.2. McGrady glided to victory in 1:02.9, tying the indoor mark set by Mal Whitfield in 1953. Olympian Erv Hall of Philadelphia equalled the world 55-metre high hurdles record, blazing to a 7.1-second clocking. Hall's time matched the world best of U.S. Olympic champion Willie Davenport, set last year.

Gaudaur Makes Slip on Slopes

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — He looked for all the world like a Paul Bunyan, with the three-foot-wide shoulders dwarfing the narrow hospital bed and the stories already becoming tall tales.

"One had me sailing 100 feet through the air in a cartwheel and they're getting so exaggerated that by next summer it will be 200 feet," said commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the Canadian Football League.

Gaudaur, who fractured his hip in a skiing accident in this resort area Tuesday, was flat on his back at the Huntsville District Memorial Hospital.

It was business as usual for the 225-pound former centre with Montreal Alouettes and Hamilton Tigers, however, who is carrying on the business of running Canada's professional football by telephone with his secretary, who is at a nearby hotel.

Voyageurs Widen First-Place Gap

Everybody got a little fatter Friday night in Montreal as the Voyageurs continued their domination of the American Hockey League Eastern Division and Judes Drouin continued pulling ahead in the league scoring roce.

The Voyageurs blasted Springfield Kings, their closest challengers, 9-2, with Drouin contributing two goals and three assists.

The victory boosted the Voyageurs to a 19-point lead in the standings and Drouin's production gave him 74 points, seven more than Guy Trottier of Buffalo Bisons.

Trottier was shut out in Friday's other game when the Bisons came back to tie the Providence Reds 3-3.

Alain Caron and Larry Pleau also scored twice each for Montreal with single goals going to Jean Gauthier, Pierre Bouchard and Guy Charron as the Voyageurs outshot the Kings 35-22.

Doug Shelton and Bill Inglis scored for Springfield.

At Buffalo, Joe Szura and Dick Meissner scored in a two-minute, nine-second span during the third period for Buffalo to earn the tie after Alton White had given Bisons a short-lived first-period lead.

Skelton Figures Puzzle

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS dropped Red Skelton from next season's schedule at least partly because its research department statistics indicated that 42 per cent of his estimated 32,000,000 viewers were 50 years old and over; 34 per cent were between 18 and 49, and the rest 17 and under.

NBC immediately hired Skelton because its statistics showed he ranked 29th in its list of "demographic appeal to audiences in the 18 to 49 age group" and was No. 8 in the popularity list.

These confusing viewpoints indicate how complicated television's numbers game is becoming as audience research gets more sophisticated. And television has become more youth consious since advertising agencies began hunting for entertainment programs with appeal to young, growing families—the big consumers.

CBS and NBC released their fall schedules within minutes of each other Thursday, and except for the switch of networks by Skelton, they contained few real surprises.

CBS will drop five shows, including Jackie Gleason's hour and Petticoat Junction, and add six. NBC will drop five, including My World and Welcome to It, and add five.

Lancer and Get Smart, as expected, will not return to CBS, and in September Tim Conway will star in an hour variety show.

NBC, as anticipated, decided to end I Dream of Jeannie, The Debbie Reynolds Show and Daniel Boone.

Some familiar faces which will return to TV next season with their own programs include Flip Wilson and Don Knotts, each with an hour of comedy on NBC. CBS will welcome the return of Andy Griffith, Mary Tyler Moore and Hershel Bernardi—co-star of Peter Gunn—in situation comedies.

There will be a new medical series and a lawyer series, both on CBS. There will be no new westerns or cops-and-robbers, unless NBC fills one still vacant hour with one. At any rate, the two schedules suggest that violence and physical conflict are still off TV limits.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Ski Reports

Skiing Sunday at Oak Hills Ski Club 9.30-4.30.
Ski conditions GOOD.

Will you ever make enough money to own your own home?

WILL the next five dollar raise put you in the home buying league? Or even the five dollar raise after that?

MAYBE you're in a dead end job?
Or a dying industry?

Maybe you should be looking for a way to break out.

INSTEAD of just waiting for a break.

THERE is a way out. Thousands of people have taken it. Most of them young people, in their twenties and thirties. Most of them ordinary people — high school graduates

ALL of them became junior computer programmers. And all of these people learned to become junior computer programmers at the same school - Electronic Computer Programming Institute ECPI.

ECPI is a major educational institution with over 100 branches.

NO, you don't have to be good in math to be a computer programmer.

AND no, it doesn't matter if you remember your high school algebra or not.

COMPUTER Programming is a brand new ball game. You start from scratch. And at ECPI you start right in; with practical work, on real computers.

YOUR next step is to send away for our free aptitude test. It'll give you some idea if you can make it in computer programming. (Most of the people we turn into programmers never thought they had the brains for it.) Correspondence courses also available.

Crippled Babies Moved

Quebec Hospitals Are Facing Strike, Sit-ins and Slowdowns

MONTREAL (CP) — Forty-three crippled babies from a Thetford Mines, Que., children's hospital have been relocated in several Montreal hospitals following a walkout by medical and non-medical members of the staff.

A spokesman for the hospital said the babies were transported to Montreal in 17 ambulances, escorted by Quebec Provincial Police and Montreal motorcycle police.

Mrs. Jean-Guy Delisle, owner and director of Ste. Marie's Children's Hospital, said the evacuation was forced when 37 employees refused to continue work.

She would not elaborate on reasons for the walkout and said: "I have been told by government officials not to make any statements."

Meanwhile, emergency cases only were being admitted to several major Montreal-area hospitals where 1,600 non-medical workers staged sit-ins to protest the Quebec government's failure to meet its deadline for retroactive pay.

The non-medical workers are demanding overdue back pay guaranteed in a new contract signed two months ago. The contract covers 42,000 non-medical employees throughout the province.

Government officials blamed the pay delay on computer malfunctioning.

At least five hospitals were forced to depend on volunteers and nurses Friday, to make beds, serve meals and run elevators. At several hospitals, nurses served cold meals on paper plates.

One hospital, the Alexandra which specializes in the treatment of children with brain damage, made a special plea for volunteers "because these children need constant care and are quite helpless."

The hospitals said they are being forced to accept emergency cases only because interns and resident doctors already are staging a work slowdown to back demands for higher pay.

The residents and interns have stopped working night and wekend duty, affecting 55 hospitals in the province.

Their dispute arose Feb. 1 when negotiations with the government reached an impasse on demands for more pay by the province's 2,135 interns and residents.

They are seeking wage parity with their Ontario counterparts who earn $5,500 a year. Quebec interns earn $4,400 a year and residents get the same basic salary but have annual increases from $400 to $500. The doctors are seeking a $5,500 base with automatic annual increases of $800.

Attending staff had been filling in the overnight and weekend duties but their assistance now is minimal since orderlies, nurses' aides, kitchen help, switchboard and elevator operators began sit-ins Thursday.

In suburban Greenfield Park, Charles LeMoyne Hospital needed assistance after 600 employees marched off their jobs and gathered in the cafeteria.

In other institutions, St. Michel Hospital was hit by a two-hour work stoppage Thursday, Notre Dame Hospital had a one-hour disruption, and St. Joseph de Rosemont was affected by an eight-hour work halt.

On Friday, 850 employees at Montreal General Hospital staged sit-ins in the cafeteria, while 150 at Queen Elizabeth Hospital walked off the job.

Maisonneuve and Montreal Protestant hospitals were also hit by work halts Friday.

Kierans Accuses Union Of Keeping Men Idle

MONTREAL (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans Friday accused union officials of jeopardizing the future of striking Montreal postal truck drivers by not allowing them to apply for jobs with new postal delivery contractors.

Mr. Kierans said all five companies who will share the mail pickup and delivery contract starting April 1 are willing to hire the drivers who apply for jobs. "But the Confederation of National Trade Unions is not allowing the drivers to apply."

Meanwhile, the CNTU and the Quebec Federation of Labor said letter carriers and postal clerks will not do any work normally done by the 450 mail truck drivers conducting a rotating strike.

The unions said in a joint statement Friday they are giving "unconditional support" to the truck drivers.

The drivers, employed by G. Lapalme Inc., have been holding the strike since Feb. 3 to bring attention to the possibility of their losing jobs when the present contract expires and is split up.

Twenty to 40 drivers a day have been staying off work, slowing the movement of letters and parcels between sub-stations and the main post office.

Mr. Kierans is spending the weekend in Montreal in meetings with postal officials, union representatives and Lapalme management to try and reach an immediate solution.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Marriage Fails To Make Her Tidy

Mothers get nervous; daughters get tense. A common cause is the inability of the daughter to meet the mother's requirements for sharing the responsibility of keeping the home clean and neat.

As a family doctor I have often had the duty to act as a marriage counselor to husband and wife. But the mother-daughter relationship has been a problem, too.

Often I have told mothers to have faith and hope that when the daughter married she would suddenly be transformed into an efficient housekeeper. I have seen this happen practically overnight. The irresponsible child quickly becomes the good housekeeper. But not always so:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In today's Bergen Record I read the letter from Mrs. Y., whose daughter is driving her to tranquilizers because she keeps her room in a messy state. Well, doctor, if that letter had been printed three years ago my mother would have been after you with an axe.

Let's say old Mom Nature came to battle with me — and lost. No transformation happened when I moved from mother's home to my own. The only miraculous change that came about was that the space I had to "discombobulate" tripled.

I am a good cook, though, if that's any consolation. I've rationalized that my daughter, my job, and everything else keeps me from housework.

I've at last faced up to myself and admitted that I'm just a hard - core slob and will never change. Once in a while I'll get an urge to clean a room, but after 24 hours I have it back to its original state of upheaval. Which leaves about 80 per cent of the housework to my beloved.

I imagine that either dirt (actually disorder) is my bag or I have some psychological disorder. Which do you think it is? — Mrs. K.

Comment: I wish I could say. We can blame practically everything on some psychological aberration. Is it a leftover from childish rebellion? I don't know.

In spite of your "case history" I am still astounded at the similar young women I have known who were miraculously transformed overnight when they became mistresses of their own home after marriage. Dust and disorder suddenly became their sworn enemies.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have two questions. Is it possible for a woman to start her change in her late thirties or early forties? Also, does the fact that a girl begins her monthly periods early in life (say 11 years of age) mean that her change of life will begin early? Thank you. — Mrs. M.

Comment: The answer to your first question is yes. (Although the most usual ages are the middle or late forties.) In reply to your second question, I have found it to be true usually that the earlier the history of onset of menses the later the beginning of the menopause. (Not an invariable rule.)

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What would you advise one to do who has become excessively afraid of germs and washes his hands every time he touches anything, especially the doorknobs and the latch on car doors? He is no longer able to work and lives in a state of fear. Although intelligent otherwise, he admits he has lost all reasoning concerning germs. — Mrs. R.

Comment: The name for fear of contamination is misophobia. If, as seems evident in this man, it interferes with his job and normal way of life, he is a candidate for psychiatric treatment.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 22

Your birthday today: A year of creative unrest now begins. What worked well before no longer suits your taste. In search of achievement and conditions to fit developing needs you create much that helps others as well as yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The simplest path through this Sunday is the best one. People around you have enough to concern themselves about without your adding complexity. Make it an early evening for the needed rest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Incidents in the home may reveal unsuspected conditions requiring prompt corrections. Otherwise, try to achieve a leisurely, unpressured day.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Put on a show for visitors. Ask a million questions, offer amenities, compliments or even flattery, according to the needs of individuals. All this social activity builds promising new contacts.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Even if you believe the story yourself, avoid repeating gossip. You may be rather susceptible to any abnormality of food or drink.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): This Sunday tests your flexibility, your responses to subtly altered situations. There is more than meets the eye in proposals you hear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Recruit more people to share your games and pastimes today. Take friends along if you travel even for short distances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The fact that things are going well in general should not lead you into taking anything for granted. Your home life and the emotional needs of loved ones is more important than anything else at the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your relationship with members of the opposite sex is still subject to misunderstanding and tension.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Bring visitors with you to your church. Postpone travel if conditions are unfavorable—there are other means of communication which serve almost as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): It is important that you find something good and generous to say about everybody you know, even people you disagree with. Travel, sight-seeing, party-giving should be budgeted in advance, and not left to chance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You must cope with the expressed whims of partner regarding everything from trivialities to trust funds and choice of profession.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Saturday's full moon eclipse has you and the Virgo people under considerable pressure to move on tr higher things. Turn on the charm; react to others' magnetism. Neighbors may be sensitive to noise or competition from your exuberant group.

For February 23

Your birthday today: Older people, chronic conditions, traditional methods come forward with you into the coming year—sometimes hindering, sometimes helping your efforts. Work hard for advancement of whatever feasible projects you have organized. Stay mainly with the highest-paying activity.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You have lots of company now, people following the same pathway with the same sort of problems.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Creative inspiration may bring immediate material rewards for your special way of expressing it. Put on your most dramatic appearance; project a strong image of your inner self.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Practical advice comes to you, unsolicited, from some who seldom comment as well as those who overdo. Be a gracious, cheerful extrovert to all advisers and do what you would have done anyway.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Last minute luck and probably brief moments of high adventure mark your day. Younger relatives are building up some mischief.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You must make clear to all just what your goals are and where you plan to get the wherewithal in time, money, and co-operation to achieve them. You cannot expect others to do it for you.

Caucus Policies Win Support

Fall Election Talk Dominates Ontario Liberal Convention

OTTAW (CP) — Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon urged party faithful to a united drive for election success, suffered a bitter attack over his separate school policy, and finally won a unanimous vote of confidence in the opening day of the annual Ontario Liberal convention Friday.

Talk of a fall election dominated convention discussions, and Mr. Nixon issued a call to the party membership for "positive support" to wage a winning campaign.

He said efforts to develop policy at the constituency level were "frankly, a disappointment."

But he asked—and won—support for policies developed by the 27-member legislature caucus on local government autonomy, U.S. ownership in Canada, the separate school question, and medical care insurance.

On the issue of local government, Mr. Nixon has proposed greater autonomy for Ontario municipalities, and tax reforms.

Featured in his proposals for decreasing U.S. ownership is a proposal that Ontario and the federal government invest in public holding companies which would in turn invest in Canadian firms.

Mr. Nixon called the present medical care plan in Ontario an "administrative jungle." He said direct premiums should be abolished in favor of government financing.

The party leader suffered some bitter attacks from delegates on his position on separate schools.

The legislature caucus issued a statement last fall calling for immediate extension of full high school grants to separate schools to the end of grade 10 and accepting the principle of full support to the end of high school under a timetable set by the legislature.

Sharon McCormack of Wellington South said she did not think it right for the caucus to decide policy without consulting the party membership.

Mr. Nixon defended the policy throughout the discussions.

"The caucus, after extensive research, put forward a program that effectively meets the needs of the times.

"The party had to speak with a strong and unequivocal voice," he said.

The school issue had earlier raised tempers at a workshop session where 800 delegates crowded a room to debate the question.

The caucus decision was defended by Tim Reid, MPP for Scarborough East, and Lloyd Dennis, one of the authors of the Hall-Dennis report on education in Ontario.

"Only the people in a minority have the right to decide that a minority guarantee should be abolished," Mr. Reid said.

He said the minority right must prevail over the ideal of a single public system.

Mr. Dennis said the two systems must be supported equally so that when they unite "there may grow something bigger than both."

Former party leader John Wintermeyer, a Catholic, urged the workshop to consider the policy as "a solution to the religious problem that continues to beset us."

Later, in the plenary session, Mr. Wintermeyer, moved support and allegiance to Mr. Nixon. The motion was unanimously approved.

Student: Young 'Fed Up' With Political Parties

OTTAWA (CP) — The first note of bitterness crept into the annual meeting of the Liberal Party in Ontario Friday as attention switched from tax reform to social action, and the personalities from middle age to youth.

A young Carleton University student noted that one-third of the 800 delegates who crowded a ballroom to debate tax changes "found excuses to leave" when discussion turned to problems of lower-income groups.

Tom Bernes, an officer in the Canadian Student Liberals, said young people do not believe political parties represent the bulk of the people or care enough about the problems of average-income groups.

"Young people are fed up because political parties are not fulfilling their function and are not meeting the needs of the people."

John McEachran of Sarnia, the party's executive vice-president, said the Liberal party will stagnate if it does not "come up with a better way of financing from sources of clean money."

U.S. Ownership Debated

OTTAWA (CP) — U.S. ownership of Canadian industry—and what to do about it—was a feature attraction in a seminar session at the convention of the Liberal Party of Ontario Friday.

Donald Deacon, former investment dealer and now Liberal MPP for the Toronto riding of York-Centre, Abraham Rotstein, University of Toronto economics professor, and Bud Orange, parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister J. J. Greene joined in the wide-ranging discussion of the impact of U.S. ownership on the Canadian society and economy.

Mr. Deacon said that while U.S. investment had been of great value to Canada in the past, there was not sufficient capital in Canada to acquire domestic ownership of Canadian industry.

Over the next eight years, he said, Canadians will hold $10,000,000,000 in surplus funds available for investment.

But he said Canadians were traditionally reluctant to invest in Canadian stocks out of suspicion of "hanky-panky."

White Paper 'Dismal'

KINGSTON (CP) — Tax reforms contained in the federal government's white paper paint a "dismal picture" for the future of the Canadian economy, a former accounting partner of Finance Minister E. J. Benson told a tax symposium Friday.

W. G. Leonard, a professor at the Queen's University school of business, said the paper fails to relate "to significant issues in tax reform."

It fails to differentiate between the taxation of business enterprises and individuals, he charged.

He said the new proposals are as complex and full of faults as the present taxation system but that the government is intent on "sweeping out the old system. . . ."

"Reform should come as direct, hard-hitting rectifications of key defects in existing systems, while leaving the framework intact to the extent that it remains sound and viable."

The proposals are "based on unrealistic theorizing rather than practical realities."

And he warned that "they are likely to create more problems than they solve."

Support for the paper was expressed by Gordon Bale, a professor in the university's law school.

Randall Optimistic

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario trade and development minister, Friday expressed optimism that the province will be able to come up with a plan to qualify for aid under a federal program to promote innovations in housing.

"Our housing people are taking another close look at our program, and I'm hopeful we'll be able to come up with some new ideas," he said in an interview.

Airline Curbs Alarm Israel

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Premier Golda Meir conferred today for one hour with envoys of countries with direct air links here as Israel launched a counter-offensive against the threat of Arab sabotage to civil aircraft.

The meeting with the ambassadors was the first of a series of diplomatic moves Israel is making in the aftermath of the crash Saturday of a Tel Aviv-bound Swissair jet. An Arab guerrilla group claimed—and then denied—responsibility for the crash.

For Another Story On Plane Sabotage See Page 8

After a cabinet meeting Sunday to discuss the crash, in which 47 persons died, Mrs. Meir called for "most severe steps to halt Arab terrorism from raging across the world."

Usually well-informed sources said Mrs. Meir appealed today to airlines not to curtail freight and other services to Israel—a step which has already been taken by some West European airlines.

Pompidou Fears Hostile Crowds

PARIS (Reuters) — President Georges Pompidou flies to Washington today for a nine-day official visit clouded by the threat of angry Jewish demonstrations against France's pro-Arab policies in the Middle East.

French officials confidently expect complete cordiality from the Nixon administration, which has gone out of its way to try to ensure the success of the visit.

But officials from Pompidou on down were reliably reported to be nervous over the possibility that pro-Israel demonstrations could embarrass him. Hostile receptions are most feared in New York and Chicago.

Heavy security precautions, the threat of unfriendly pickets, and prospects for a sizeable congressional boycott when Pompidou addresses a joint session in Washington Wednesday made for the gloomy mood among the president's aides.

Winston Churchill Classroom Gutted

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Sir Winston Churchill public school remained closed today as a team of police and fire investigators hunted its damaged interior for clues to crack a Sunday afternoon arson attempt.

The bid to burn the 14-classroom MacDonald Avenue school left a shambles that could run a repair bill of $60,000.

In a case police described as "downright vandalism" one classroom was gutted, two attempts made to start other fires and desks and school supplies strewn around two classrooms.

Meantime, cleanup crews were working to make the school operational by tomorrow. Hopefully, say school board officials, accommodation will be found within the damaged building for all its 350 students.

If not, room temporarily will be found at the nearest school for students left without a classroom.

Core site of the investigation—being headed by Ontario Fire Marshal's inspector Paul McKerracher — is a grade five classroom gutted by the blaze.

Smoke billowing from this area of the building triggered the alarm from a nearby resident that sent firefighters dashing to the scene about 2.10 p.m.

By that time the fire had spread to ceiling partitions in an outside corridor.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said the blaze was quickly brought under control.

But the blaze — and its extinction — also caused heavy smoke and water damage in the immediate corridor area.

Checking the building revealed first signs that the blaze was deliberate.

In lower grade classrooms, firemen found desks had been overturned, school and student supplies littered the floor. In one of the vandalized rooms charred paper was found.

More burnt paper was discovered in a third room.

Police and fire officials believe these were abortive arson attempts preliminary to the fire in the grade five classroom.

Chief Culhane says the damaging blaze was set close to cupboards holding school supplies.

It likely took some time to build in intensity, thus making it difficult to assess when it was started, said the chief.

The building was visited early Sunday morning by school janitor Clayton Wilson, said principal Burie Summers.

At that time, — about 7 a.m. — Mr. Wilson noticed nothing amiss.

Among other clues being sought today was the method used to gain entry to the school.

Chief Culhane said a fireman on the first truck to arrive at the scene noticed three boys near the school.

However, they were heading east on Macdonald and it was impossible to say whether they were coming from the school or just walking past.

A preliminary examination of the scene showed a pattern indicating juveniles were involved in the incident, city detective Lyle Davis said later.

PC Chief Wants Rebates To Poor on Income Tax

MONTREAL (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has called all Canadians to unite in a fight to the finish against the federal government's white paper tax reforms and has proposed that low income groups be given tax rebates for economic assistance.

Mr. Stanfield told the annual congress of the Quebec wing of the Progressive Conservative party during the weekend that the federal government should provide $85,000,000 in tax rebates to help Canadians whom the Canada Economic Council considers poor.

He called on the Liberal government to show proof of good intent in its budget scheduled to be tabled next month "by providing income tax-rebates for all families considered economically underprivileged."

Mr. Stanfield proposed a three-point plan for economic assistance:

—A reimbursement of 100 per cent of taxes paid by persons living in poverty, that is, families of two earning less than $3,000 a year or families of four earning less than $4,200;

—A reimbursement of 50 per cent of taxes paid by persons earning up to $200 more than those in the poverty category;

—A reimbursement of 25 per cent of taxes paid by persons earning $200 to $300 more than those living in poverty.

"This proposal would provide assistance . . . to about 1,500,000 taxpayers," Mr. Stanfield said.

He said changes proposed in the white paper tabled last fall by Finance Minister E. J. Benson would "impose a very heavy load on Canadian taxpayers and result in a serious blow to our economy."

He suggested that the Conservatives can provide the "catalyst" for nation-wide opposition to the proposed tax measures.

Mr. Stanfield said Conservative criticism of the white paper falls into three main areas:

—It was not necessary to impose a heavier tax burden on middle-class Canadians;

—It posed serious problems to small businesses and these had to be eliminated;

—The capital-gains tax was unfair in its level of application to the sale of homes and of profits not yet earned.

"The provisions of the white paper will discourage strong efforts and savings by Canadians . . . since the proposals will slow down economic expansion, diminish investment and, consequently undermine economic stability," he said.

"Their application would also seriously weaken the capacity of provincial governments to perform their responsibilities."

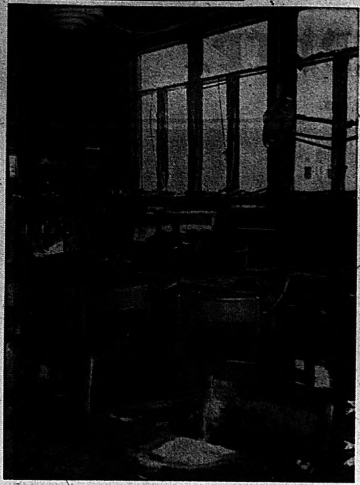
Costly Shambles in City School Blamed on Vandalism

Repair bill in Sir Winston Churchill public school fire yesterday could run up to $60,000 say school officials. In arson attempt grade five classroom (left) was gutted by fire. Desks and school supplies (right) were littered around two other rooms, while charred papers revealed two other attempts to start a fire, say police. School was closed today while investigators sought clues.



Charred Aftermath

Sir Winston Churchill public school classroom scene after Sunday afternoon fire is core area for investigators probing arson case. Blaze was one of three attempts by vandals to set school alight police believe.

School Damage $60,000

The attempt resembled "just downright vandalism."

Mr. Summers described the incident as "most shocking."

Particularly upsetting, said the principal, was the fact it was "malicious."

L. A. Kells, Hastings County superintendent of school academic services, called the damage "almost a replica" of the Oct. 2 fire at Prince Charles public school in the city's West Hill area.

Cost of repairing the damage in that incident finally totalled about $60,000.

(A juvenile was later charged with the Prince Charles incident and sent to training school).

Mr. Kells said "a sickening part" of such incidents was the vulnerability of school premises to illegal entry.

School buildings, said the official "were not strongboxes".

County education director Eric Runacres expected the school to resume normal operations tomorrow.

He was hopeful school resources would accommodate the burnt-out grade five class.

"It looks as if we can accommodate them if we get it cleaned up in time," said Mr. Runacres. "If not, we may have to make arrangements at a nearby school."

Mrs. Wendy Galbraith of Ameliasburgh was successful in her bid for the position of women's director of the Ontario Liberal Party. She was elected at the Ontario Liberal Party's annual convention held in Ottawa over the weekend.

Both Wendy Galbraith and Gerald Weaver are members of the Prince Edward Hastings Liberal Association.

County School Libraries Far Cry from Standard

Hastings county schools are $2,164,974 below the accepted standards for library - learning resource centres.

That's the figure trustees were told last week would be needed to upgrade their elementary and secondary school libraries to the point where, 10 years from now, they would be at the same level as Frontenac and Peterborough counties are at the moment.

Robert Wylie, co-ordinator of instruction media, hired by the board last year to survey the situation in the county and begin a program to upgrade the county's audio-visual and learning materials inventory, presented the results of his survey of the existing facilities and the needs in three thick reports.

But libraries are not the only facilities in woeful condition, his report indicates.

To run a barely adequate television program to take advantage of educational programs broadcast by the department of education, would cost $63,445 this year. This sum would adequately wire schools for TV reception, and provide equipment to record and store programs for teachers' use in the classroom at convenient times.

To bring instructional media equipment inventories in the schools up to the basic standard established by the Educational Media Association of Canada will cost $317,807. Instructional media equipment is everything from film projectors, record players and tape recorders to projection screens and light controlling curtains.

The secondary schools are in twice as good shape in this regard as the elementary schools — the cost of providing essential equipment in the eight secondary schools is $111,082, but the elementary schools require $206,725.

Finally, a county instructional media centre is required to instruct teachers in use of equipment, prepare classroom aids and provide equipment and material for schools under 300 enrolment, where it is not economically feasible to instal proper library -learning resource centres. To begin a county centre, such as the one now operating in Smith Falls, would require $100,904 this year.

The audio-visual and learning materials program proposed by Mr. Wylie was designed to meet one of the board's stated goals — to develop individuals with inquiring minds, receptive and adaptable to change through individual instructon and learning.

With open-area classrooms and continuous progress programs coming into increasing use in the county, the learning materials necessary for this type of education is becoming more important.

The library-learning resource centre is essential to the open plan school, Mr. Wylie told the board.

"In both these plans, the emphasis is on learning rather than on teaching and there is a vital distinction between the two," he said. "The teacher becomes most involved in the whole process."

"Learning is largely an emotional experience; it involves all five senses," he said. "A study of youth sub-culture could prove this, whether we like it or not. They like to be turned on, involved."

In explaining why electronic aids have replaced the traditional blackboard and chalk combination, Mr. Wylie said learning recently has been changed for the first time in 400 or 500 years.

"Look at the traditional classroom: the teacher's desk dominates the room like the title dominates a page of print; windows are always arranged on the left hand side, the floor is hardwood or tile but the ceiling is acoustic tile.

But where is the noise generated? On the floor. We have a drumhead for a floor and a blotter on the ceiling, with the teacher and students caught in the noise between, trying to communicate.

With open plan, carpeted classroom, pupils can now break into small groups to pursue studies on their own to supplement or re-inforce the teachers' institution.

But only if pupils have available books, pictures, models, tape - recorded lessons, tape - recorded lessons, film strips and films and recorded TV programs.

Educational opportunities for Hastings county children fall far short of the equality envisioned by the minister of education when he set up county boards, the media survey shows.

Of the elementary school in Hastings eligible to have libraries 23 have no library facilities at all.

Books are in short supply. For both elementary and secondary schools, the recommended number of books per pupil is 20 — Hastings county has four per pupil.

In the non-print resources, the supply is even smaller. The basic number of pictures recommended for elementary schools of 600 pupils is 1,000; Hastings has eight schools with an average of 48 pictures each.

Each school should have 500 film strips, 41 schools have 84 film strips each.

Each school should have 1,000 slides, Hastings has none.

Each school should have 200 disc recordings or one per pupil, whichever is greater. Hastings has 34 schools with an average of 18 disc recordings in each.

Four hundred tape recordings are recommended for each school; Hastings has none.

Two hundred single concept films are recommended; Hastings has one school with two films.

The more than $2 million required to bring the elementary and secondary library — resource centres up to standard, if budgeted over a five year period, would cost $432,994 a year. If budgeted over a 10-year period the cost would be $216,497 a year.

But government grants will cover part of the cost of all the instructional media program — as much as 50 per cent if government indications are fulfilled.

House Fire Suggested As Arson

An investigator from the Ontario Fire marshal's department today is looking into the causes of the two weekend fires in the city — both of which are believed to have been the work of arsonists.

Sunday afternoon an estimated $60,000 in damage was caused at the Sir Winston Churchill Public School, while early this morning firemen were called to 84 Great St. James Street where fire gutted a vacant house.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said the vacant house had been boarded up and the hydro cut off.

The fire started immediately in front of the front door and ate its way into the upper storey and through the roof before it was extinguished. No estimate was given of the damage.

The Great St. James Street house, said owned by a Hamilton family, has been the object of complaints by area residents during the past year. The house had been condemned by the health department.

Fire Chief Culhane said Paul McKerracher, area fire marshal's inspector, and inspectors from the city fire department would investigate the cause of the blaze.

College Choir's Visit Aids Quinte Student

The halls will be alive with the sound of music as the University of Western Ontario Choir visits Quinte Secondary School on Thursday at 8 p.m.

The choir, a 90-voice ensemble, will be at Quinte to assist the school in raising money for the third annual tour of the Quinte history travel program — an educational trip to New York.

Directed by Prof. Gordon K. Greene, the choir performs Negro spirituals, United States folksongs, German folksongs, lovesongs and humerous numbers.

Nursery songs are also included in the two hour show Thursday night.

The choir specializes in helping organizations such as the Quinte history travel program.

Admission to the event Thursday night is $1 per person.

City's Interim Tax Bill Reflects Climbing Costs

It's city tax time again with local property owners already having received their 1970 interim tax bills.

Property owners are immediately noticing a sizeable hike in the amount of the interim tax bill as compared with last year.

This of course, reflects last year's over-all tax hike of 6.33 mills which boosted the 1969 rate to 48.03 mills.

The interim tax bill each year is set at 50 per cent of the previous year's total tax levy thus resulting in the 24 mill interim bill.

The interim tax bill with its two instalments provides the city with working capital until the payment of the regular tax levy.

Last year the 1969 city tax rate was not struck until May 15 but City Manager J. R. Reynolds hopes for an earlier date this year.

However no department estimates have yet been received and salary negotiations are still continuing with unions representing city hall and public works department employees.

Salary demands from the city fire fighters and the police departments are likewise still unsettled and the city manager expects that at least some of the union requests will go to arbitration.

School budgets are also still unsettled with the public and separate school boards involved in salary negotiations.

City officials are resigned to another tax boost this year but are hoping for a smaller boost than last year's 6.3 mills.

IN MEMORIAM

AKEY — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Percy Wellington Akey, who passed away, Feb. 23, 1962.

It's not the tears that are shed at the time,
That tell that a heart is broken,
It's the lonely tears in the after years,
When the loved one's name is spoken.
To the world he may be forgotten,
To others just part of the past,
But to those who loved him and lost him,
His memory will always last.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Lena and family.

HENDERSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and uncle, Floyd Henderson, who passed away, February 23rd, 1968.

School Exchange

Washington Visitors Start Week in Madoc

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

MADOC — They tumbled off their bus at Madoc Public School at 9:30 a.m. Sunday and straight into the hearts of this centre Hastings community — 21 boys and 13 girls from the predominately Negro section of Washington D.C.

Here on an exchange visit initiated by Madoc principal John Murphy, they will attend Grade 6 classes with Madoc Grade 6 pupils for coming week and live with village and district families.

Sunday morning they were a dazed and exhausted group after a 12-hour overnight bus ride from W. B. Patterson School. But they brightened when they saw the modern Madoc School and marvelled at its gym, open area classroom and showers — which some immediately tried.

Still, the school was a surprise for Mrs. Jay Cohen, wife of the teacher of the visiting Washington 6th graders. She confessed she expected to see a two-room school with a pot bellied stove.

As Madoc pupils and their parents milled about seeking the Washington pupil assigned to their homes, Mr. Murphy and Mr. Cohen struggled to sort things out, while the Washington contingent set to work to record the meeting with cameras and tape recorders.

Then, before the allocation task was completed they trooped out to the play ground to sample their first snowmobile rides on vehicles parents had brought to the school to carry their visitors home.

The more than 1,400 enrolment at W. B. Patterson school is about the same as the entire population of Madoc village. His grade 6 class, Mr. Cohen said, is typical of the racial composition of the district in which it is situated, with a ratio of about 75 per cent Negroes and 25 whites.

"When the visit was first proposed last November, there was talk of sending only star pupils to make a good impression," he said.

Instead, Mr. Cohen's class was chosen to initiate what teachers here hoped yesterday would become a regular event.

Mr. Cohen, a prartising lawyer who became a teacher two years ago "because I like kids" was accompanied by his wife, also a teacher, and two mothers.

They brought with them a wall hanging of Washington scenes made by the pupils of appliqued felt and wool embroidery on burlap.

It was officially presented to Madoc Public School this morning.

Cost of the trip, $50 a person, was paid by the individual Washington pupils. While here, their expenses will be assumed by host families.

So many people in the district offered accommodation in their homes for children, Mr. Murphy instituted a "share a visitor" plan — placing some of the Washington children in two homes during their visit — three days with each host family.

For most of the visiting children, their trip to Madoc will be their first taste of rural life. Most asked to be placed in homes "with lots of animals". But when they fanned out to their billet about noon, most found real animals intimidating and snowmobiles more to their liking.

Promised more snowmobiling, skating, sleigh-rides and ice-fishing on Moira Lake on the outskirts of this village during their stay, Adrian Washington exclaimed: "Gee, you people have fun on your lakes all year 'round."

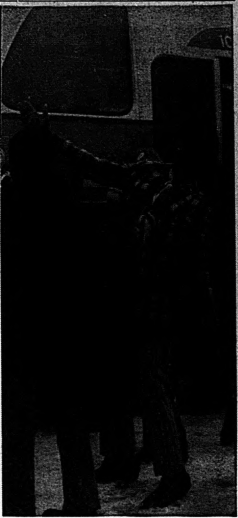
As their pupils sit in on regular classes in the Madoc school during the week, Mr. and Mrs. Cohen will join Madoc teachers in team teaching on an international scale.

Wednesday, the visitors and Madoc Grade 6 pupils will travel by bus to Ottawa to give the Washington youngsters an opportunity to compare the two capital cities.

Village organizations have arranged a series of outdoor activities to entertain the visitors, beginning with an official civic welcome and party at the school Monday night. A grand farewell is scheduled for Saturday morning, as the Washington group leaves for home.

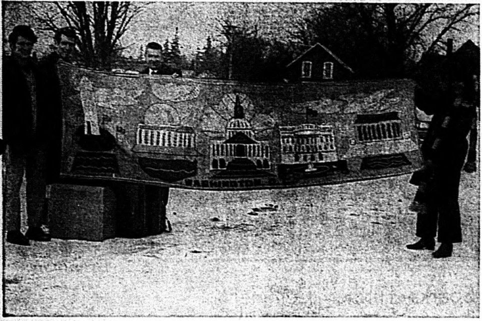
But in the meantime, the adventure in international good-will has got off to a good start.

Before the Madoc and Washington teachers had left for home, two lads strolled by a window, arms around each others shoulders, sticks in hand — a Madoc pupil and his visitor, bound for a game of street hockey.



Madoc at Last

Keith Thompson from W. B. Patterson School in Washington, D.C., had a big stretch as he and 33 other classmates stepped off the bus Sunday morning after a 12-hour ride.



Symbol of International Friendship

A mural depicting Washington scenes, made of appliqued felt and wool embroidery on burlap by grade six U.S. youngsters now attending school in Madoc for a week, was presented to Madoc Public School today. Getting a preview look Sunday morning was Washington teacher and leader of the visiting group, Jay Cohen, Madoc principal John Murphy, area 2 superintendent Frank Tate and Mrs. Cohen.

Phosphate Ban

Another indication that the government realizes the full seriousness of the pollution problem is seen in the federal ban on phosphate announced by Energy and Resources Minister J. J. Greene.

There has been criticism of the fact that the ban is only gradual and will not take full effect until 1962 — undoubtedly to allow manufacturers to clear stockpiles — but generally the move is seen as a step in the right direction.

That politics are involved in the delay is reflected in the comment of Hastings MPP Dr. Richard Potter. Asking why there could not be an outright ban as in the case of DDT, Dr. Potter noted that people talk about "big interests," and it looked as if manufacturers' stockpiles had been taken into account even though it would cause further pollution.

However, partial limitation of phosphate content will be in force by August, with a further reduction contemplated before the final ban in 1972.

Cars also are coming under scrutiny, for obvious reasons. Air pollution by exhaust — particularly in big cities — is reaching alarming proportions, and the day is coming when car motors and the fuel that powers them will need to be refined to a point that exhaust fumes are greatly lessened.

The concern being shown about pollution and the steps being taken to counter it are encouraging. Time is running out, however. As Dr. Potter points out, the next 20 years are going to be vital in the realm of environment. Moreover, it is everyone's business, and not just that of government.

Icy Roads

Township roads can be a serious traffic hazard these winter days and there is no better example than the Rednersville Road.

The scenic drive along the Bay of Quinte is the subject of a letter on this page today. Certainly at the moment there is no time to admire the view, such are the difficulties of negotiating this route.

Sanding operations by the township are clearly inadequate and this should be remedied before there is a really serious accident. As it is, skids are a constant threat. Again, the road is narrow, undulating and twisting; even when surface conditions are reasonable the driver must take particular care. To make matters worse, speeding is a problem.

The route is a provincial police responsibility but patrol cars would be advised to give the Rossmore intersections a miss for a while and watch the route itself, between this community and Carrying Place.

First and foremost, though, let the township do a thorough job of sanding and salting this road. And while they are at it they could devote more attention to the Old Picton Road as well, not to mention other rural routes. This is what people pay taxes for. Other townships, please note.

A Classical Evening

There was Glenn Gould, chatting about the music of Bach with as masterly a grasp of language as he rules the keyboard — and later playing the works of the composer in the manner that saw him rise from teenage prodigy to one of the great classical pianists of our time.

It was a refreshing change of pace in the CBC's television programming. No politics, no asinine comedy and even if the conversation was somewhat highbrow and the music not everybody's taste it was a restful 60 minutes. Given due attention, it could have produced many a new devotee of the classics.

In any event it was Gould as his fans know him — quiet spoken and erudite (though, has anyone ever heard him speak on TV or radio before?), and intense as well as eccentric of manner while at the keyboard. The Canadian pianist today performs his art only in recording studios; for one thing it is likely more lucrative than the concert hall grind and the latter, he claims, does not do justice to the music.

As an acknowledged master of the works of Bach, it was easy from this program to appreciate Gould as the perfectionist he is.

Nixon Offers Little That's New in Vietnam Policy

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite the typically well-ordered and neatly categorized manner in which President Nixon has divided up and assessed the world's problems, he seems to have left the confusing problem of Vietnam as confused as ever.

His book-length report to Congress Wednesday on the state of the world strikes many who waded through it as being, in the words of the New York Times, "banal and wordy."

Others, notably the Washington Post, are even less kind.

"When you aren't shaking off pure treacle . . . you are encountering such baffling contradictions that all sense of direction vanishes," says a Post editorial.

Never in this 43,000-word document is the tendency to contradictions more apparent than on the subject of Vietnam.

Nixon expresses optimism over the policy of Vietnamization—the gradual transfer of combat responsibilities from U.S. to South Vietnamese forces which has brought the decision to reduce U.S. troops in Vietnam by 115,500 by April 15. But almost in the same breath he warns that U.S. claims of progress in Vietnam "have often proved to be optimistic" in the past.

On top of that, he says that Vietnamization "is not a substitute for negotiations, but a spur to negotiations."

In this context, Moscow is seen as the prime culprit.

Nixon sees U.S.-Soviet relations over-all are still "far from satisfactory," despite improvements, and criticizes the Soviet role as Hanoi's chief supplier of war materials.

The irony of the American contention that massive U.S. involvement in the war is right while Sovjet support of the North is evil has worn so thin in years of repetition by a succession of presidents that it no longer causes as much as a raised eyebrow.

Although this official simplistic view of the war as one between good guys and bad guys has been under fire for years by anti-Vietnam war protesters at home and abroad, it remains as an uncomfortable basis touchstone of war policy.

Nixon charges Moscow with a "heavy responsibility" for continuation of the war but wisely avoids ultimatums to persuade the Kremlin to alter its course.

In a sense, what Nixon seems to be saying is that the U.S. will pursue its Vietnamization policy as a means of placating American public opinion while continuing the pressure on Hanoi to negotiate.

Coupled with this is the demand that Moscow help by withholding assistance to Hanoi.

From almost any point of view this appears unrealistic. Even Nixon seems to think so, since he does not make it a condition for U.S. co-operation in any other field such as cultural exchange, the strategic arms talks or the like.

Even the Washington Evening Star, considerably more kindly disposed toward Nixon than the rival Post, found the message in total disappointment in that it "relates nothing that is new and little that is specific." As for Vietnam, The Star says:

"He did not say what course of action Washington would follow were Vietnamization to prove a bamboo tiger."

Indeed he did not and thus the answers the world sought most urgently were not to be found in this 119-page volume."

After over 50 years of service, work will shortly be started for the removal of one of the old landmarks of the city, the lower bridge. An effort will be made to have the new structure completed for the Old Home Week early in August. Architects are working on the plans now, and probably will be built of steel and concrete. The engineer for the bridge has delivered a report to the city council dealing with the condition of the present structure which advises that it is imperative that a new bridge be erected at once as the present one in unsafe for travel.

A government engineer from Ottawa has arrived here in response to a request from the city council and was in consultation with engineers representing the CPR and the CNR and also city officials, with reference to the condition of the river. These engineers will endeavour to suggest some scheme whereby floods may be averted. Examination revealed the fact that there is scarcely any water in the river between the railway bridge, S. Front St. and the upper bridge. This is owing to the fact that the river is frozen nearly solid from bank to bank.

Belleville YMCA Sparks Further Comment

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

"Area Resident" is to be commended on his letter concerning the Belleville YMCA.

More has been said about the so-called "community benefits" allegedly emanating from this organization, than all the rest put together.

To me, Mr. Messacar's figure of 80,000 participants in 'Y' programs for the past year is a preposterous piece of figure juggling which would not bear up under close scrutiny. The 'Y' does not have the personnel, either paid or voluntary to handle such numbers in the first place. In the second, their so-called facilities, outside of the swimming pool just could not, unless operated on a round-the-clock basis, accommodate this participation.

The 'Y' has no facilities that can be honestly referred to as such, when considering the suggested participation. The swimming pool is an A1 facility. The steam room as such does not compare in any way with what a steam room should be. It has no insulation, no double doors, and its heater is too high.

The rest of the building consists of a number of rooms that can, at best be used by small groups, doing things that do not require much space, or the output of much energy. The weightlifting equipment is archaic, and more of a menace than a use. The exercise machines should have been replaced years ago. The exercise room (this is the term the 'Y' uses to describe it), is not much bigger than a family Rec Room. I imagine the "joggers" who use it must suffer from permanent "lean in" from running around such a confined and impractical space.

For this, they expect to take 30 per cent of the United Community Appeal. I agree with the distinguished Msgr. Sullivan when he said recently on CJBQ's open line program: "It seems a little disproportionate." The understatement of the year, I would say.

Mr. Messacar should have attended a recent meeting of the Belleville Minor Sports Association. As far as I can recall there was not one of its associate members that was not utterly against the monies being directed to the 'Y' from the United Appeal.

As your correspondent asks, where are all the 'Y' soccer, softball, hockey, lacrosse teams etc.? Where is the long promised gym, running track, tennis courts etc? It seems to me that John Q Public has been kept long enough on a string with promises as to the future by the 'Y'. As he so rightly observes, if the service suggested is being rendered the community, the 'Y' doors would be jammed by members. It appears, however, that most of "80,000" participants are non-mebers. If this is the case it is time city of Belleville gave serious consideration to offering to buy the 'Y' out and perhaps make a start with its long awaited community centre on their site, using their pool and "facilities" as its administrative nucleus.

If the 'Y' will not, or can not stand on its own feet, it should consider getting out of the leadership business altogether and transfer its facilities to a group that can put them to full usage. Certainly its membership can not, and, if, as Mr. Messacar hinted in his letter, membership fees are going to go up, it is unlikely that too many will remain on the books.

Rednersville Road Dangers

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am one of the many irate residents of Rednersville Road. This letter concerns the road conditions and the safety of lives.

At the time of writing this letter our road once again, thanks to the weather man and a little sand, is in reasonably good condition but as the old saying goes "A few drops of water do not an ocean make" . . .well . . ."a few grains of sand do not a good road make".

Not only do we travel this road to work and home every day, but unfortunately, many school buses must travel the same route.

Just recently we had five days in a row, of indescribably poor road conditions. Not only did we have a few minor accidents have a few minor ucidents but also a major one that put someone in the Intensive Care Unit in Belleville General Hospital. This accident, it was reported, was due to poor road conditions.

It seems a shame that such a picturesque drive should be marred for the sake of a little sand and salt.

New Yorker Seeks Aid In Tracing Ancestors

The following letter has been received by Mayor J. Russell Scott.

• • •

I am hoping your office, or that of the Town Clerk, may be able to help me. I am trying to trace information etc. about my great grandmother, grandmother, and their family. I have almost no information.

Frances Evelyn Beckett is said to have been born in Belleville June 6, 1855. Her mother was Helen Merril. After Mr. Beckett's death (I do not have the rest of his name) his widow married Kingsley Burnell. But I do not know if this was after they had left Canada for Aurora, Ill.

Any help your records could give me on the Merril (1?) or Beckett families would be much appreciated.

Unemployment on the Rise

Quebec Le Soleil—Month after month unemployment is on the rise. Latest federal statistics indicate that the number without work increased by more than 100,000 by mid-January. Compared with December, when unemployment numbered 383,000 across Canada, the latest estimate rose to 485,000 or 6.1 per cent of the labor force. That is a climb to near the 1968 figure when the jobless force exceeded seven per cent at one point.

By regions, the Atlantic provinces are highest again at 10 per cent. However, that still is a slight drop from the previous year when the percentage was 10.1, though last December it stood at 7.2. Quebec had eight per cent in January compared with 6.7 in December and 8.4 in January, 1969. Out west . . . unemployment is up over what it was a year ago. We can thus gather that federal efforts to put the brakes on unemployment in the East are bearing fruit, but the West and central Canada may get some anti-inflationary blows.

If, in effect, Ottawa attacks Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta for not fighting inflation, these provinces already harder hit than others can react with a certain annoyance. Ontario has seen its unemployment rise to 4.2 per cent from 3.1, the Prairies to 4.6 from 3.3 and B.C. to 7.3 from 5.5. . . .

It is difficult to say if the national tendency toward higher unemployment is the result of economic policies of the central government. . . .

The economy of each province has its own peculiarities. Quebec, despite the nationalistic exaltations of the 1960s, the so-called revolutionary years, has yet to see the paradise promised as a result of policies applied in those years.

Activity in the Pits

Spectators, snowmobiles and parked vehicles abound in the large pit-area on the edge of the Bay of Quinte during Sunday's Trenton Kiwanis Club Winterama at Bain Memorial Park. Attendance exceeded 1,500 and Kiwanis officials plan to make the Winterama an annual event.

Sponsors Plan Yearly Winterama

TRENTON — Public enthusiasm has put the Trenton Kiwanis Club's Winterama on sound footing.

So much so that Sunday evening Winterama chairman Austin Scott said: "This definitely will be an annual affair from the interest shown today."

More than 1,500 people turned out for Trenton's initial Winterama Sunday afternoon at Bain Memorial Park and brought with them approximately 200 snowmobiles. In all they contributed between $1,000 and $1,500 which will go towards Kiwanis Club projects in the Trenton area, Mr. Scott said.

"We're very satisfied and pleased with the co-operation and exceptional support we received from all quarters, particularly the mayors and reeves and the weatherman," he added.

"The people took everything in good spirit and were very understanding, but we hope to learn from our shortcomings today and plan for a bigger and better event next year," Austin Scott emphasized.

The weatherman did indeed co-operate with temperatures hovering around the 40 degree mark under a bright sun. The occasional cloud which blocked out the sun's rays and a rising wind late in the afternoon did little to dull the enthusiasm of the crowd.

Snowmobiles held the spotlight much of the afternoon. Batawa Snowmibile Club triumphed over seven other teams in the first annual Bay of Quinte Relay Championship which saw each member of the four - man teams drive out to Indian Island and back to the starting point along the shore of the Bay of Quinte.

Mike Mason of Trenton was clocked at 67 miles per hour in his Ski-doo to register the fastest time over a quarter mile plowed strip. Drivers were clocked by a radar machine operated by Trenton Police Department constable Gary Davis.

Mason also left his mark during the races, capturing the open title in the modified division. Bill Ireland of Belleville was a double winner in the modified class taking both C (0-340 c.c.) and D (340-4440 c.c.) class honors.

Belleville's Bob Weese swept the C (300-340 c.c.) and D (340-400 c.c.) stock championships and W. Herrington captured the B stock (0-300 c.c.) final and D. Miron won the junior stock event.

Not all the 75 snowmobile race entrants were men — Sandra Weese of Belleville bested Marlene Tillie of Trenton and L. Karachon in the Powder Puff derby.

Grade 5 and 6 students from North Trenton elementary school captured the unofficial town championship by defeating students from Queen Elizabeth School in the final of the six - team single elimination broomball tournament.

Joyce Wins Snow Race At Trenton

TRENTON — Because Alderman Gerald Joyce outduelled four other Quinte - area municipal council representatives in piloting his machine to victory in the featured event which kicked off the Trenton Kiwanis Club Winterama — Murray Township councillor Clifford Wannamaker — the oldest contestant in the race — made use of an advantage granted him to capture second place ahead of Trenton Mayor Duncan McDonald who placed third in only his second ride on a snowmobile.

Because there were only four balloons at each stopping point around the track) Mr. Wannamaker was not required to break a balloon at each stop during the initial lap of the two - lap race.

Sidney Township reeve Jack Bush came home fourth in the event followed by Frankford reeve William Rose.

Canadian Figure Skating Champion Makes Debut in Ice Capades

NEW YORK (AP) — Linda Carbonetto, 1969 Canadian figure skating champion, couldn't be happier about her career on ice.

But the pretty 20-year-old, who is making her professional debut in this year's Ice Capades, doesn't want any child she might have to set his or her sights on a skating career.

"Though the decision to skate competitively was all mine—my parents were the ones who kept asking me if I wanted to quit—I always wonder what it would have been like to have experienced a normal, typical childhood without the competitions, the heartaches and the frustration," Linda says with a wistful smile.

Even if Linda hadn't personally chosen an ice-skating career, it's doubtful her childhood and adolescence could ever be described as "typical."

Linda's father, Benedict Carbonetto, formerly was with Canada's external affairs department and frequent moves were part of his job. Currently he is based in Ottawa in the Canadian government travel bureau.

Linda, her brother Barry, now 17 and a competition skier, and her parents "lived everywhere from Rome to San Francisco" including London, Paris, West Germany and Detroit.

"It was very lonely to keep moving. It was particularly upsetting as a child to make friends only to leave them behind a year or two later," recalls the diminutive blonde.

"Nowadays, of course, there's no problem about making friends, even though with the Ice Capades I'm still leading a nomadic type of life. There's such a great group in the show itself and you make friends wherever you go."

She does complain that it's terribly difficult to have a special boy-friend. "How can you expect someone to follow you all over?" she asks. That's why she says she tries not to get involved romantically.

Leg braces, which she wore at the age of three, also distinguished Linda from her playmates. "I began to walk at too early an age—nine months—before my legs could support me adequately," she explained. "To ease the pain and to give my legs a chance to develop properly—I was walking on my ankles—the doctors put braces on my legs. I wore them a year and to further strengthen my legs I did exercises and took dancing lessons, which I didn't like at all."

By the age of eight she was able to walk without pain. But because her legs and ankles were abnormally weak, ice skating was prescribed as a corrective measure. Linda was enrolled in a group class in London, where her father was based at the time. Her classmates were polio victims who also were taking skating as therapy.

Back in Canada, Linda started taking private lessons and ultimately entered minor competitions. It wasn't until after she had graduated from high school in San Francisco, however, that she turned all her attention to capturing the Canadian figure-skating championship.

She achieved her goal in short order. Representing Canada last year in the Winter Olympics, she set an Olympic record for advancing 13 places in a single competition. Then she returned to Canada and won the national skating crown.

Ultimately Linda hopes either to go to college and take up sociology or go into business somewhere in the world of sports. She's particularly keen on improving the facilities and quality of skating and other amateur sports in Canada and the United States.

"As a member of the international figure-skating team which toured Europe and the Iron Curtain countries last year, I saw first-hand the tremendous advantages the Iron Curtain athletes have," says Linda. "There, if a child shows promise, he is given free instruction, free ice time and encouraged to continue.

"I'm fortunate because my parents were able to afford the several thousand dollars a year necessary to pay for my training, lessons, ice time, outfits. But consider the boy I skated with last year. From 5:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. we were up practising; then he had to go to work in a department store to earn money to help defray some of his expenses.

"So many kids who've almost made it have had to quit because they can't afford to continue. After sacrificing so much to get to a certain point, it certainly seems a shame, doesn't it?"

WEDDING

LEMKE — JAMES

A candlelight wedding ceremony was solemnized recently in Plevna United Church, when Cora Elizabeth James, daughter of Mrs. Cora James, Plevna and the late Mr. A. James was united in marriage to Norman Wayne Lemke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lemke, also of Plevna. Rev. M. McDowell of Kingston performed the double - ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her mother and brother, Floyd James of Plevna, the bride wore a full - length gown in empire style featuring a white velvet top and white chiffon over taffeta skirt trimmed with ruffled lace. A detachable train trimmed with daisies fell from her shoulders. Her headpiece consisted of a single layer of shoulder length white nylon veil attached to a tiny pillbox crown trimmed with lace matching that on her gown. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses surrounded by white baby carnations and lily-of-the-valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Kathy Rivers of Newcastle and the bridesmaids were Miss Nora James of Barrie and Miss Donna James of Plevna, both sisters of the bride. All were attired in floor - length empire styled gowns of peacock blue chiffon over taffeta with the white velvet bodices featuring long bell sleeves. They wore tiny pillbox crowns of matching blue with shoulder length veils. Each carried a nosegay of pale pink roses. Flower girl was niece of the bride, Miss Sandra Bozsik of Barrie who wore a floor - length gown of white velvet with peacock blue chiffon train. She wore a pillbox headdress of peacock blue with shoulder length veil and carried a basket of yellow baby roses and white carnations.

Darrell Lemke of Collingwood, brother of the bridegroom was groomsman, while other attendants were Messrs. Michael Edwards of Collingwood and Robbie Sheers of Tweed, with ushers Ronald Hanes of Ottawa and Ralph McInnes of Verona. Ring - bearer was Terrance Bozsik of Barrie.

The bride's mother wore a blue suit of textured orlon knit with beige accessories and a corsage of a single white orchid.

For the wedding trip to Barrie the bride chose a winter white, long sleeved dress of double knit jersey with gold and silver trimmings and matching accessories. She wore a corsage of baby yellow roses.

The couple will reside in Tweed.

Author Believes Life Tragic and Terrifying

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Laurence says she believes life is tragic and terrifying, but not without hope.

She is the author of three novels set in Canada—A Jest of God, The Fire Dwellers, and The Stone Angel—and of several books set in Africa. A movie, Rachel, Rachel, was based on A Jest of God.

Her central fictional characters are often lonely, alienated people, but Mrs. Laurence says she does not consider her books down-beat.

"I think life is tragic and terrifying, but I think there is a core that's hopeful, though there is a difference between optimism and hope.

"I don't think any of my books is filled with despair. I believe in an individual's ability to survive with dignity."

Mrs. Laurence is spending the school year by invitation as writer-in-residence at Massey College, University of Toronto.

She says it is time off from writing for her. She spends much of her time talking to students individually and in groups. Some are aspiring writers who ask her to read manuscripts, who ask for advice or who find encouragement in meeting a successful author.

Mrs. Laurence says she tries not to discourage anyone and feels the opportunity to talk to a writer may be the most valuable thing she can offer such students.

"There is really nothing I can do that will make or break a writer. The real writer will go on writing. But a surprising number don't know anyone else who is a writer. After you go on, you get to know others and become close friends.

"At least I know some of the pitfalls. If I give them my opinion, I point out that it is just my opinion. I'm not setting up as any kind of judge."

Mrs. Laurence, a native of Neepawa, Man., lived in Somaliland and in Ghana for several years. She has been living in England, and her children, Jocelyn, 17, and David, 14, are there now. She and her husband are separated.

Her Canadian books are set in small prairie towns or have central characters from such towns.

"People must have some sort of background, and that's the one I know. It's better to choose a background you know. I'm not interested in writing social commentary, though. What I am interested in is character."

Mrs. Laurence says she has one book "in the head" currently and two at the publisher's.

"I know what I want to do with my next novel, but I don't want to talk about it—I'm too superstitious."

A short story collection based on one group of people and called A Bird in the House is to be published this winter. A children's book called Jason's Quest is due out in the near future, perhaps next autumn.

"I swore I'd never write a kid's book, and I have. It's an animal fantasy. The hero is a mole, and I had great fun writing it.

"I was working on The Fire Dwellers. I couldn't concentrate, and knew I had to do something else.

"We were having trouble with moles, and one morning walking around the lawn, I suddenly visualized a whole mole city underground with a city council and council chambers. I thought the moles were taking over.

"It's illustrated. It's nice to have a book with pictures."

Mrs. Laurence is the third writer-in-residence at the university. The others were poet Earle Birney and novelist Jack Ludwig.

She makes no qualitative judgments on submissions by the young writers, most of whom are male and most of whom write poetry because they are too busy to write prose.

"I'd never dream of saying, 'Look, kid, you'll never be a writer,' because who knows, he might.

"But I am more tactful with the less promising. I keep my toughest criticism for the promising ones. I'll say 'Look, kid, you can do better than that.'"

Mrs. Laurence's theory is that "a real writer will survive."

She sees an average of about six students a week, reading their submissions first to provide a basis for conversation.

Most of the fiction writers discuss the technical aspects with her, such as how to make a character come alive, but she warns against the danger of substituting the talking for the writing.

"There's been many a good novel that got talked out," she says.

Home and School Association News

The Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association met Monday for a program on non - graded concept of education in elementary schools.

Mr. H. R. Frink, principal of the school introduced Mr. R. Horwood area superintendent to about 60 persons present.

Following a flimstrip on non - graded schooling, Mr. Horwood, Miss Phyllis Beatty, primary consultant and Mr. Frink formed a panel to field questions on the film and on the steps being taken at Queen Elizabeth School towards the gradual establishment of non - grading.

This film stressed the importance of educating the individual child according to his unique growth, needs, social and cultural background and maturity. In acknowledging the wide diversity of children the same age, the non - graded school concept hopes to eliminate boredom for the gifted child and humiliation for those children who cannot keep up in all subjects in a rigid graded curriculum. In the non-graded system, the individual child is encouraged to be independent and to develop leadership qualities through group work.

During the question period parents expressed some fear that children of a non-graded system might not be as well equipped to face examinations at higher levels of education, or be motivated to do their best. The panel expressed optimism about the effectiveness of the system.

Another concern of the parents was the practicability of the system. They were reassured that the standards and training of elementary school teachers were improving and that most teachers, while they admit the work is more demanding are finding their profession more challenging and more rewarding in the non-graded system. A suggestion was made that parents volunteer to act as teachers' aides in the classrooms.

Following this period parents and teachers continued the discussion over coffee and cookies.

Gamma Mu Chapter
Beta Sigma Phi

A regular meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lorne Schnell with vice-president Mrs. John Sherry presiding.

The evening began with a program on "Drama" presented by Mrs. R. Michaud. Mrs. Michaud introduced the speaker Mrs. Deirdra Warren who spoke about her experiences in various theatre groups, most recently the Belleville Theatre Guild. She answered the questions put to her and explained how one experiences creative expression through theatre. Mrs. Warren was thanked by Mrs. Schnell.

The business meeting included a discussion of a new project, communicating with children at The Ontario School for the Deaf. Mrs. S. Muirhead obtained students names for those girls participating.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and Mrs. A. Robb.

SETTLE DISPUTE

EAST LONDON, South Africa (AP) — Mtina Ngqine accused Bodi Thandanto of stealing a cooking pot. They settled the dispute at dawn with battleaxes. Thandanto won, still insisting he had not taken the pot. The judge gave him 18 months for manslaughter.

Those Who Criticize Most Should Look at Themselves

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Thank you for a wonderful column. I only wish it were longer as it is such a pleasure to read it and to hear about others from other parts of the world besides our own.

I think those people who criticize you do not understand at all what you are doing and should take a good, hard look at themselves. Probaby they are not so lily-white as they pretend. — Goldie

Dear Goldie: Glad you like what I do. But taking a look at oneself, critically, is easier said than done. I'd far rather have your praise than anyone's criticism, but who am I to assume I am perfect?

• • •

Dear Doris: What can you tell me about squelching a bully or managing an aggressive child? — Puzzled

Dear Puzzled: Squelching a bully may put a lid on the behavior, but it won't get at the cause. A bully is an angry person who is striking out against frustrations.

There's a good chance he needs more love and appreciation than he is getting. The arrival of a new baby or a family situation which takes his mother's attention away from him can turn a model child into a tyrant.

As for aggressiveness in general, no child would get anywhere if he didn't take the plunge and try something new like rolling over, standing up, walking, climbing, reaching out for food.

If he gets too aggressive he learns that certain behavior just won't go. He must not hit another child or snatch away a toy; so he is helped to channel his ambitions and grow up into the kind of person who can get what he wants without being obnoxious to others.

• • •

Dear Doris: When I go out with my husband he always finds other girls are better than me. He doesn't take them out or anything but tries to annoy me.

For example, we might sit in the car parking, and a girl walks by and he will say "Wow!" and just stare at her until she is out of sight, and it doesn't matter what girls, he doesn't even know them or anything.

If I say anything he feels so great and smiles to himself, which just burns me up. — It Still Hurts

Dear Still Hurts: He is getting a rise out of you and loves it.

Next time don't bat an eye and pretend you don't hear him. Teasing tactics can't thrive when they are ignored.

Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Leg of Lamb with Stuffing

By MARY MOORE

Taking the radio advertisement at its word — "Ask for the meat cut you want" — I went to the counter of a local supermarket on Wednesday and asked for a boned-out 6-lb. leg of frozen New Zealand lamb, and if I could call for it on Friday. "No sweat, lady, it will be ready."

Late Friday afternoon I returned and picked it up. I wanted the bones for soup and string for tying it for I planned on stuffing it. It cost me 69 cents per pound including bones. Since this served 10 people I am eager and anxious to report that it was a great success.

ROAST STUFFED LEG OF LAMB (Serves 10)

One 5½ to 6-lb. thawed and boned lamb leg

STUFFING:

2-3 cup raw long grain rice
½ tsp. salt
1½ cups boiling water
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. finely chopped onion (or 1 tbsp. bottled instant onion)
¼ tsp. savory
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
¼ tsp. salt (second amount)
¼ tsp. curry powder

In a heavy pot cook the rice with the ½ tsp. salt in the boiling water, covered, 30 min. until all water is absorbed. Remove from heat and stir in all remaining stuffing ingredients with a fork. Open up the boned-out lamb leg and spread stuffing where the bones were. Enclose stuffing by tying tightly around leg and from end to end with butchers' string. Place fat side up on large piece of foil on rack in roaster. Sprinkle with salt and paprika. Roast at 200 deg. Fahr. 5 hrs. (The foil catches any rice that may escape through crevices and the juices which you can make into gravy.)

Let this roast rest out of the oven for 10 min. to "set". Remove all strings. Do not worry — this roast slices perfectly if you have the wit to sharpen the carving knife for your particular carver. We served it with mint sauce made last October.

Need I figure out the cost per person for you budgeters?

Ann Landers

Husband Spanks Wife To Keep Her in Line

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I decided the next time you printed a letter against wife-spanking I would write and tell you off. Today is the day.

ANN LANDERS

My wife has always been stubborn and rock-headed. Her father told me when I married her that the only way to keep Laura in line was to turn her over my knee and spank her with a hairbrush. In fact, he gave me a hairbrush for a wedding present.

Laura and I have been married 12 years and I've used that brush dozens of times. It would be no exaggeration to say the hairbrush has kept our marriage together.

And now I'm going to turn this letter over to Laura so she can tell you how she feels about it. — SINCERELY YOURS, H.L.K.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You are wrong about wife-spanking. Henry spanks me when I need it. I'm glad he has the good sense to be boss. If more husbands spanked their wives, there would be fewer divorces.

After a spanking, Henry and I usually make love and we don't even remember what we quarreled about. I'll bet hundreds of couples besides Henry and me end their little tiffs this way. Now, what do you think, Ann Landers? — HENRY'S BAD GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: I think the solution is wonderful — for a couple of nuts like you and Henry. Obviously, the rocks in your head match the holes in his. Please keep my address handy. When the spankings turn into beatings, you might want to write again.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a young mother with a big problem. I became involved with a married man. He said he loved me and I believed him. Now I'm supporting a 7-month-old daughter.

I had a miserable pregnancy and hated the baby before she was born. The minute I saw her my whole world changed. I knew I could never give her up. Now I'm working two jobs to support us and believe me, it's not easy.

I've been "laid off" (fired) twice in the last six months. Everyone is great until they find out I have a child. Then they treat me like I have small-pox. I have never been married so I go by Miss Smith. I should tell you, Ann, I am only 16 years old. It is very hard to be looked down on and left out of things. How long will I have to pay for one mistake? What should I do? — TULSA TROUBLES.

DEAR TULSA: For openers you can call yourself Mrs. Smith. A young woman with a child who introduces herself as Miss Smith hangs a sign around her neck that says "Kick me." If someone asked about your husband say, "I am not married." The details are nobody's business. I'm not suggesting you lie, but I am recommending that you keep your personal history to yourself until you are well enough established to overcome the prejudice. Unfair? Perhaps, but this is the penalty for breaking the rules.

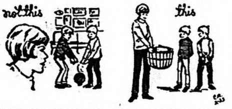
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Stop playing with your basketball. You'll be sure to break something. You'll have to wait until you can go to the gym."

Son: "We never can do anything that's fun around here."

Mother: "I don't want you to take the basketball upstairs, but I think I can fasten this bushel basket on the basement wall and you can play down here until it's warm enough to be outdoors again."

Most homes will not stand a lot of the activities small boys enjoy — but frequently a satisfactory substitute for forbidden pleasures can be found.

U.C.W. Meeting

ST. ANDREW'S UCW

MARMORA — Most of the world's problems could be solved through more love towards our fellow men. Selfishness, greed distrust — the roots of war and unrest; poverty, hunger, loneliness — the sorrow of many peoples; these things need not be so prevalent if only we thought a little less of ourselves and a little more of others.

Mrs. Vaughn Glover, who was in charge of the February program of the UCW of St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, made her message very clear and most interesting, sharing several personal experiences with members present.

Mrs. Douglas Vilneff, president, chaired the business meeting, and reports by the visiting committee and social conveners were given. Mrs. Douglas Miller and Mrs. George Madgett were successful in choosing new artificial flower arrangements to be used in the church, when fresh flowers are not available. A contest, based on verses of love from the Bible, was completed during the social half hour following the meeting. A report was given of the meeting held with women of other churches to formulate plans for the program for the World Day of Prayer service on March 6, being hosted by the UCW of St. Andrew's United Church.

Thought for the month is "If you can't make light of your troubles, keep them dark."

MAJOR ACTIVITIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Yolaine Dalpe-Jodoin, director of a nursery school, says coloring, cutting and glueing are the major activities recommended for pre-school tots. "It is necessary for them to do many free drawings. Give the child plenty of crayons and paper — preferably newsprint because it is inexpensive. Scissors should cut well but have blunt ends to avoid injury."

Lose 10 lbs. in 10 days on Grapefruit diet

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. (Special) — This is the revolutionary grapefruit diet that everyone is suddenly talking about. Thousands of copies have been passed from hand to hand in factories, plants and offices throughout the U.S. and Canada.

Because this diet really works. We have testimonials reporting on its success. If you follow it exactly, you should lose 10 pounds in 10 days without pills or drugs. No weight loss in the first four days but you will suddenly drop 5 pounds on the 5th day. Thereafter lose one pound a day until the 10th day. Then you will lose 1½ pounds every two days until you get down to your proper weight. Best of all, there will be no hunger pangs. Revised and enlarged, this diet lets you stuff yourself with formerly "forbidden" foods, such as steaks trimmed with fat, roast or fried chicken, gravies, mayonnaise, lobster swimming in butter, bacon fats, sausages and scrambled eggs and still lose weight. The secret behind this "quick weight loss" diet is simple. Fat does not form fat. And the grapefruit juice in this diet acts as a catalyst (the "trigger"), to start the fat burning process. You stuff yourself on the permitted food listed in the diet plan, and still lose unsightly fat and excess body fluids. A copy of this startingly successful diet including suggested menus can be obtained by sending $2 to WEIGHT-AWAY, Dept. 54-23, 100 - 640 Cathcard Street, Montreal 111, Quebec.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

If after trying the diet you have not lost 7 pounds in the first 7 days, another 6 pounds in the next 7 days and 1½ pounds every two days thereafter, simply return the diet plan and your $2 will be refunded promptly and without argument. Tear out this message as a reminder. Decide now to regain the trim, attractive figure of your youth. Diet plan also available in French.

Chicago Trial Verdict Is Protested By Thousands of Young Demonstrators

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hurling obscene slogans and a few rocks, thousands of young demonstrators coursed through Washington streets Saturday protesting the Chicago conspiracy trial.

A heavily-reinforced contingent of helmeted riot police blocked the marchers from crossing Constitution Avenue toward the White House and broke up the demonstration about three hours after it started.

About two dozen persons were arrested, all fairly young and most of them for throwing rocks or debris at police. By keeping the protesters on the move the police succeeded in avoiding any major clash.

And in Chicago, at least eight persons were arrested as thousands massed outside the Cook County jail where five men convicted of inciting riots the week of the 1968 Democratic National convention were being held, along with two others who were acquitted but jailed on contempt charges.

Picking up strength as it moved, the Washington crowd marched from a gathering point across from the justice department building, scene of violence during an anti-war protest last Nov. 15.

The parade of shouting, flag-waving demonstrators moved past a police station, where leaders said they were showing "solidarity with all political prisoners," and on to the Washington Monument area across from the White House grounds.

Twice police stopped efforts to haul down American flags.

In Chicago, some 3,000 persons gathered outside the north wall of the county jail, chanting anti-war slogans and shouting obscenities at police.

No Proof Found Metis Starving

SASKATOON (CP) — A four-man federal delegation sent to two northern Saskatchewan communities to check reports that Metis families there were on the verge of starvation, announced Saturday that no proof of the allegations had been found.

The delegation, headed by Dr. Stanley Haidasz, Liberal MP for Toronto Parkdale, flew to Meadow Lake, 185 miles north of Saskatoon and from there to Buffalo Narrows, specifically seeking Metis who had claimed to be near starvation or had given the names of others who were.

The investigation was ordered by Health Minister John Munro after Howard Adams of Saskatoon, president of the Metis Society of Saskatchewan, charged Wednesday that 5,000 Metis in the province were near starvation. They blamed restrictive Canadian wheat board policies.

Within an hour of their return to Saskatoon, the delegates clashed with Dr. Adams at a news conference.

Dr. Haidasz told Dr. Adams that neither he nor other members of the delegation had seen any evidence of hunger or starvation in Meadow Lake or Buffalo Narrows, and suggested that if Dr. Adams had a list of needy Metis families, he should present it to provincial welfare authorities.

Dr. Haidasz said the delegation may have been hampered in its efforts to find starving Metis because Dr. Adams had refused to provide the list before the delegation left Saskatoon Saturday morning.

Eban Opens Talks With West Germany

BONN (Reuters) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban, the first Israeli minister to make an official visit here, began talks today on consolidating relations between Israel and West Germany.

Strict security has surrounded his visit for fear of action by Arab extremists.

His first call today was on Foreign Minister Walter Scheel. He was scheduled to meet President Gustav Heinemann and Chancellor Willy Brandt later.

Eban flew here Sunday night from Munich under a cloak of secrecy.

At least one anonymous telephone caller has threatened to "get" the Israeli foreign minister, and tension in the country is high in the wake of an Arab bomb attack against Israeli airline passengers and an arsonist fire in a Jewish old people's home in recent days.

In a prepared statement Sunday night, Eban said the development of a free and frank relationship between Israel and West Germany is one of the urgent moral necessities of the age.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel said Eban's visit is a significant date in the history of German-Israeli relations—relations rooted in the problems of a dark past, a threatened present and hopes for a better and peaceful future.

Eban spent eight hours in Munich Sunday to make a grim, silent tour of the former Nazi concentration camp at Dachau, where 70,000 people died of ill-treatment and starvation between 1933 and 1945.

Police enforced rigid security precautions to protect him in the Bavarian capital.

The protecting screen followed the minister to Bonn, where the traditional welcoming statements, usually made on the airport tarmac, were reserved for the 18th floor of a luxury hotel with security and secret service men on every floor.

All roads leading into Bonn were closely watched by police. The airport was almost completely cordoned off. Police with dogs patrolled outside the hotel where Eban spoke.

Eban's main aim in his talks with Bonn leaders will be to present Israel's case in the Middle East conflict. He is expected to try to convince the West German government that the Arab states must be induced to negotiate directly with Israel.

Arabs Are Blamed

Sabotage Is Suspected In Crash of Swiss Jet

BERN (Reuters) — The Swiss cabinet met in emergency session today to discuss the crash Saturday of a Swissair jetliner in which 47 persons including 15 Israelis and a Montreal couple were killed.

The crucial question faced by the Swiss government is whether the crash, which apparently followed an on-board explosion, was the work of Arab saboteurs.

An Arab commando group claimed responsibility for the crash Saturday night, but later denied its claim. Investigators sifting the fragmented wreckage of the Coronado jetliner have given little hope of finding any conclusive evidence among the twisted bits and pieces of the four-engined aircraft.

Israel, indignant over the crash, was confronted with a swift and sudden curtailment of air service as Western European airlines, fearful of Arab guerrilla attacks, cut services to the Jewish state.

In Montreal, the International Air Transport Association condemned recent violence against air travellers and international air transport. Director-General Knut Hammarskjold urged governments to take prompt, "energetic action" through legislation and severe punishment of the criminals involved.

The Swiss government already has ordered that security precautions at airports—stringent since an attack by Arab commandos on an Israeli El Al jet at Zurich airport 14 months ago—should be even tighter.

Transport Minister Roger Bonvin said that if on-the-spot inquiries proved sabotage, the cabinet today would examine with the foreign, justice and police ministries the steps open to Switzerland.

About 50 Swiss federal aviation investigators and police spent the weekend sifting through the debris at the crash site—a pine wood near the Wuerenlingen nuclear research centre in northern Switzerland—looking for clues to throw light on the pilot's last radio message saying there had been an explosion on the plane.

The Montreal couple killed in the crash were en route to a holiday in Israel, trying to forget the recent death of their only son from leukemia.

They were identified as Eliezer L. Kolatacz, 39, and his wife Eva, 37. Kolatacz was vice-president of the Montreal-based Prestige Knitting Co. Ltd.

A family spokesman in Montreal said the couple were on a three-week holiday. "They wanted to forget the loss of their seven-year-old son, David, who died of leukemia six months ago," the spokesman said.

They left Montreal Thursday on the first leg of their trip.

The curtailment of air services by Western European airlines came in the wake of two in-flight explosions Saturday aboard planes carrying passengers and mail to Israel. A bomb exploded aboard an Austrian airliner over West Germany but no one was hurt. It made an emergency landing at Frankfurt with a large hole in its underbelly.

Despite Israeli cries that the restriction of services was capitulation to Arab terrorism and encouragement to Arab commandos to make further attacks, these airlines cut down their services:

Britain — British Overseas Airways Corp. slapped a 48-hour embargo on freight to Israel. British European Airways also stopped freight shipments, but for an indefinite period.

France—Air France announced an embargo on all cargo and postal flights to Israel from all parts of the world, at least until tonight, while it considers what other measures to take.

Scandinavia — The Scandinavian Airlines System, owned by the national airways of Norway, Denmark and Sweden, halted its once-weekly flight from Copenhagen to Tel Aviv until it can institute security precautions.

Austria — Austrian Airlines, whose plane was damaged by an in-flight explosion over Germany Saturday but landed safely, placed a temporary embargo on both freight and mail.

Switzerland — Swissair halted all freight and mail service to Israel until further notice.

West Germany—Lufthansa placed a 24-hour ban on all handling of air packages and parcels addressed to Israel.

The Netherlands—KLM Royal Dutch Airlines announced a temporary freight and mail embargo on its flights to Tel Aviv. Duration of the embargo was not announced.

The Italian airline, Alitalia, announced no new measures, but it is known that the line had previously instituted x-ray checks on baggage destined for the Middle East.

Pleasant Dreams for Hull After Joining NHL's '500' Club

by

Maurice

Switzer

Sports Editor

After 500 goals, a fellow's entitled to a rest.

So it came as no surprise that Robert Hull, Jr. was snoring soundly into the big hours of daylight today, suffering the after-effects of one of his finest National Hockey League hours.

A combination of virus and celebration following a 6-3 win by his Black Hawks over Boston Bruins had hockey's Golden Jet in bed by 9 o'clock Sunday night.

Dreams would not be hard to come by. Hull had scored three weekend goals in two crucial Chicago wins over New York and Boston, the National Hockey League's current one-two punch.

Saturday night, Hull flipped a passout from Lou Angotti 10 feet past Ed Giacomin at 16.51 of the second period.

That goal stood for somewhat more than one point in the weekly scoring roundup published in Hockey News.

It was Hull's 500th goal in regular season NHL competition, making him only the third man able to stake that claim.

Scored in his 862nd regular-season game, Hull's No. 500 came considerably quicker than that of either Maurice Richard, who retired with 544 in 978 games or of Gordon Howe, who has 752 to show for some 1,600 outings.

Even after winning everything but the Vezina Trophy, Hull still appears to be the last person to talk about his accomplishments.

"I never set my sights on any records," he said Sunday. "You never know. This is a rugged game and any game could be your last.

"I just want to stay healthy and play as long as I can."

The Chicago Black Hawks are even more interested in the Hull state of health. Last year's basement tenants have won 16 and tied two of their last 22 games for a thin foot-hold on the eastern division's fourth rung.

Robert Marvin's 29 goals in 43 games have been his humble contributions to the playoff drive.

He was in a jocular mood Sunday after scoring number 501 when somebody speculated on how long it would take for a second 500.

"Let's see. If I score 50 a season for the next 10 years, that would do it.

"No, I think I'll space it out in 13 seasons. It'll be easier that way."

That was good for a chuckle all around, just like a prediction 13 winters ago that a blonde Chicago rookie from Point Anne, Ontario, was going to make hockey fans forget "the Rocket."

Ironically, Hull lost out in the 1957-58 rookie race for the Calder Trophy to Frank Mahovlich.

BOBBY HULL
First 500 Easiest

Mahovlich came up with a 20-goal first season to impress more balloters than Hull's 13 goals and 34 assists.

Today Hull has 130-odd more goals to his credit than the Big M, a margin of better than 10 a season.

And Hull has Lady Byng, Hart and Ross Trophy replicas on his mantel, while Mahovlich has yet to find an individual award to add to his Calder collection of one.

Hull played half his first NHL season while only 18. Mahovlich was a full year older when he came up from St. Mike's Juniors.

Yet there's one area in which Hull is envious of Mahovlich. The Big M sipped champagne from four Stanley Cups while in Toronto Maple Leaf colors.

And Hull has sampled hockey's most prized apertif only once, in the 1960-61 miracle engineered by Rudy Pilous.

We have a hunch he'd swap chances at a second 500 for one more Stanley Cup swig.

Terriers Nip Mo-Hawks in Third

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

If Belleville Mo-Hawks can live and learn, they could beat any team in the OHA Senior A league.

They had a win over league-leading Orillia Terriers within their grasp at the Memorial Arena Sunday, then forgot some of their defensive homework and lost 4-3.

Gary Milroy's goal with less than five minutes remaining ended the Terriers' pennant - winning season on a winning note. Milroy found himself uncovered in the slot after Steve Rexe had done his bit by kicking out three successive Orillia shots.

Mike Draper, Grant Moore, and Clare Alexander also scored for the Terriers, who trailed the Mo-Hawks 3-2 early in the final period.

Gary Dalliday beat Errol McKibbon on the short side to open the scoring near the end of the opening 20 minutes. Dalliday scored on a two-on-one break, using John Baker as a decoy.

The Terriers took the lead on a pair of second period goals in which the Mo-Hawks' Billy Armour figured as the goat.

At 8.56, Armour kicked Alexander's shot into the Mo-Hawk net while referee Walt Gardiner was signalling a delayed penalty on him for slashing. In the final minute of play, Armour, spelling the three - man Mo-Hawk defence corps, was caught-flat-footed on a deke by Grant Moore, who slid a low one past a startled Rexe.

Some determined forechecking by Ray Johnston gave Wayne McConnell a perfect chance to tie the score at 1.39 of the final period.

Then Mo - Hawk captain Ralph Plane who has scored four goals in the last seven games, took a long breakaway pass off the boards from defenceman Bob Wilson and deked McKibbon to forge a 3-2 Belleville lead.

Mike Draper nullified that situation two minutes later, when he worked himself into a solitary situation in a Belleville corner, then jammed the puck past Rexe.

Milroy's game - winner 10 minutes later spoiled a brilliant effort by Rexe who had 52 Orillia shots to cope with, while the Mo-Hawks only tested McKibbon 25 times.

Rexe was particularly frustrating in the first period, when he stymied all the Terriers' 19 chances, including a breakaway effort by Grant Moore.

Once again, a short-staffed defence unit cost the Mo-Hawks dearly. Greg Marchen, Lionel Botly and Bob Wilson all performed creditably, but 60 minutes against a team that skates like the Terriers is too much for three defencemen to share.

Lou Kazowski sat out Sunday's game when his injured ankle became swollen after playing in Friday's 8-0 loss in Orillia. He will be starting in the Mo-Hawks' playoff opener in Kingston Tuesday night.

The Mo-Hawks were also playing without the services of Wayne Brown, whose torn ankle ligaments may keep him out of the lineup until next weekend, and steady two - way winger Lorne O'Donnell, who was working Sunday.

The smallest Mo - Hawk crowd of the season -- some 600 — turned out to see one of the better club skating efforts.

Coach Dovey Jones did some line-juggling that had a half-dozen different forward combinations each working with some success.

One of these, the recently-formed threesome of wingers Ralph Plane, Lorne Ferguson and centre Jones, is coming up with good scoring opportunities every time out.

Jones just failed to connect on a Plane centring pass in the second period, and Plane slid the puck within inches of the Orillia goal-line on the shift following his third-period breakaway goal.

One of the brighter Mo-Hawk lights Sunday was rookie Ray Johnston, who despite being hit with flying pucks on the ankle and back, was one of the most aggressive forwards on the ice.

The Mo-Hawk Booster Club is trying to arrange a bus for tomorrow night's playoff opener in Kingston. Interested persons should phone 962-2605, 962-6078 or 968-9924.

Second game will be back in Belleville Saturday night at 8 p.m. Season's ticket-holders have until 6 p.m. Thursday to pick up reserve seats at the $1.75 playoff price.

Sticky Situation

Belleville Mo-Hawk captain Ralph Plane shows why he has a reputation as a determined hockey player. Here Plane sticks with Orillia Terriers' John Chasczewski all the way behind goalie Errol McKibbon in an all-out effort to spring the puck loose. Plane scored once Sunday as the Mo-Hawks lost a 4-3 OHA Senior A decision to the league-leading Terriers.

Imperials Not Bad for Substitutes

Summoned as a last minute replacement, Belleville's Blake Kerr Imperial midgets, responded by winning the championship round at the Brockville midget tournament.

The Imperials didn't leave much doubt as to which team was the class of Saturday's Tournament, as Cardinal conceded after the second period of the final game, with Belleville ahead 7-0.

Manager Tom Neill of the Blake Kerr squad praised the teamwork of his Belleville Club. "It was strictly a team win", said Neill. "Everyone was skating and head-manning the puck."

Belleville netminder Eldon Matthews allowed only four goals in the same number of games "Matthews played really well', claims the manager, "he's shown tremendous improvement."

Belleville opened with a 3-2 win against Smith Falls as they got goals from Dave Smith, Phil Kirby and Brian James. Their second game proved to be the toughest of the tournament as they stopped the Ottawa Valley champions from Petawawa by another 3-2 count. Rick Meagher, Cliff Janitch and Smith were the Blake Kerr goal scorers.

James, Janitch, Brian Cousins and Tim Yohn scored for Belleville in the semi-finals as they shutout Napanee 4-0.

Playing four games in one day proved to be just too tough for the Cardinal finalist opposition as they threw in the hat after two frames. Phil Kirby (2), Meagher, Smith, Janitch, Cousins and Robert Foster scored for the champions.

Open in Oshawa Tuesday

Ellis' Series Could Go Route

"The Oshawa officials think that the series will go seven games," says Belleville Ellis Printer coach Floyd Crawford, "and I think there's a good chance that they're right."

The Printers travel to Oshawa Tuesday night to open their best of seven series with the Crushmen who finished in first place in the Eastern Ontario Junior B circuit this season. While Belleville obviously isn't over-confident, they feel that they stand an excellent chance of taking the series. "If we play the kind of hockey we're capable of," says Crawford, "we're not afraid of any team in this league."

Belleville has won the last two times the teams have met, taking a 6-3 home ice decision and winning 4-2 in Oshawa.

The Printers hope to have star centre John McConnell ready for the play-off opener tomorrow night. McConnell missed the last three games of the season with a broken nose. His presence in the lineup will be even more vital than before, since fill-in Ron Fuller will be absent for the game in Oshawa. Fuller has returned to work in Rochester but hopes to be available for the weekend games.

A bus will be leaving the Belleville Memorial Arena at 5.15 Tuesday evening with some space available for interested spectators.

Olympic Nix

LAUSANNE (CP—AP) — Hockey will be excluded from the Olympic Games if professionals are allowed to play in world championships, the executive board of the International Olympic Committee indicated today.

IOC President Avery Brundage of Chicago said this recommendation will be made to the IOC congress at Amsterdam in May.

Brundage told reporters hockey should be treated like soccer, in which all participants in the professional World Cup tournament are automatically barred from the strictly amateur Olympic tournament.

Kinsmen Edged In Last Minute Of Cornwall Tourney

Belleville Kinsmen bantams "put off losing until the last minute", in the Cornwall international bantam hockey tournament, which they won last year.

Leading 4-3 in their semi-finals match against Ottawa Comstocks, with only 45 seconds remaining, Belleville saw the Bye-town team even up the game at 4-4 and go on to win in overtime. Ottawa was defeated 6-1 in the finals by a Brampton entry.

The Kinsmen opened their tournament schedule with a 5-0 win over Norwood, Mass., with goaltender Bruce Clark recording the shutout. Clark later injured his foot in a quarter-finals match and was out of action for the Ottawa contest. Grant Goegan and Barry Marta each scored two goals, with the other going to Mark Coates.

Their second match against Oshawa was a 2-1 cliff-hanger, as Andy Ricketts scored the winning goal at the one-minute mark of the first overtime period. Paul Ackerman had scored the first Belleville goal. Defenceman Wally Dainard, who played exceptionally well throughout the tournament was a stand-out for the Kingsmen.

Belleville overcame a 2-0 deficit in their quarter-final match against Renfrew and went on to take a 5-2 decision. Andy Ricketts led Belleville with two goals and Coates Ackerman, and Peter Smrke added singles.

Coates, Ricketts, Dave Flesch and Phil Kirby each scored once to give Belleville their 4-3 lead against Ottawa. Bob Moore tended goal in place of the injured Clark.

Minor Goaltenders Play for Deuces

It was a goaltenders weekend for Belleville's minor all star - teams as three tallies by Norwood against the Wilson Concrete Tykes was the highest total put in the Belleville nets.

Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B team played a pair of 2-2 games on the weekend against Marmora and Cobourg. Peter Fahey and Mike MacDonald scored against Cobourg and Fahey and Bruce McKinney tallied again in the Marmora contest.

The Rollins Construction Pee Wees split two games, winning 4-2 against Napanee on Saturday and suffering a 2-1 loss to Peterborough Sunday. Mike Crawford (2), Paul Hayman and Rick Culkin were the goal-getters against Napanee while Tony Meagher got the lone goal against Peterborough.

Norwood Novices came out with a 3-2 win over the Wilson Concrete Tykes in a game on Saturday. Chris Valentine, who has scored in each of the Belleville tyke team's 20 games, got both Wilson's markers.

BCI Midgets Eliminated By Tourney Hosts

BCI's midget basketball team made the finals of the annual Blackball Basketball tournament held at Orillia Saturday, but were defeated 61-41 by a host Orillia entry.

Despite the last - game loss, BCI coach Bill Miller was highly pleased with his team's performance. "We played the final game after only 35 minutes rest," says Miller, "we were only three points down halfway through the third quarter but we couldn't stick with them."

Belleville defeated teams from Parkside High School in Hamilton and Donevan Secondary School from Oshawa to reach the finals. They took a 44-10 victory over Parkside in the opener, with Peter LeBaron and Rick Bell each hooping 13 points, while in the second game, they stopped Donevan 40-30 as LeBaron and Wayne Giles led the scoring with 10 points each.

Height told the story in the final game with Orillia. Their centre was 6' 4" said coach Miller. "We were shooting well but we hardly ever got a second shot. They controlled the boards on us." Keith Wasson sank 18 points in the final game with LeBaron adding another ten.

Brundage Admits Playing Pros Doesn't Harm 'Amateurs'

LAUSANNE (CP) — The great amateur-professional hockey question hung over the Rhone River Valley today like those daring young men in their colored balloons who annually attempt to cross the Alps.

Like balloonists for a favorable air current, Canada questioned the International Olympic Committee on the hockey eligibility question Sunday and came away hopeful but confused.

A Canadian delegation, led by president Earl Dawson of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, received no definite reply to their request for a ruling as to whether amateurs who play against professionals will be contaminated and lose their Olympic eligibility.

Dawson said following a 90-minute meeting with the IOC that its president, Avery Brundage of Chicago, believes "it did not harm a player if he played against a professional, because there was nothing in the book to say so."

And Dawson also said he expects to have a definite answer "at the latest in eight or nine days."

If it is in Canada's favor, Dawson will go to Stockholm next month to discuss the possibility of Canada participating in the 1971 world hockey championships, scheduled for Switzerland.

The issue has been raging for almost a year since Canada decided after finishing fourth in the 1969 world tournament at Sweden that she could no longer participate without professionals.

A Canadian delegation applied to the International Ice Hockey Federation last July for an open tournament in 1970 at Winnipeg and Montreal.

Later, however, the other five countries—Russia, Sweden, East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Norway—refused to play against the professionals for fear of losing their Olympic eligibility.

At an emergency meeting in Geneva last January, the five countries involved refused to play against the professionals and Canada withdrew her team and the tournament site was switched from Winnipeg and Montreal to Stockholm.

Dawson, in a telephone conversation, said Brundage gave the opinion that games between amateurs and professionals should take place providing they were for charitable purposes or for raising funds for the Olympic Games.

"But he said that now that there is thinking of putting professionals into world tournaments, he thinks the whole thing merits a close look," Dawson said.

Dawson was accompanied to Switzerland Sunday by Fred Page of Vancouver, North American president of the IIHF, Gordon Juckes of Winnipeg, executive - director of the CAHA, Harold Wright of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, and COA officials Bill Tindall of Toronto and Frank Shaughnessy of Montreal.

Wright said it was pointed out by IOC representatives that "an individual athlete playing with professionals or against professionals could still be an amateur as long as he was living as an amateur."

Dawson said: "It's my assessment of the situation that the contamination possibly doesn't exist."

He said it this was the case, it means Canada could have staged and participated in the 1970 tournament.

He said that Canada will not take part in the 1970 tournament in Sweden, however, and would not be bitter with the IIHF's decision to prevent Canada from using professionals.

CFB Bowlers Find Groove

WINNIPEG (CP) — A rink from Canadian Forces Base Chatham, N.B., and bowlers from CFB Trenton, Ont., won top honors in the Canadian Armed Forces national curling and bowling championships which ended here Sunday.

The Chatham rink, skipped by Capt. Earl Morris, compiled a 7-0 record over the five-day competition. In second place was a rink from CFB Toronto. They compiled a 6-1 mark, losing their only game to the Chatham rink, 7-5.

In third place, with a 4-3 mark, was a rink from CFB Uplands, Ottawa, and fourth was CFB Bagotville, Que., with a 3-4 record.

The Trenton bowlers had a total pinfall of 29,487 to win the bowling championship, over second-place CFB Baden, Germany, with a 29,163 total.

Bowlers from CFB Greenwood, N.S., and CFB Edmonton, were third and fourth respectively.

Cpl. Bob McQueen, of Bagotville had the high single of 399, and Cpl. Earl Smith, also of Bagotville, had the high triple, 917.

Testing Midgets

Flyers Forget About This Season

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While nine teams battle for the eight playoff positions in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, Niagara Falls Flyers have already started preparing for next season.

The Flyers, already resigned to the fact that they will finish last, Sunday used their game as a testing ground for several Junior B and midget players, who they hope will be in next season's lineup.

Toronto Marlboros downed the rookie-infested lineup 9-0, but coach Paul Emms pointed out that the club was defeated 11-0 by London Knights last week.

In other Sunday games, St. Catharines Black Hawks downed Oshawa Generals 8-5, Ottawa 67s defeated Kitchener Rangers 7-4, Hamilton Red Wings edged Peterborough Petes 6-5 and Montreal Canadiens walloped London Knights 8-2.

Peterborough and Hamilton battled to a 2-2 tie Saturday night, while Oshawa downed Kitchener 5-4.

Mike Amadio and Graham Wise led Toronto with two goals each, while others were scored by Steve Vickers, John French, Bill Harris, Dale Tallon and Fred Barrette.

Kingston Rink Has Chance

Odds Favor Married Skips

CALGARY (CP) — Records show that being married increases the chances of success in the Canadian Women's Curling Championship.

Since the championship began in 1961, Joyce McKee of Saskatoon has been the only single skip to capture the national title. Miss McKee did it twice for Saskatchewan, in 1961 and 1969.

In the 1970 championship, which opens at the Calgary Corral today eight single girls are in action including skips Donna Clark of British Columbia and Marie Toole of Prince Edward Island.

Miss Clark, from Burnaby, has bachelor girls Mavis Gordon at third and Gladys Nord at lead, with Mrs. Marjorie Mitchell throwing second rocks.

The only other single on Miss Toole's Charlottetown rink is lead Pauline Johnston. Their married partners are Jennie Boomhower and Cathy Dilon.

There are three single women on the Saskatchewan team skipped by Mrs. Dorenda Schoenhals of Saskatoon—third Cheryl Stirton, second Linda Burnham and lead John Andersen. It is the youngest rink in the championship, which brings together 10 provincial champions in a round-robin competition. Each game is 10 ends.

Draws today were at 2:30 and 8 p.m.

The first round: Manitoba vs Nova Scotia, Ontario vs Alberta, Saskatchewan vs Quebec, Newfoundland vs Prince Edward Island, British Columbia vs New Brunswick.

The second round: New Brunswick vs Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan vs Newfoundland, Alberta vs Nova Scotia, British Columbia vs Manitoba, Ontario vs Quebec.

Perhaps the reason married women have been more successful in the championship is that they have curling husbands.

Take Violet Pike of Grand Fals, who will be representing Newfoundland in the Canadian final for the sixth time. Her husband has competed in provincial men's playoffs and in the Canadian legion championship.

The other skips in the tournament are Betty Cole of Edmonton, Alberta; Glenda Buhr of Winnipeg, Manitoba; Lee Tobin of Montreal, Quebec; Shirley Pilson of Bathurst, New Brunswick; Audrey Thorbourne of Liverpool, Nova Scotia; Kay O'Neil of Kingston, Ontario.

In nine years, New Brunswick has been the only province outside Western Canada to win the Canadian crown. Mabel DeWare won for the Maritime province in 1963. The other champions: B.C. in 1962 ond 1964, Manitoba in 1965 and 1967 and Alberta in 1966 and 1968.

Senior Phillips Seeking Encore

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Defending champion Alf Phillips, Sr., of Toronto, said it best Sunday for competitors in this week's Canadian Senior Curling Championships:

"Everybody has a weak spot in this age bracket."

The 61-year-old, cigar-smoking Ontario skip is hoping to become the first back-to-back winner in the 11-rink, round-robin event and he doesn't think the lowering of the minimum age to 50 from 55 will hurt his chances.

"Some of the guys went out and formed brand-new rinks," said Phillips. "We haven't gone back to lower-age players. I've got a solid rink in front of me.

"We know each other and we have good harmony. And that's important."

The 11 rinks, nine provincial champions and representotives from Ontario and Northern Ontario, were to hold four-end practice sessions today prior to the first draw at 3 p.m., PST. The second draw was scheduled for 8 p.m., and games call for 10 ends instead of the regulation 12.

In the opening round, Jim Hill of Saskatchewan meets Joe Herrick of Newfoundland; Slim Otterson of Alberta plays Prince Edward Island's Dr. Wen L. McDonald; David Ritchie's Manitoba rink faces John Kilburn of New Brunswick; Don McRae of British Columbia takes on Claude Embree of Nova Scotia and Phillips plays Stan Brooker from Northern Ontario. Quebec, skipped by John Hibbard, has the bye.

McIntosh Rink Carries Quinte Colors

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Experience at the provincial level could be the deciding factor today as 16 teams begin play in the Southern Ontario Women's Curling Association championship.

Three rinks in the four-day, double-knockout competition are returning after competition in last year's championship—Betty Pindera of Windsor, Fern Reynolds of Lindsay and Iris Wallace of Port Carling.

A new champion will be named since last year's winner, Jo Hohob of Trenton, failed to qualify this year.

Other entries are: Bea Cole, London; Helen Burton, Exeter; Joyce Blackburn, Guelph; Rita Rogers, Mount Hope; Erma Todd, Port Colborne; Janette Hymmen, Port Elgin, Eleanor McIntosh, Trenton, Ruth Ward, Mrs. H. L. Much, Shirley Yalmsley, all of Toronto; Eleanor Oaks, Kingston; Judy Trent, Agincourt; and Mrs. N. B. Hazelwood, Oshawa.

The southern Ontario association withdrew from the Canadian Women's Curling Association last year in a dispute over voting power.

The winning rink, therefore, will not qualify for the Canadian women's championship which also begins today in Calgary.

Jesse Brings Trenton Title

GEORGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Earl Jesse's Trenton rink defeated Dundas 7-6 Sunday to win the Royal Canadian Legion provincial curling championship with an over-all record of seven wins and one defeat.

The rink advanced to the Canadian championships in Prince George, B.C., next month.

In other games Sunday, Highland Creek beat Kitchener 9-6; Orangeville trounced Corunna 12-5 and Prescott stopped Kirkland Lake 12-6.

Curly Lord's Highland Creek rink took second spot with a 6-2 record in the eight games this weekend.

The Orangeville rink, skipped by Jack Grigg and the Prescott rink led by Vern Bolton tied for third with a 5-3 win-loss record.

Kirkland Lake finished the tournament with a 4-4 record. Dundas and Kitchener each was 3-5, Corunna was 2-6 and Sault Ste. Marie was last with 1-7.

Rangers Still First

Hawks Whip Front-runners to Hold 4th

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks whipped the leaders and, with a little assist from Montreal Canadiens, today were in fourth spot in the National Hockey League East Division.

The high-flying Hawks downed the leading New York Rangers 4-2 Saturday and beat second-place Boston Bruins 6-3 Sunday to move a point in front of Detroit Red Wings who were shut out 1-0 by the Canadiens Sunday.

In one other Sunday game, New York stayed on top by defeating Toronto Maple Leafs 5-3.

All teams were in action Saturday night when Montreal beat Philadelphia Flyers 5-3, Detroit downed Toronto 7-5, Boston defeated Minnesota North Stars 4-2, Oakland Seals whipped Pittsburgh Penguins 6-3 and St. Louis Blues won over Los Angeles Kings 4-2.

The Black Hawks advantage over Detroit in the battle for the last playoff spot could disappear with the Chicago squad on the road for their next six games.

The Hawks record of 21 wins, six losses and four ties at home is much better than their 10-13-3 road record.

However, Sid Abel, Detroit manager - coach, wishes his team had a road trip coming up. Their record of 14-8-1 on the road is slightly better than their 15-10-4 home score.

"It isn't going to kill us," Abel said after the loss to Montreal before a record crowd of 15,390 at Detroit Sunday.

"It was just a tough game to lose. We've bounced back before."

Abel said he expects his Red Wings to come back just as the Black Hawks did.

"They were down for a long time but they didn't die."

The Hawks were very much alive Sunday with centre Stan Mikita scoring his 34th and 35th goals of the season and helping set up others by Bobby Hull and Cliff Koroll.

Doug Mohns and Doug Jarrett got the other Hawk goals before a crowd of 16,666 at Chicago.

Bobby Orr helped set up Derek Sanderson and Johnny Bucyk for two Boston goals with Wayne Carleton collecting the other.

Phil Esposito set up Carleton's goal but failed to score on brother Tony in the Chicago nets. The younger Esposito kicked out 26 Boston shots to preserve the win while big brother Phil collected 17 minutes in penalties in the hard-hitting game, with a major, misconduct and minor.

At Detroit, Jean Beliveau won a face-off in the Red Wings zone and flipped the puck to Yvan Cournoyer who beat goalie Roy Edwards for the only goal the Canadiens needed.

Rogatien Vachon kicked out 31 shots for his third season shutout in the Montreal goal.

A crowd of 17,250 at New York saw the Rangers stay in front of the Leafs all the way with goals by Walt Tkaczuk, Ron Stewart, Dave Balon, Bob Nevin and Bill Fairbairn.

The win moved the Rangers two points ahead of the Bruins and kept them five up on third-place Montreal.

The last-place Leafs got goals from George Armstrong, Rick Ley and Bob Pulford.

Goalie Ed Giacomin's opposite number was Marv Edwards, making his first appearance since a knee injury knocked him out of the Leaf lineup in mid-December.

The Rangers had less luck in Chicago Saturday despite an early lead on goals by Stewart and Nevin. The Black Hawks stormed back with second-period goals by Bobby Hull and one by brother Dennis. Pit Martin made it 4-2 for the Hawks in the third period.

Bobby's second goal of the night gave him a career total of 500, making him only the third player to reach that plateau. Detroit's Gordie Howe and former Canadien Maurice Richard passed the 500-mark.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Young Pete Hamilton says he felt "like an outsider" when he came south to become a big time race driver two years ago, but agreed today that a $46,400 winner's cheque puts him into the "in crowd" of stock car racing. Hamilton, 26, beat veteran David Pearson across the finish line by three car lengths Sunday to win the Daytona 500, second richest auto race in America.

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — While Denny McLain remained in libmo, the Detroit Tiger pitching star is getting many job offers — primarily to entertain in night clubs. But the 25-year-old righthander said Sunday he can't accept any of them until he is more definite about his future in baseball.

MOSCOW (AP) — Baseball, a game normally ignored here, has finally come to the Soviet Union, the sports newspaper Soviet-Sky Sport reported Sunday. It even published two pictures of baseball players in action. But the rare attention to the U.S. national game signalled no new channel of understanding with the United States. On the contrary, the game is identified as Cuban and brought by Cuban students to Odessa. Cubans are the world champions in baseball, the article said.

Orr Hits 93

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stan Mikita's hot scoring pace may push him into second spot among the National Hockey League leaders, but it won't do if he wants to catch Bobby Orr.

Mikita scored two goals and three assists in two Chicago Black Hawks wins during the weekend to move to within two points of second-place Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins who picked up three assists.

But Orr of the Bruins also added two goals and three assists to put his leading total at 93 points, still 17 ahead of Mikita and 15 ahead of team-mate Esposito.

Nixon Is in Full Control as Ontario Liberals Close Ranks

OTTAW (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Saturday walked away from the provincial party's annual meeting firmly in control of its policies and with the federal and provincial wings more closely co-ordinated.

More than 1,000 delegates had given him a unanimous vote of confidence; agreed — though with reluctance by some—with his support for extended public support to separate schools; and promised him they would "take politics into the streets" in a program of social action.

Mr. Nixon, obviously pleased with the results of what he called "the best annual meeting in the history" of the provincial party, told delegates at a closing luncheon they must stop sitting back "criticizing the federal government and your provincial caucus."

"Our caucus and our party are committed to meeting the real problems of the community in our policy statements and actions," he said. "The provincial arena is where the decisions are made which affect the people most directly.

"Let us not fall into the Robarts' trick of turning to Ottawa on every issue."

Mr. Nixon had stressed again and again during the meeting that the Conservative government of Premier John Robarts is making a major attack on federal tax reform proposals as a "red herring" intended to distract attention from serious provincial problems.

He said he does not accept the reasoning himself, but there are rumors that Premier Robarts intends to call a quick election based on opposition to the federal tax proposals.

Mr. Nixon said the real issues for Ontario are health care, pollution, urban affairs, planning, strong local government and the "new poor."

Not all was rosy as the meeting ended. Strong opposition to the position taken by the elected caucus on the separate school issue had been registered by a large minority of delegates, and student Liberals who had played a prominent role in all policy debates were a little disappointed that they had not been more effective.

There was some concern among Liberals that the motion in support of Mr. Nixon's leadership—worded to include support for his policy statement on separate schools—had been moved by John Wintermeyer.

Mr. Wintermeyer, a former provincial leader, is a Roman Catholic and chairman of a committee which has been seeking public support to the end of high school in Roman Catholic separate schools.

The issue had been hotly—sometimes angrily—debated in a workshop in which about 20 per cent of 800 delegates appeared to be in opposition.

Backers of the statement, issued by the 27-member provincial caucus last fall, won uncommitted delegates with the argument that separate schools exist as a constitutional right which the majority cannot destroy without the consent of the minority group.

Delegates were unanimous in approving a proposal that riding boundaries be redrawn to give urban areas "representation by population," a step which would end the rural domination of the legislature.

They were less firmly in support of proposals for city representation at federal-provincial conferences and the transfer of some legislative powers from the legislature to municipal councils.

Some Ontario members of Parliament were critical of Mr. Nixon's position on the cities.

Martin O'Connell, Scarborough East, said the Liberal party would never come to power in Ontario "with the attitude that the province is obsolete."

NDP Expects Largest Total Of Any Party in Ontario Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Election fever was in the air Saturday and Sunday as the Ontario New Democratic Party held an enthusiastic strategy session marked by rosy predictions from leader Donald MacDonald.

He told the open caucus meeting that the NDP will win about 38 per cent of the vote—more than either the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives—in a 1971 provincial election if a trend indicated by the 1963 and 1967 election results continues.

Speaking Saturday, Mr. MacDonald said that in the 1967 election, the Conservative vote dropped to 42 per cent from 49 and the Liberal to 31 from 35, while the NDP vote jumped to 27 per cent from 16.

If the Tories lost another seven per cent of the vote in 1971 and the Liberals four per cent, the NDP would gain 11 per cent, a plurality of 38 per cent of the vote.

Pointing to the NDP victory in last year's Middlesex South byelection as a reflection of the trend, Mr. MacDonald said the Conservatives lost the seat after 10 years, dropping to 31 from 45 per cent of the vote.

The Liberals stayed the same at 31 per cent, while the NDP vote increased to 38 from 24 per cent.

The NDP now has 21 seats in the 117-seat legislature, the Conservatives 68, the Liberals 27 and one independent.

Mr. MacDonald said the party should hammer home the grass-roots issues of high taxes, costly housing and inflation, avoiding any radical posturing.

"If we do no more than fight as we did in the last election, we'll win."

His enthusiasm spilled over to Sunday's session with delegates in favor of price controls, but divided on the method of achieving them.

Jack Stokes, member for Thunder Bay, said the party should exploit the "flagrant" abuses of price manipulation rather than adopt an across-the-board policy such as a consumers board might follow. In his riding in some areas, bread sells for 78 cents a loaf and some drugs are marked up 1,000 per cent, he said.

Ian Deans, member for Wentworth, said the idea of controls has become more acceptable in the last few months because of the rise in the cost of living.

There was a need for a department of consumer affairs which would protect the individual at the consumer level.

"The fact that the Ontario government doesn't fulfil its primary function, that of protecting the individual, will probably be the single, largest issue in the next provincial election."

Mayors Ask Province For 40 Per Cent Aid

TORONTO (CP) — The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves, agreeing that reform of municipal finance is both urgent and inevitable, plans to ask the provincial government to pay 40 per cent of all municipal expenditures, exclusive of education costs.

The assocation executive endorsed the proposal Saturday and plans to present it at the first provincial-municipal conference in April.

At present, provincial grants differ with individual municipal services. General welfare grants are 80 per cent of cost, road grants range from 30 to 50 per cent.

There are no grants available for sewer and watermain projects or police and firefighting services. A small grant is available for public library facilities. No grants are made on recreational and park facilities outside of conservation projects.

The association proposal, prepared by the fiscal policy committee, assumes that the only solution to municipal financing problems is an immediate transfer of provincial money in the form of unconditional grants.

The committee agreed that at present there is no major field of taxation—other than property tax—that could be used for direct municipal taxation.

Use of either a sales or income tax would only compound inequities and injustices already applied to municipal taxpayers, the committee said in its report.

On educaton, the association executive will propose in April that the province provide funds to guarantee that not more than 20 per cent of annual education costs has to be raised by property taxation.

The proposal follows on the heels of Education Minister William Davis' announcement last week that the province intends to assume 51 per cent of education costs this year.

Mayor Joseph Fabro of Sudbury, chairman of the fiscal committee, said the policy statement was based on the belief that municipal government has an increasing role to play in Ontario.

Mayor Robert Speck of Mississauga, association president, said that in recent years there has been an increasing dialogue between municipalities and the Ontario government.

He said this has now reached the stage where the province is asking municipal associations to join committees in considering provincial legislation that will affect muncipal government.

Mayors, Reeves Oppose Uniform Assessments

TORONTO (CP) —The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves plans to ask the provincial government to reconsider its decision to establish a provincial system of uniform property assessment.

The move towards uniform assessment is "causing chaos," Mississauga Mayor Robert Speck, president of the association, told an executive meeting Saturday.

Mayor Stanley Darling of Burks Falls agreed.

"In the tourist areas the province is killing the goose that laid the golden egg," he told the meeting, adding that under the new provincial system, assessment on one cottage was raised to $80,000 from $6,000, while that of a licensed hotel dropped to $24,000.

The executive agreed to form a committee, including representatives from other municipal groups, and submit a brief to the province.

Currently, only five per cent of Ontario municipalities have switched to the provincial system from one under which they themselves made the assessments. The province wants the changeover completed in five years.

Too Early To Lift Curbs On Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A warning against premature lifting of the United States government's anti-inflation curbs was issued Saturday by federal budget director Robert Mayo.

The economy is not lapsing into a recession, Mayo said, and "it would be rather unfortunate if we lose our courage, in effect, at just the wrong point."

President Nixon's budget chief took issue with the apparently growing sentiment in Washington and Wall Street for a prompt easing of tight-money restraints and fiscal controls. The Federal Reserve Board, Mayo said, can be trusted to shift policy in time to avert a slump.

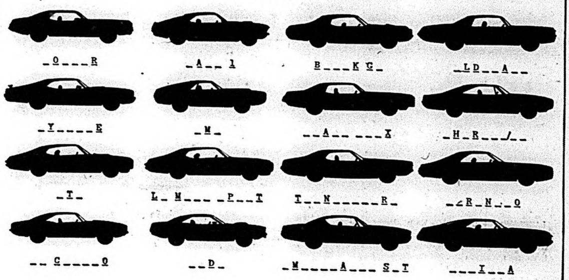
How many of these high performance "muscle" cars can you name?
(See correct answers at bottom of ad.)



Please

don't weaken a high performance engine with a low performance oil

Lubricating a powerful modern engine with ordinary oil is like hitching a racehorse to a haywagon. If you drive a modern high horsepower car like one of the above, you need new Supertest High Performance Motor Oil for three reasons:

1. ENGINE PROTECTION: Modern high compression engines, operating at higher RPM's, create unusually high stresses on oil film, causing ordinary motor oils to break down. Supertest High Performance Motor Oil is made to withstand the greater pressure and stresses of high performance engines, ensuring complete lubrication and protection of the vital operating parts.

2. ANTI-EMISSION DEVICES: Beginning with 1969 models, all makes of automobiles have been equipped with anti-emission devices to control air pollution. This prevents the crankcase from exhausting its fumes. With ordinary oils this results in an accumulation of deposits, which clogs working parts, reduces gas mileage and may cause serious engine damage. Supertest High Performance Motor Oil protects against deposit build-up, so that your engine will give you the performance you paid for.

3. WARRANTY: Supertest High Performance Motor Oil exceeds the requirements of all major vehicle manufacturers, ensuring full warranty protection.

Whatever the age or model of your car, the engine will perform stronger and last longer with new Supertest High Performance Motor Oil.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

AMAZING NEW WAY to STOP HAIR LOSS

FREE CLINIC TWO DAYS ONLY

NEW HOME TREATMENT FOR MEN & WOMEN

E. BAIN, H.S.S.
Ask at Hotel Desk for room number. Hours 12 to 8 p.m.

F. A. ORR, H.S.S.
Will personally supervise your treatments from the Toronto Laboratories.

2 DAY CLINIC STARTS

Monday, Feb. 23rd and Tuesday, Feb. 24th

HOTEL QUINTE

Mr. E. Bain will personally supervise and demonstrate this new method of growing thicker, healthier hair. A free examination by Mr. E. Bain can determine the exact cause of hair loss and baldness — can result in treatment that stops hair loss and grows thicker, stronger, more virile hair.

PROVED EFFECTIVE IN 95% OF CASES TREATED

This new, revolutionary method has proved itself! In 19 out of 20 cases treated, excessive hair loss has been stopped, hair has been regrown in some cases, dandruff, scaling and itching have been completely eliminated.

50 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS RESEARCH HAS DEVELOPED THIS NEW METHOD OF SCALP CARE

Down through the ages baldness has been one of the most common afflictions of the human race. All progress has involved painstaking research and time-consuming experimentation. Only the Frommes Clinic, backed by an organization that has devoted 50 years to this continuous research, can show such startling results. Now, the crystalization of all this scientific research and effort is being demonstrated and offered to you.

HEALTHIER SCALP, MORE VIRILE HAIR IN JUST 30 DAYS

Results are quick with the new Frommes treatment. You don't wait around for months on end. Fast-acting Frommes treatments cleanse all dandruff from your scalp, kill bacteria swarming beneath the surface, eliminate local disorders Once your scalp is healthy and responsive you'll discover that hair loss is stopped. Then special Frommes formulae are applied to the healthy scalp to stimulate hair growth. In less than three months your hair grows more virile. New hair replaces hair you have lost. You look years younger in weeks.

ACT TODAY!
TOMORROW MAY BE TOO LATE

Many unhealthy scalps if treated in time will respond. If your hair is too dry or too oily — if your scalp is itchy and shows dandruff—if you have excessive hair fall, these are the initial causes of baldness . . . not heredity. Baldness is not inevitable. You can inherit a weak scalp, but you cannot inherit baldness. Proper care and treatment can make a weak scalp retain and grow hair for a lifetime.

FREE Consultation
No Obligation

You will find Frommes free consultation informative and absolutely truthful regarding the results expected. If you case will not respond to treatment, we will tell you so. Come in today and let Frommes show you how you can take care of your hair — without obligation. Both men and women accepted for treatment. No appointment necessary.

Hours 12 noon to 8 p.m.

U.S. Housing Crisis Beginning to Engulf Middle Class

In an age of affluence the United States isn't meeting its housing needs. This article from the AP special assignment team looks at the problem.

By DICK BARNES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national housing crisis that long has plagued the poor is beginning to engulf middle-class Americans as the need for housing outstrips production and prices go steadily upward.

At the same time, the rising costs and critical shortage of houses are intensifying the pressures that low-income persons must fight to find a decent place to live.

The United States government says 26,000,000 new housing units are needed during the next 10 years. But marriages—the formation of new families who'll need a place to live—now average 2,100,000 a year and are increasing rapidly.

The Associated Press investigated home buying to isolate the tangle of cost and other factors at work. Also evident, however, is the pressure the newer middle-class housing miseries are exerting downward.

It works this way: Building costs and tight money make it harder for the upper-middle and upper classes to buy new homes. That, in turn, keeps the lower middle classes from buying the used houses which the wealthy would otherwise sell.

This creates more pressure on rental property, where vacancy rates are dropping and rents are increasing. In stairstep fashion, each income level is kept in relatively poorer housing, with the pressure mounting as the production gap increases.

With middle Americans increasingly feeling the housing sting, the crisis is getting priority attention from both public and private sectors—President Nixon referred Jan. 21 to "the crisis situation we are facing in the housing of our people"—but action that may eventually solve the shortage and blunt cost increases isn't any help to today's house hunters.

One recent weekend, four families looked for houses and found only disappointment.

Jerry and Janet Rogers, parents of two in South Pasadena, Calif., have been searching for a house for nearly a year.

"I guess we're sort of indoctrinated in the east and midwest where the homes are nicer, custom-built and for less money," said Rogers after a tour of three one-storey stucco-coated homes.

But the situation in the Midwest isn't that rosy for Ted and Janie Even in Detroit, married less than year.

"One Sunday when we first started looking," Mrs. Even recalled, "we decided to go into a new house that was for sale in Madison Heights," a blue-collar Detroit suburb. "We're looking for something in the $20,000-$25,000 range and we thought that was about how much it was.

"But when we asked the man in charge how much it cost, he said $34,000 and we just said 'Thank you,' and turned and walked away. He must have thought we were some kind of nuts."

James and Catherine Smith, professional musicians who recently moved to Miami, already have faced the music on house prices.

"Before we moved down here we expected to pay between $15,000 and $25,000 for what we wanted," said Smith, "but now we realize between $25,000 and $35,000 is a more realistic price range."

Even Dom and Virginia Calcagni, with $15,000 saved for a down payment, have discovered they will probably have to buy an older house in White Plains, N.Y., than they wanted. "And in the older homes—the ones we can afford—the rooms seem to be too small and they're run down," said Mrs. Calcagni.

The housing crisis facing these and thousands of other families is a compound of cost and availability.

The 1968 Housing Act set a national goal of 26,000,000 new units in 10 years. But by December, the annual rate of housing starts had fallen to 1,200,000.

This shortage boosts costs through the workings of supply and demand.

A battery of other cost factors is at work, too.

Associated Press interviews with buyers, builders, lenders, realtors, union officials and government planners from coast to coast pinpointed expense areas like these:

—Land values have skyrocketed. Example: In the Maryland suburbs of Washington, raw land prices have quadrupled in 10 years.

—Some union work rules stifle efforts at economy. Example: In San Francisco, a builder complains that union rules add $800 to the price of painting a single house.

—A national tangle of building codes haphazardly bars cost-saving new materials and methods. Example: In one Chicago suburb, a requirement that foundations be 12 inches thick instead of the standard 10 inches adds $320 to per-house costs.

—Government red tape brings expensive delays. Example: One builder says a four-week lag in Federal Housing Administration application approvals adds $85 to the costs of a house.

—Soaring construction wages are puffed higher by practices frowned upon even by some unions. Example: A West Coast drywall hanger makes $36,000 a year, and a roofer $100 a day, by working on a piecework rather than hourly basis.

—Costs of many materials are spiralling. Example: Cabinets priced at $303 in 1964 cost $642 in 1969. A garage door costing $95 then is $135 now.

—Most pervasive of all is tight money. Mortgage interest rates are nudging 10 per cent in some areas. Construction loan costs for builders have doubled. And mortgage money is so scarce in some cities that lenders are collecting handsome incentives for making loans.

In 1965, half of the 575,000 new non custom-built homes sold for $20,000 or less. In 1969, less than one-quarter of the 435,000 such homes were in that price range. By contrast, more than one-third of last year's new home sales were for $30,000 or more compared with only 13 per cent four years earlier.

Inflation gets much of the blame for rising prices—but the same inflation allows some families to move quickly up the housing ladder because they can get such a good price for their old home.

A San Francisco couple, for example, bought a house in Twin Peaks in 1952 for $12,500, paying $500 down. In 1960, they sold that house for $27,000 and invested their equity in a $41,000 house.

Recently they sold that house for $59,000 and invested the equity in a $68,000 house across the street from a former mayor. Thus, time and the original $500 were parlayed from a $12,500 to a $68,000 residence.

Most people can't afford a $40,000 house. In fact, one congressional study showed half of all Americans cannot afford payments on a $20,000 mortgage.

In today's market, says Harold Tolar, president of the Anaheim, Calif., board of realtors, a family buying a $20,000 home with a $19,000 mortgage should have a monthly income of $720.

"But the average buyer looking for a $20,000 home doesn't make $720, he makes $500 or $600."

Canadian TV Producer Says Mine Union Election in Nova Scotia Improperly Run

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Canadian television producer charged in a sworn statement released Saturday that he had found widespread irregularities in voting in Canadian locals in last year's United Mine Workers election.

Strang Ferguson, a free-lance television producer for the CBC, said he visited a number of Canadian locals to check on allegations of irregularities.

Ferguson said "there were election irregularities throughout District 26" (Nova Scotia)."

Meanwhile, the Washington Post reported Sunday that the Canadian government has been asked by the U.S. labor department to aid in investigating fresh charges of vote padding and forgery in the UMW election.

W. A. (Tony) Boyle won re-election as UMW president by a wide margin over Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski in the election. Yablonski, his wife and daughter, were later found slain in their Pennsylvania home.

Joseph L. Rauh, Yablonski's lawyer, Saturday sent to U.S. Labor Secretary George P. Shultz a copy of the Ferguson statement, saying it "shows that tally sheets were altered and another forged after the election."

Rauh accused Shultz of conducting a weak and inadequate investigation of the UMW election and said the labor department appeared to be about to overturn the election on a minor technicality instead of confronting the issues.

Ferguson said he brought his information to the labor department and was shown the official District 26 tally sheet from the union's international headquarters.

The tally sheet, Ferguson charged "contained numerous changes from the original and was about 1,000 votes short of the original announced totals for this district.

Ferguson urged the labor department to request the Canadian government to subpoena district's records "in order to further the investigation and throw out this diabolically corrupt election."

MUSIC LINGERS ON

John Forsythe, star of the television comedy series To Rome With Love, lives in a home that once belonged to singer Jo Stafford and her orchestra leader husband Paul Weston. Little Britain Belts Bata

Third periods proved to be the downfall of the Bata Braves as they were beaten twice by Little Britain in their Eastern Ontario Intermediate C semi-final play-off series.

The Braves trailed 3-1 after two periods on Friday only to see Little Britain pump in five goals in the last frame against a lone Bata marker. Doug Potts and Roger Smith were the Braves marksmen. Besides dropping the game, the club lost the services of Dan Dixon, Bob Bartch and Howard Foshay, who each suffered injuries.

In Sunday's contest Little Britain held a slim 3-2 lead at the end of the second frame, but again hit for five goals in the third period, winning 8-2. Chuck Howard and Roger Smith tallied for Bata, who drew only four penalties against 17 for Little Britain.

Next game in the series is Friday night at 9 p.m. in Trenton.

Teenagers Don't Listen to Doctors

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

It is not uncommon for patients to tire of the advice given by doctors. People get fed up hearing all the "Don'ts" like "Don't smoke" — "Don't drink" — "Don't overeat." Adults begin to react negatively to all such "sermonizing."

But there is an even wider gap of communication between doctor and teenager. Especially when the doctor warns against something as harmful as LSD. Often youngsters will listen to their peers and shut their ears against professional advice. Therefore, here is a letter, which I hope is helpful, from a teenager who has taken many "trips":

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read your column in the Philadelphia Belletin about a person who was interested in taking LSD. I was so moved by the letter and the response to it that I felt obliged to relate my experiences.

Two years ago when I was 18, I took over a dozen trips. I tripped in San Francisco, Colorado and Philadelphia. I was tripping on acid on a bus, in the mountains, at a concert, while driving a truck, and in my own bedroom.

During my trips I experienced some beautiful visions and sensations, and some moments when I wished I hadn't begun at all. During my last trip I had a desire to cut off my leg and actually did feel as if I were taking my own life. Luckily, I had enough self control to get up and flush the remaining LSD (about $50 worth) down the toilet.

My advice: Acid, as well as being a synthetic chemical, is dangerous. Its effect on the mind, in my case, was disastrous. Even under the guidance of an experienced friend, the results are never predictable. I have heard that the effects of an acid trip wear off completely after three years. I yet have one year, and for me it will be a tortuous one.

You want to take acid? Eat good food, exercise, read a book. Carry your life and treasure it. Don't carry around an artificial chemical that will harm you. I hope that my words will be taken seriously. — Mr. S.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 15 - year - old daughter suffers from headaches. They seem to throb over one eye or temple. Some days they go on and on. She must lie down to get relief. Sometimes she vomits. But being a good scholar she goes to school without fail. She's an A student and a cheerleader.

Our doctor thinks it is due to nervous tension. She has been getting these since the age of three — long before school began. I've experienced migraine headaches. I know you will say "like mother like daughter." But isn't there something she can take? Is it possible she has migrain, too? — Mrs. S.

Comment: Not only possible, but probable. Migraine often runs in families. It occurs in perfectionists — which your daughter seems to be. Why not ask your doctor to consider migraine.

If he thinks it is a likely cause of her headaches, he will prescribe a drug to be taken long before the attack becomes disabling. In this way — as you must know from your own experience — she will be saved from suffering more than necessary.

• • •

For Mrs. R.: Lack of acid in the stomach and the need for liver injections brings up the possibility of anemia. Ask your doctor about pernicious anemia and the possibility of B 12 injections instead of liver which seems to upset you so much.

Your Car

If Auto Catches Fire Disconnect Its Battery

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes: "While driving along a country road last fall the engine stalled and smoke oozed from under the hood. I opened the hood and the electric wiring running across the top of radiator was blowing red and a few minutes later fire started under the instrument panel and soon the inside of the car was ablaze. I feared the gas tank might explode and all I could do was stand well back and watch my car being destroyed by flames. About an hour later a passing motorist suggested calling the firemen, but by this time the car was just a smoldering ruin. Fortunately there was no explosion, but I lost about $300 in personal belongings, which were not covered by insurance. Have you any suggestions to offer to a motorist who finds himself in this predicament?"

One of the most common causes of fire in an automobile is a short in the electrical system, and this is apparently what occurred in this instance.

With an electrical short, the only hope of preventing a major fire is to disconnect one of the two battery cables immediately, which can usually be done in a minute with the aid of a wrench or screwdriver. If in doubt, prepare yourself by asking your mechanic to show you how to remove the cables.

Some battery cables are spring-loaded and can be removed from the batery post by simply prying them open with a screwdriver. Others are bolted to the battery post and must be undone with a wrench. If the battery cables have not been removed for some time they may be seized onto the battery posts and it will not be possible to pull them off the posts by hand.

A seized cable can sometimes be removed by placing the tapered blade of a wheel wrench or screw driver under the cable and prying upwards. If this doesn't work, try removing the other end of either battery cable from the point to which it is attached. Keep in mind that grasping hot wires or battery cables with bare hands can result in severe burns.

The next most likely cause of fire is gasoline leaking onto the engine as a result of a defective carburetor, fuel filter, fuelpump or gas line. To stop the flow of raw fuel, shut off the engine immediately with this type of fire. If a fire extinguisher is not available, throwing sand or a large piece of damp cloth on the engine will sometimes smother the flames.

Ocassionally an underinflated tire will overheat and start smoldering. If the heat is not too intense, to prevent the fire from spreading the wheel should be removed from the vehicle, but remember that smoldering rubber is sticky and will adhere to bare hands.

WARNING: If the fire cannot be safely and quickly extinguished, or if the fire is near the gas tank, keep yourself and bystanders well clear of the car and call the fire department.

Make sure that the ash trays are not loaded with such things as paper candy wrappers. Ash trays are far from fireproof and a glowing cigarette butt placed in them can ignite paper, and start a serious fire. I recently investigated a fire that destroyed a $5,000 luxury liner. Apparently the smoldering contents of the ash tray burst into flame when the vehicle was parked and locked up on a parking lot.

Any part of the exhaust system that touches the underside of the car's steel floor can start a fire. There must always be an air space between the body and the exhaust system.

Obviously, preventive maintenance minimizes the possibility of property damage, personal injury or even death by sudden fires.

A final word: A fire extinguisher is a necessary safety device in the car, the home, the boat, in a summer cottage or around a camp site. I always carry a dry chemical type fire extinguisher in the trunk of my car.

Fishing and Hunting May Be for Rich Only

BRANTFORD (CP) — Hunting and fishing in Ontario may soon become activities for only the wealthy, the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters was told Saturday night.

Dr. E. G. Pleva, a geography professor at the University of Western Ontario, told the association's annual convention that much of the natural land now available for recreational purposes in southern Ontario would be covered by a vast city in the future.

By 1980, he said, there will be 9,000,000 persons living in Ontario, 84 per cent in cities.

"Hunting and fishing opportunities are considered incompatible" with present trends in development, he said in a subsequent interview.

Sunday, Doug Corbridge of Bolton, Ont. was elected president to succeed Dr. R. D. Longmore of Sudbury, who becomes treasurer. Jack Bothwell of Lively, and Dave Adair of Toronto were elected vice-presidents.

In an open session Sunday, the Ontario department of lands and forests came under attack for hiring practices involving district foresters.

A speaker accused the department of bowing to the wishes of the forestry industry by hiring forestry specialists rather than biologists. He said that only two of the 20 district foresters were biologists. Biologists, he said, would be more capable of improving hunting and fishing conditions.

Strictly Personal

Children Are Not Objects

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The plain fact of the matter is that many, if not most, parents do not regard or treat their children as persons, only as objects. They are concerned with what the child does, how he acts, what rules he follows, what marks he gets, but not with what he is.

This is the prime source of the so-called "generational gap." It is really a communications gap — and the lack of the communication begins on the parents' side.

By the time children reach adolescence, they no longer confide in their parents — because they knew that their parents are not interested in their inner life, only in their public attitudes and their conformity to the regulations. The stupid children defy the regulations and get into trouble; the smart ones obey the regulations on the surface and violate them in their private lives.

I am also tired of hearing about the "spoiled" children of the affluent middle - class. These children are given things and allowed to have their way not because the parents are indulgent but because they are indifferent; because they purchase with money the substitutes for the time and concern they should be giving to their children. Such children are not "spoiled" — they are neglected.

One of the paradoxes of modern parenthood is that the mothers especially are too "nosey" and to uninvolved at the same time. They pry into their children's personal affairs for the wrong reasons — not to get closer to the child's essence and achieve genuine intimacy, but to find out if "bad" or forbidden things are being done.

The child soon realizes that this interest in his affairs has nothing to do with his genuine needs or fulfillments, but is only a form of police spying — so he closes up completely, and reveals to his parents only what he considers to be "safe" information. He becomes sly, deceitful, and expert in laying a false scent.

Not one adolescent in a dozen has an honest, open relationship with his parents, because the parents have made it impossible. He quickly becomes skilled in the kind of hypocrisy practised by adults, and the pristine candor of the natural child is soon corrupted into a pattern of deviousness, which is worse for his character than any "bad" acts his parents might suspect him of.

A child is not an object to be manipulated, but an organism to be understood. Here, if anywhere, Buber's I-and-thou relationship must obtain, or else the true personhood of the child becomes closed forever to the scrutiny — and even to the love — of the parent.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 24

Your birthday today: Expansion is the keynote for your coming year and a half. The big payoff occurs from mid-year on, but depends on what you do with your opportunities and how strongly your heritage and conditioning stand up under workloads. The tendency is to be your own master; fully employed workers under this influence branch out into independent business experiments on the side.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Put in applications, seek franchises and contracts today. Lease out but do not lend supplies, equipment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Home life claims your attention, causes distractions from details at your work. Make appointments very early in the day.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Start early. You will be lucky if you get the first word in and luckier yet if you have the last word. Friends are in a rollicking, carefree mood; laugh with them.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Experiments, new methods are better left untested for the time being. Appointments turn out to be both late and impatient.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Do some unaccustomed hard digging for facts usable exclusive information. You share travel opportunities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Personal money dealings, letting of contracts, purchasing operations are favored today. The morning hours are the best, so get going early.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): It is your turn to take leadership or at least the initiative in suggestions. Partnership or group actions are quite lucky. Do whatever you do for your own reasons, without explanations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Spend the whole day putting everything to rights, battened down for tomorrow's storm of confusion. Leave no significant decision for tomorrow if it can't wait a day beyond then.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Everybody has his own idea as to what is appropriate, right, or effective. The main issue now is achieving adequate communication and sharing of goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Experimental procedures can be tested now in the actual work. Unexpected calls from relatives provide minor excitement or surprises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Tend thoroughly to business. Be sure you know or have a record of where everything is, what stage important matters have reached. Where there is only one copy of anything, see that it is beyond any chance of loss or damage.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your experiments are ruined by people not realizing that they are tests, ignoring instructions.

Canadian Tax System Is Haphazard Affair

KINGSTON (CP) — The Canadian tax system is "the result of a long series of snap judgments," the director of the Canadian Tax Foundation said Saturday.

Douglas J. Sherbaniuk told the last day of a tax reform symposium at Queen's University that "there is no solid basis of theory behind our revenue system."

He said the federal government's white paper on tax reform is "skeletal" but it provides a valuable service to Canadians by bringing the tax system into the public domain.

"While there is still a nostalgic desire by many to retain the old system of taxation, Canadians now have an opportunity as they never had before to make clear what they want in a tax system.

"I hope they don't waste the opportunity."

Summing up the three-day symposium, David H. Bomham, faculty member of the sponsoring law and business schools, said the discussion had raised many responses to the "perennial questions of taxation."

Mr. Bomham, also executive assistant to Queen's Principal John J. Deutsch, said:

"It is impossible to simply accept or refute the white paper. It is such a mixed bag of things.

"Perhaps the criticism of the white paper has gone too far. While there are obvious flaws in it, it has raised the issue of taxation for the Canadian citizen."

Earlier in the day, Mr. Sherbaniuk said he hoped Canada would not follow the United States closely on international tax proposals.

He said the white paper has proposals governing "passive income of controlled foreign corporations" which will be "patterned on those of the U.S."

Passive income is income derived from dividends, interest, royalties and international shipping profits.

Mr. Sherbaniuk said since the U.S. had found its existing provisions on passive incomes "too complex and somewhat ineffective" Canada should not follow the current U.S. system.

Fighting Banker Routs Intruder

Battle in Basement Of East End Branch

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Police today were still seeking a foiled bank bandit whose armed robbery attempt in the east end branch of the Bank of Montreal was frustrated by a fighting, 22-year-old acting manager.

Police teams today were interviewing bank personnel and householders in the vicinity of the East Dundas-MacDonald Avenue branch for clues in the holdup attempt.

Being sought are any leads to the identity of the would-be robber, his features obscured possibly by a nylon stocking, who surprised the young bank official alone in the building nearly three hours after closing time and snatched a bank pistol from him.

The holdup attempt ended abruptly when acting manager Clinton Halladay suddenly closed with the intruder and both men locked in a struggle for the loaded gun.

In the punch - throwing sequel — in the bank basement—the man failed to subdue the plucky Halladay and fled the scene.

Today, in what is believed the first bank robbery attempt of the century in Belleville, police are seeking a man of burly build, about five foot, seven inches tall, weighing 180 pounds, aged in his mid-40s and wearing a red - check bush jacket, work pants and possible work boots at the time of the holdup.

The attempt took place shortly before six p.m. — nearly three hours after the branch closed.

Today, police chief Douglas Crosbie said police surmise the man may have entered the bank through a cellar door.

Police relate the incident in this sequence:

Mr. Halladay, with the bank four years and posted to the suburban Belleville branch in October, had locked the front door behind the last of the staff some time after five p.m.

He was working at his desk, just about ready to depart home when the incident occurred.

On his desk was the pistol, which he had just taken from a drawer to lock in the vault for the night, in keeping with bank safety practice, say police.

The man silently came up behind Mr. Halladay and grabbed him around the neck, scooping up the gun.

He ordered Mr. Halladay to

U.S. Inquiry Into Safety of the Pill Stirs Wave of Unwanted Pregnancies

WASHINGTON (CP) — A woman birth control specialist told a Senate subcommittee today that its hearings into the safety of the pill had created international panic and prompted a wave of unwanted pregnancies.

Dr. Elizabeth B. Connell of Columbia University in New York City said a stepup in pregnancies "strikes profound fear in the hearts of those who deal daily with women and population problems."

Dr. Connell, associate professor of obstetrics and gynaecology, said fear caused by adverse publicity given the pill at Senate hearings last month could have disastrous effects on population control programs in developing countries which rely on the pill.

"Evidence documenting the panic regarding the pill mounts daily," she said.

". . . If the pill is discredited here, will we again be faced with the problem of appearing to supply something to women of other nations which is too dangerous to give our own?" she asked.

Dr. Connell criticized the hearings for creating what she said was an arbitrary division in the medical profession on the pill issue.

She also criticized some of the conclusions reached by witnesses at hearings last month. Testimony then linked the pill to scores of suspected side effects, including cancer, fatal blood clotting, diabetes and heart trouble.

Dr. Connell, a mother of six and the first woman to testify at the hearings, said even the most violent of critics of the pill had to concede his data was limited and that many of his conclusions were based on unsupported speculation.

Prince Charles in Revue

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Prince Charles talked and danced his way through 25 acts and didn't fluff a line in a stage revue at his Cambridge University college Monday night.

Britain's Prince of Wales had to be prompted during a press showing of the revue Sunday when he forgot his lines.

But his performance before a private gathering in Trinity College Monday night was word perfect.

During the show, which runs for a week in aid of charity, Charles wrestles with some bagpipes, falls off a chair, and does a soft-shoe shuffle. Left, above, Prince Charles blows bubbles during a monologue. At right he is shown in his bagpipe-wrestling routine.

Offshore Oil Rights In Dispute

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials from Canada and the United States will meet "within two months" in attempts to settle a long-standing dispute over a large area of the seabed in the Gulf of Maine, an external affairs spokesman said Monday.

Latest development in the dispute came during the weekend when the U.S. government in an official publication expressed "formal reservations" about the permits issued by Canada.

Bad Housing Top Obstacle In Anti-poverty Campaigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Bad housing is a prime obstacle to all anti-poverty efforts, the federal health department told the Senate poverty committee today in a 75-page brief.

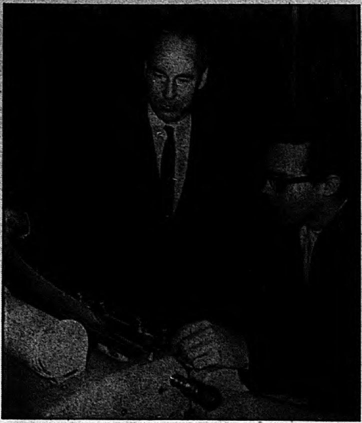
A large increase in low-rent housing projects and housing for low-income families and aged persons was needed.

Any income-maintenance programs for needy persons should include sufficient provision for an adequate housing standard, the department said. Bad housing raised the costs of health and welfare programs.

The brief also said concerted approaches are needed to eliminate substandard housing, as well as poor sanitation, malnutrition, and improper personel hygiene since communicable diseases are more prevalent where these conditions exist.

The department said services to reduce dependency and increase vocational skills have always been an important means of attacking poverty. But opportunities offered were frequently only grasped by the more able and least deprived persons.

Massive amounts of such services must be directed to some of the most seriously disadvantaged persons. "This means much more money and personnel than are currently being used for these purposes."



City Billing Explained

Craig Morrison, Grade 11 student at Centennial Secondary School, as the current Mayor of the Week, has the intricacies of the accounting machine in city tax office explained by City Treasurer Frank Morrell. Craig is this year's fifth Mayor of the Week from city high schools to spend a week at city hall under the Rotary Club Youth Program.

Board Asks for Talks To Discuss Open Meeting

Representatives of radio station CJBQ and The Intelligencer have been invited by Hastings county board of education to meet with the board at a regular session to discuss opening committee - of-the-whole meetings to the press.

The invitation followed reading of letters from the two media at last night's board meeting. The letters stated "it is in the public interest for reporters to attend committee of the whole meetings of the school board."

"I think the intent is to give the reporters background information rather than have them report the meetings," commented chairman James Clarke after reading the letters.

"I think what brought this up was the board's decision at the last committee of the whole meeting to refuse a half-holiday for school children during the coming visit of the Governor-General," said trustee MacDonald Smith. "I accept the policy that personnel reports and property purchases would be discussed in committee of the whole. But many items now considered in committee of the whole should be known to the public."

"We should work out a system to limit the items that go into committee of the whole, added John O'Flynn.

However, Robertson Collins, separate school representative on the board, questioned the concept that committee of the whole meetings are closed to press and public.

"I have never regarded committee of the whole as an in-camera meeting," he said. "Since this board was instituted, we have confused a caucus meeting with committee of the whole." No one should be excluded from committee of the whole."

He suggested that the board should reserve the right to go into caucus at any time "to discuss certain items, and exclude everyone, including members of the administration and the press".

Trustee F. John Follis of Bancroft said he thinks the public "feels it is being left out" when the board makes decision in commitee of the whole.

"I have every confidence in the press," he added.

But before making a policy decision on the matter, the board decided to invite newspaper and radio representatives to attend a regular board meeting to discuss the question of press coverage.

Board Tells Councils Budget Ready April 13

Hastings County trustees have suspended budget meetings scheduled for every night this week, as administration officials struggle with the calculations involved in determining the provincial grants.

At the regular board meeting last night, superintendent L. A. Kellis attempted to summarise the 15-page book of instructions for calculating grants, but trustees confessed they were totally baffled by formulae involved.

"Is there a name for the man who set up all that math?" asked trustee Mrs. Miriam Graham.

"Yes, but it's not repeatable in public," retorted director of education Eric Runacres.

Business administrator Kenneth Wormald said his department is working towards a target date of April 13 to present the budget and a breakdown by municipalities.

In the meantime, the board will send a tax requisition based on 1969 requirements to the municipalities by March 1.

Reason for the long delay in setting the budget is the mass of information required to calculate the government grants. Calculations are based, among other things, on 1969 expenditures not yet audited.

The Hastings board is dependent upon other boards to furnish it with essential figures on such things as the enrolment of county children in schools in other counties, and actual 1969 costs for their education. The board, for instance, purchases education for Deseronto secondary students from the Lennox and Addington board.

"The intent of the minister of education in setting up this grant formula is good," director of education Eric Runacres told the board. "It is intended to help boards with low per pupil costs in previous years to catch up with others that had more money to spend. But we're not sure at this time if the complicated math in the grant formula is the best way to do this.

"We must wait until the figures are in before we will know if the minister has done what he set out to do," the director added. "If he's pulled it off, he's done us a favor; if not, who knows?"

The board asked its administration to inform the 29 contributing municipalities strike a budget before April 13.

Student Loan Proposal

Students and their parents will have an opportunity to air their views and pose questions concerning student loans when assistant deputy minister of university affairs, Alan Gordon, visits Belleville tomorrow.

Invitations have been sent to all area high schools, business and community colleges to use this opportunity to gain first hand information about the subject of student loans.

Appointed assistant deputy minister in 1967, Mr. Gordon is a graduate of the University of Toronto, a qualified secondary school teacher and former registrar of Waterloo University.

The open discussion is being sponsored by the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association, and organizers are hoping for a good turnout of young people and interested public.

Discussions are slated to begin at 8 p.m. at the Kiwanis Centre.

Monthly Interest $17,000

Hastings county board of education is currently spending about $17,000 a month in interest on money borrowed to finance its operation.

Business administrator Kenneth Wormald told trustees last night that the board's bank loan now stands at $3,000,000.

It was necessary to borrow the money, he said, because some 1969 provincial grants have not yet come in, and the board had already had two months of payments for 1970 operations to meet.

The first municipal tax levies are due March 1, but the temporary requisition made to the municipalities is based on 1969 figures.

Karen Hasselfelt Wins

Karen Hasselfelt, 12, of Belleville is county winner of the public speaking contests now being held under the sponsorship of the Ontario Trustees' Council and Ontario Hydro.

The Grade 8 student at Harry J. Clarke School took the county honor with her talk on study habits. She won a cup that was presented to her school, and a study lamp.

Miss Hasselfelt competed against three other elementary school pupils. The four contestants were winners in each of the four areas under the jurisdiction of the county board.

The contest, held at Stirling Intermediate School, was presided over by Robert Horwood, area superintendent with the county board.

Miss Hasselfelt will compete against other winners of county competitions in the zone 9 final at Queen Elizabeth School in Belleville March 7.

The winner of that contest will go to the provincial finals in Toronto.

George Wishart

Former Alderman Dies

A resident of Belleville for 40 years, who took part in the cultural, civic, community and religious life of the city, Ex-alderman, George Wishart, 154 Dufferin Avenue, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon in his 74th year. He had suffered from a heart condition for some time and his illness was brief.

He attended Ottawa Teachers' College and then attended the University of Toronto graduating with a degree of BSA. He took his master of science degree at McGill University and joined the Federal department of agriculture. He came to Belleville in 1929 to join the Research Institute on Dundas Street East, where he was employed until his retirement in 1961. During his years at the Institute and afterwards he wrote many articles on science for a number of science journals.

He was chairman of the CNIB for a number of terms and received a citation for 25 years of continuous service in this organization.

In civic life he entered the municipal field and became an alderman in 1958 and served for six years in that capacity. During his term of office he was appointed to the Hospital Board of Governors by the council and served for some years in that capacity. Before entering council he served on the board of education, and the Jaycees in 1965 named him Citizen of the Year.

The Children's Aid Society was one of his pet projects and he served for many terms on the board as a director while a member of council.

He was a member of Bridge Street United Church but earlier was a member of John Street United Church, when he first came to the city. He sang in both choirs for some years and was most active in the work of both congregations.

Ameliasburg School Proposal Termed Sound Program by Board

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Edward Rutter, chairman of the Prince Edward County board of education last night voiced confidence in the elementary-secondary combine school proposed for Ameliasburg. "We feel we have a very sound program and this plan is before the department of education for its recommendations and will be referred back to us on certain segments," he remarked.

"Eventually we hope we will obtain enough favorable grants to begin construction," he said. Mr. Rutter added that the proposed school does not yet have the approval of the department but said it does have its 'blessing' to a certain point.

Mr. Rutter was one of four representatives from the Prince Edward County board of education joining members of the Picton Kiwanis Club and guest Rotarians in a panel discussion of the proposed school in Ameliasburg. With him were Prince Edward County director of education John McNeil, business administrator, E. A. Shortt, and James Plommer, chairman of the board's education committee.

Showing slides to illustrate the need for a new school in Ameliasburg, John McNeil defined the challenge facing the board of education. "The Prince Edward County Board of Education is faced with the same challenge as its counterparts across Ontario — to provide equal education and opportunity for every child," he said.

The slides shown listed the schools in Prince Edward County requiring additions among them Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, North Marysburg School, South Marysburg school and Athol, Wellington and Happy Hours schools. Library facilities were listed as requirements for Massassaga, Rednersville, Athol, South Marysburg, North Marysburg, and Mildred Corke schools. Limited library facilities are available in some of these.

Facilities for home economics, shop and athletic programs were demonstrated as lacking in several schools.

Although projected figures for school attendance were shown in the slides Mr. McNeil stressed "We are not talking tonight about counting heads. It is not this board's plan to work on some percentage figure. We want to plan for the children we have." He added that by moving the existing number of elementary students up, a total of over 1,800 secondary students could be expected in 1977. "This, I think, is a solid way to look at the situation," remarked Mr. McNeil.

He referred to Ameliasburg as a growth area that should receive specific recognition. His estimate of the school population there in 1973 was more than 1,000 pupils. Again Mr. McNeil warned that this figure was only a projection. "It is my conviction that when the new accommodation is finished it will be full. I don't think we should build for heads we can't count."

He explained that Hastings County recently notified Prince Edward it cannot receive additional retarded children from this area. Mr. McNeil suggested, "If we build and replace at Rednersville, Massassaga and Mildred Corke schools, one of these could be used for retarded children."

Outlining existing conditions at Kente School the education director observed that three portable classrooms will soon be necessary. He added that classes have already been built up to as many as 40 pupils. "Is this equal education, equal opportunity?" he queried.

Mr. McNeil explained that the school board's plan for Ameliasburg township touches other county schools as well. Grade 7 and 8 students from North and South Marysburg schools and Athol school would attend Prince Edward Collegiate for classes in home economics, shop and physical education. "We bring home 375 high school students from Hastings, we transfer high school students from the Wellington area to Kente and we have a workable unit," he said.

"What is this Grade 7 to Grade 13 idea?" questioned McNeil. He noted that when pupils from several county elementary schools joined classes at Prince Edward Collegiate, their teachers would be present when department head call meetings. "We must plan to teach these pupils, we must know what they have studied before," he remarked.

Mr. McNeil told Kiwanians that when the Rednersville, Massassaga and Mildred Corke schools were closed, 16 additional classrooms would be required at Kente to accommodate the pupils. He stressed that this was the kind of accommodation needed to bring home 375 students now in Hastings. Mr. McNeil anticipated that in two years time 500 Prince Edward County students might be attending secondary school in Hastings at an approximate cost of $1,000 per pupil.

During the question period, several Kiwanians seemed concerned with apparent trends toward continuous change in education that could one day make the proposed new school fall short of future requirements. Others were interested in suggested innovations such as a music program for secondary school students.

In his concluding remarks Mr. Rutter stressed that no cost figures have yet been obtained for the proposed school. He added that he had looked at several schools in Kingston at the department of education's request and that their costs averaged from $12 to $14 per square foot. In a later discussion the department of education indicated that these modular buildings might not be satisfactory to the project in some respects and advised examination of other schools with cost figures of $28 to $30 per square foot. "I don't want to leave you with the impression that the board favored this. I think the department's implication was 'take a second look'. he added. Mr. Rutter told Kiwanians that the school might not be operational for about two years. The board has been told that only those with urgent needs would get approval to proceed. "We wanted to go in 1970," commented Rutter

Pet Food Plant Completes Modernization Program

New equipment is now being used in production at Quaker Oats pet food plant on Dufferin St. in Trenton. The $400,000 expansion and modernization program is almost completed, and manager Robert Prentice estimates a 40 per cent increase in both output and efficiency. Mr. Prentice and Lorne Forbes, operator, inspect a new high speed labelling machine with a capacity of 500 tins a minute, double the plant's previous capacity. The new high speed can filler being inspected by Mr. Prentice increases the can filling capacity by 50 per cent.

Tight Budget Could Cut Sidewalk Construction

Sidewalk construction is likely to be curtailed in Belleville this year as an austerity move by city council to help keep the 1970 tax rate in line.

This was indicated yesterday when a recommendation from the city traffic committee concerning sidewalk construction came before council for consideration.

The recommendation suggested that priority in the following order be given to construction of walks on the north side of Bridge Street East from Farley Ave. to Haig Road, on the south side of Bridge West from Yeomans Street to Palmer Road and on Tracey Street for use of students at the new Vanier Separate School.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey questioned the Tracey Street walk suggesting that walks were more needed on certain other city streets.

It was acting Mayor Alderman Arthur Keegan who revealed that council might see fit to cut out sidewalk construction this year as an economy move.

"There is some doubt that any of the proposed walks will be built this year," he said.

City manager J. R. Reynolds later said that walks were included in the city's five-year capital works program but nothing for walks was entered for this year.

However, he said it would be up to council to decide.

Traffic committee members Ald. Paul Russell and Jack Ireland said council was taking a wrong meaning from the committee recommendation.

The intention of the committee, they said, was that if any walks were to be built this year, it was suggested that priority be given to the walks listed.

Alderman Ireland said the priorities had been suggested from a safety standpoint by the city engineer and city police.

In the end the traffic committee recommendation was referred back for further consideration.

A parking authority recommendation that consideration be given to placing $50,000 in the corporations five year capital works budget for purchase of new parking meters was referred to the budget committee.

"I think the meter purchases could be delayed," stated Ald. Ben Corke, noting that a delay would assist Prime Minister Trudeau in his austerity program.

Ald. E. A. Orr felt the meter purchase could be spread over several years to ease the financial impact.

A further parking authority recommendation to restrict meter parking to a two-hour period on Front Street, Victoria Ave., Campbell and Bridge Streets to two hours was referred to the traffic committee.

Council denied a parking authority request that 50 per cent of the parking fine revenue collected by the city be turned over to the authority to help meet the salaries of employees who enforce parking bylaws.

Ald. Enos David said he understand parking authority employees were underpaid but said he objected to tying their wages in with fines.

The same attitude was taken by Ald. Gerald Joyce who said he wanted no part of any suggestion that fines be used to pay employees' salaries.

the vault to open the safe.

The acting manager showed him it was impossible for one person to open the safe, which is secured by a double combination lock. The code sequence is shared by two bank employees.

The bandit then rifled several bank cupboards, attempting unsuccessfully to force two metal cabinets with a screwdriver.

Then he ordered Mr. Halladay to the bank basement, "possibly to get more tools," say police.

Below ground, Mr. Halladay suddenly shoved a door on the bandit's face and closed with the intruder.

During the struggle the pistol fell to the floor. A scuffle ensued — with both men trading punches — for possession of the weapon.

The official was struck in the face and felled. Simultaneously, the would-be robber fled empty-handed.

When Mr. Halladay reached the bank's ground floor the building was empty.

He telephoned police — the alarm came in at headquarters at 5.51 p.m. — and roadblocks were set up on all roads leading from the city.

Two hours later the cordon was disbanded when no trace of the wanted man was found.

Council Seeks School Holiday

The Hastings County Board of Education will be asked to reconsider a previous decision not to declare a school holiday in honor of next month's official visit to Belleville by Governor General Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener.

The question was raised yesterday at city council by Ald. Jean Smith who asked that the school board be approached to reconsider the matter.

She said the vice-regal visit to Belleville would be the first in more than a century. Recognition of Queen's representative in Canada was part of our British heritage, she claimed.

Ald. Robin Jeffrey said she also felt strongly about the matter noting that during a visit to Kingston by Mr. Michener, school children had lined the streets. The governor general had alighted from his car and had created a good impression by walking the curb shaking hands with the children.

She said this could be the only opportunity for many children to see the governor general.

But other councillors—Ald. Ben Corke and Gerald Joyce — said they could see certain problems in the board granting a holiday.

Ald. Corke noted that the school board was now county wide and it might be unfair to declare a holiday only for students attending classes at Belleville. Ald. Joyce suggested that a half day holiday would be all that was necessary.

Council was told that the Separate School board had decided to declare a school holiday for the vice-regal visit.

The governor general is coming to Belleville on March 13 to officially lay the corner stone for the new Loyalist College building.

To dress up city hall for the visit, council directed the purchase of bunting and flowers for the occasion.

Requests Referred

Grant requests from three local organizations have been referred to budget committee discussions by city council.

These were from the Belleville YMCA, the Kinsmen Swimming Pool and from the Hillcrest Community Centre.

The "Y" request asked exemption from payment of city taxes which can legally be forgiven plus a grant to cover those which must be paid.

IS YOUR NET WORTH INCREASING?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

It is a common experience to find New Canadians who arrived in the country from overseas only a few years ago have accumulated greater wealth than many native born residents.

The reason is usually traceable to the inability of the mass of the population of most overseas countries to own their own home due to the high cost and low incomes.

Given this opportunity on their arrival here, many New Canadians save religiously, often depriving themselves of luxuries, in order to acquire property.

The result is that often in a few years they have accumulated property worth more than people who have lived here all their lives.

If you don't own your own home now, or even if you do, and would like to see your "net worth" increase with the years, then the sooner you begin by investing in property the better.

Real Estate today offers some of the best safeguards against inflation that is reducing the worth of our dollars about four per cent yearly.

A competent Realtor will advise you of the best properties available to suit your needs and desires in either residential or commercial areas. You can tap his fund of information and knowledge by a simple inquiry.

The Red Threat

Perhaps it is as well that those who advocate the overthrow of the Canadian government and the introduction of Communism are free to do just that. We see the whites of their eyes as it were — people like young Robert Cruise, a former University of British Columbia student who now stomps the country preaching Marx and Lenin on university campuses.

At the same time we may wonder just how far the government should permit this sort of thing. For example, Cruise said recently that armed guerrilla groups would be operating in Quebec in two years' time. Just what is the government doing to counter such a threat? It would be prudent, to say the very least, to question Cruise on this. Who are the people involved . . . from what source do they obtain arms . . . what form will the threatened insurrection take? Will there be attacks on leading personages and on buildings?

These are matters that should be taken seriously. Former Conservative leader John Diefenbaker is one who thinks so. He told an audience of 1,500 attending the 52nd anniversary of Lithuania's declaration of independence in Toronto that he was concerned about "the impunity with which these groups are advocating the destruction of our country by revolution."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he would like to see criminal prosecutions against "those who use traditional Canadian freedoms to destroy freedom in this country."

Certainly the number of such dissidents is growing. The university press is a case in point, as the special Senate committee on mass media discovered for itself recently. In a six-hour hearing, liberally punctuated with Communist jargon, the representatives of the student press said that the press of Canada will never serve the people until the structure of society is radically changed.

Canada deserves a better fate. Who for example would want to read the rantings of one like Canadian University Press president Stewart Saxe? A 22-year-old University of Waterloo graduate in political science. Russell, according to The Globe and Mail, treated the hearing to a long Marxist-toned dissertation, using multi-syllable words which at least one senator admitted he did not understand.

But not all the university press people are of this stamp. David Chenoweth, managing editor of the McGill Daily had this to say: "The student press is undoubtedly the most arrogant group ever to be seen. . . Education by ideology seems to be the hallmark of the student press. It's one of the worst perversions of freedom of the press ever seen."

How much sedition then can be tolerated? Must we stand by and watch Communism running rampant in the universities, to spill over into society at large? As we suggested recently, the time has come to conduct a detailed investigation into the spread of Communism in this country, and particularly in the universities.

The Long Walk

There are not too many people around today of the adventurous stamp of A. F. Tschiffely who back in the late twenties rode by pack horse from Washington to Buenos Aires (or was it the other way around?)

Tschiffely, as we recall, spent most of his life in the Argentine and he chronicled his journey in the book, Tschiffely's Ride. Of Swiss background, he claimed family relationship with an Australian prime minister of a few years ago who spelled his name Chifley.

It is now some 40 or more years since that famous journey but it is good to know that the same spirit of adventure is still abroad — in a continent-spanning saga of almost similar proportions. But while Tschiffely had two pack horses, Carlos Pereira is walking from Buenos Aires to Juneau, Alaska.

The 26-year-old Latin was pictured recently en route from Brandon to Regina, having covered some 12,000 miles since leaving Argentina in April 1968. It is still a long way to Juneau, but with the mileage involved he is on the last lap as it were. Barring accidents, he should make it. When he does, it wil have been in the tradition of the great adventurers of the world.

Pearson Would Have PM Axe Baby Bonus Instead

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Biggest-Spender - of - Them - All, former Prime Minister Lester Bowles Pearson has been socking to his protege and designated successor Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Designated?

What else was Pearson's plucking of the Trendy One — in sandals, slacks, sport-shirt and jaunty Ascot tie — from the Liberal backbenchers and assigning him to that prestigeous Cabinet post of Minister of Justice.

And then, at the Federal Provincial Constitutional Conference — which turned out to be a sort of stage-setter and mood-maker for the Liberal leadership convention — move aside to let the new Justice Minister star?

You must remember how Pearson, as Prime Minister, directed the conference spotlight on his Justice Minister who proceeded, with zest, to zap it to Daniel Johnson, then Premier of Quebec.

The sequence of events made an instant hero of Trudeau who came off the TV screen across ten provinces as the Intrepid Advocate of English Canada in the Great Debate with Quebec on "special status," language rights, taxes and a whole hatful of issues.

Pierre Trudeau burnished that image during the subsequent federal election to the dazzling point of mesmerizing the rest of Canada into thinking here, at last, was a Prime Minister, and miraculously enough, a French Canadian who would, as the phrase then went, "put Quebec in its place."

At that Federal Provincial Conference, the curtain-raiser of the Liberal leadership drama, Pearson played Robin, leaving Batman's part to Trudeau, in the face-down of Daniel Johnson.

And if that was not designation then "It does not rain in Vancouver in the wintertime," as the current hit song might go if a Canadiar had written it.

So what is upsetting Lester Pearson about his boy Pierre Trudeau?

Pierre, complains his mentor, is a dangerous penny-pincher, doing "irreparable damage" with his government's austerity program to such "great cultural agencies" as the National Film Board and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Both agencies have been slightly wounded in the government's war on inflation. With their budgets frozen, they have been compelled to make small cutbacks in personnel and programming.

Their moans of the agonies of austerity have reached the understanding ears of Lester Pearson and he has clucked sympathetically.

Speaking in a panel discussion of the Canadian Broadcasting League at Ottawa's Carleton University, he let go with what must be one of the strangest statements ever heard in this National Capital where there never has been any shortage of odd-sounding pronunciamentos from High Places.

Rather than freeze the CBC and NFB budgets, he said — and it was not some oddball joke he was attempting either — it would have been better to lop a dollar off family allowance scales.

The "damage" as he put it, would have been less.

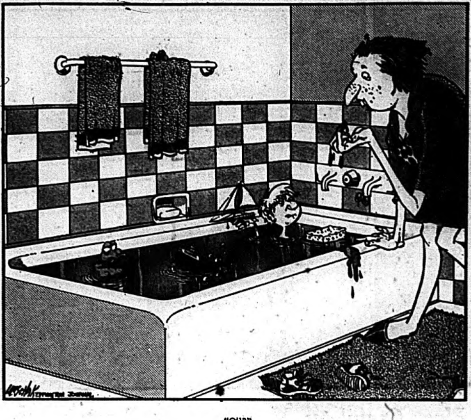
Some children and "a few babies" might suffer, he conceded, but the end result might be nothing more harmful than their fathers being forced to trim their beer consumption.

This Strange Interlude of Lester Pearson has been raised in the Commons by Conservative Leader Stanfield, but Prime Minister Trudeau stick-handled his way around the embarrassing questions by observing that if there had been no economies forced on the CBC, the NFB and almost all other federal agencies, there would have been still the same open-handed government spending, and another deficit instead of the expected $500 million surplus.

It can not be that Lester Pearson does not care — about babies, children and even their fathers' liking for beer — more likely it is that he cares more about the preservation of the government "empire" he labored so long to build which now is being "damaged," as he sees it, by Pierre Trudeau.

As Prime Minister, when he was doing his biggest spending, Pearson added an average 1,000 people monthly to federal staff.

And in his 17 years as External Minister and finally Prime Minister, he ran the diplomatic budget from $11 million to better than $75 million. When you learn to spend like that, it hurts, man, it really hurts to watch your self-designated successor save.



"Oil?"

Factor in Inflation

Federal Sales Tax Could Be Reduced

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

My job over many years involves continually pricing goods at the retail level (hardware). It seems to me that one big bete noire in the inflation picture in Canada is our 12 per cent federal general sales tax. Twelve per cent is a very big tax at any time. It has become much more seriously so since basic costs have gone so high, and since provincial sales taxes have been superimposed on it. This tax was first levied in 1920 at one percent on sales by manufacturers, wholesalers and importers. It is included in the retailer's cost and becomes a "hidden" tax when paid by the consumer. By 1967 it had risen to 12 per cent (11 percent on building materials). Certain goods are exempt such as foodstuffs, drugs, electricity, fuels, the products of farms, forests, mines and fisheries, equipment used in farming and fishing and production machinery. But it is applied to all kinds of necessities such as a broom, a hotplate or a pair of shoes. Thus it tends to come too often, as do all sales taxes, directly out of the pockets of the poor.

This tax is a very important source of revenue for the federal government as a comparison of the following figures will show. According to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the three main sources of revenue for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1969, were as follows: Personal Income Tax, $3,422. millions; Corporation tax $2,030. millions; Federal general sales tax $1,527. millions. Total net general revenue from all sources, $12,489. millions.

Three per cent of the federal general sales tax is used for old age security. I firmly believe that the remaining 9 per cent should be slowly but surely reduced. When I suggested this to my brothers, they, being businessmen, both immediately countered with "Where will the money come from?" "Where will Canada, with her unique and costly development needs, get the money to carry out these projects?" They do believe that the tax on building materials adds too much to construction costs.

My answer is that government spending at this time should be limit I to those things which are truly vital to the needs of the people and the health of the economy. And this most certainly goes for governments at all levels.

For the past fiscal year Canada spent for defence $1,700. millions. It is very gratifying to note that spending in this field is to be reduced. I know that defence is very necessary but I do not believe that Canada, or any other country, can stand up to exorbitant defence costs year in and year out so I trust that in this field especially government spending may continue to be reduced.

'Cox's Bazar'—Shades of The British and Portuguese And The Sea on A Timeless Shore

Pakistan Affairs

On Jan. 2, in this town with an odd name, was commissioned the first radar storm warning station. Cox's Bazar is a pleasure resort with one of the world's great beaches and a hinterland crowded with wild life.

The recorded history of this area goes back to the time of the Moghals, when the ill-fated Shah Shuja passed through the southern hilly region of what is now Chittagong District, to seek asylum with the Arakan Kings across the border.

The scion of the great Moghal house was so enchanted by the natural beauty around him that he ordered the thousand palanquins carrying the ladies of his court to stop. His cavalcade camped in the hills for days before continuing its march. The area where he camped is still called Dulaharazara, a corruption of Hazar Dolli (a thousand palanquins).

The trail which Shah Shuja followed was used by others during subsequent eras. When the Moghals withdrew, the land was ruled and pillaged in turn by the Tripuras and the Arakanese. Then came the Portuguese and finally, the British, who secured a firm foothold in the southern hills.

In 1798, the British Government sent a Captain Cox to settle Buddhist immigrants from Burma in this region. Thus came into being a new colony called Cox's Bazar.

The inhabitants of this area are a colorful people — a mixture of Muslims, Hindus, and Buddhist immigrants of Burma-Arakanese origin.

Although the Muslims form the major portion of the population, the Buddhist tribal people, known as Moghs, are an important section of the population. They are a shy, unassuming people, taking an obvious pride in their own culture and traditional values.

The Mogh women who perform most of the domestic and outdoor tasks, are expert weavers and make colorful traditional design. The Mogh Kayangs (ancient Buddhist temples) at Cox's Bazar, Ramu, Teknaf and Nilo house priceless treasures and rare relics.

Cox's Bazar is easily reached by air, road and sea. There are also regular bus-services from Chittagong. This journey, by an all-weather metalled road, through lush plains, green hills and cool forests. In winter, the journey can be done by speedboat or launch.

Cox's Bazar has one of the world's longest stretch of beach sloping gently into the blue sea. At low tide, a jeep can drive for over two hours and not come to the end of the beach with its light yellow sand. Out in the bay, can be seen the fishing boats with their sails unfurled against the blue sky and the darker blue sea.

A trip by jeep to Teknaf at dawn, is a rare experience. The range of hills from Teknaf to Cox's Bazar hugs the sea for about 12 miles and then runs parallel to the beach for another 60 miles. As the winter sun rises above the hilltops, the beaches at Himchari, Inani, and other places are transformed into a colorful panorama.

The Inani Beach is more than 600 feet wide at high tide, and nearly 1,000 feet at low tide. Himchari, a beautiful picnic spot, is a continuation of the same beach with a background of palms and bamboos.

Totem Poll at Captain Cook Ceremonial 'Down Under'

Ottawa Journal

It was all for the best that the ceremonial associated with the gift of a totem pole to New Zealand should have been reported in the main by R. M. Macdonnell, our high commissioner, a lively correspondent.

The gift honors the bicentenary of Captain Cook's first landing in 1769. The first headland the navigator sighted is known to New Zealanders as Young Nick's Head, in honor of the ship's boy called Nick who told Cook land was in sight.

Anyway, the Canadian pole was installed at a town called Gisborne and Macdonnell went out to present the gift to Prime Minister Holyoake. Everyone's disdain of the weather would have done Cook proud. An informal part of Macdonnell's report to Ottawa said:

"Earlier in the day, the Governor-General unveiled a statue of Captain Cook at the top of a hill, the total elapsed time for the ceremony being three minutes, while the official party leaned against the wind to avoid being blown over a cliff. A cabinet minister informed me that Captain Cook had already unveiled himself twice before the ceremony started. As the Governor-General hastily cut a ribbon to make it official, his umbrella blew inside out, providing one of the best news photos of the entire Cook bicentennial celebrations. At least we can claim that no official umbrella blew inside out at the Canadian presentation.

"Considering the weather, there was a surprisingly large crowd of well-wishers on hand . . . which can only indicate goodwill towards Canada. Apart from those in official positions, there was quite a turnout of the general public, slopping through puddles to get a close look at the proceedings. I addressed them as friends, noting that they must be friends to have come out on such a day . . ."

Control Is Questioned

Rewriting Criminal Code First Task of Law Reform Body

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons, in an unusual show of geniality, looked kindly Monday on Justice Minister John Turner and his bill to set up a permanent law reform commission.

Opposition party spokesmen expressed general approval of the proposal, which received second reading and went to a committee for further study, but tempered their praise with warnings that Mr. Turner may have retained too much control over the commission.

Mr. Turner said the first task of the commission would be a complete rewriting of the Criminal Code.

It would also be charged with promoting greather similarity between rules of evidence under the civil law of Quebec and those under common law in the rest of Canada.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood), also lawyer, said he and his party strongly support the bill. But he hoped young members could be found to serve on it.

The commission is to be made up of a chairman, vice-chairman, two full-time and two part-time members.

Also given second reading Monday was a bill exempting shipping conferences from certain anti-trust laws under the Combines Investigation Act.

The bill was drafted as a result of 1965 recommendations by the restrictive trade practices commission.

It says anti-trust laws should not be used against conferences of shipping companies over the rates to be charged or the division of responsibilities to the groups' customers.

Shipping conferences involve groups of companies that adhere to certain rates and tariffs in particular marine areas.

Mr. Brewin said the law reform commission should include persons other than lawyers.

The bill stipulates that the chairman, vice-chairman, at least one full-time and one part-time member would have to have a minimum of 10 years experience as a lawyer or judge.

This could tend to give the commission a very conservative outlook, Mr. Brewin said.

Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan), a former attorney-general of Prince Edward Island, said Mr. Turner and the government have to be congratulated for proposing the commission but Mr. Turner should spare no effort to make certain it is independent.

Charles-Arthur Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval) said the commission would have to go to the grass-roots level to see what "the people think about justice."

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) said a permanent commission is an excellent idea but it should involve people with widely different viewpoints.

Mr. Turner said the commission would table its proposed program of study in the Commons as well as any conclusions it reaches. But he would have the right to instruct it to study any area he thought necessary.

Quebec Readies For Election Later This Year

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A bundle of pre-election goodies is expected to be announced today when Quebec joins two other provinces in opening its legislature session.

The three bring to eight the number of provincial law-making bodies sitting across Canada.

The Quebec, New Brunswick and Ontario houses join Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Quebec's political parties are preparing for a general election later this year. Expected announcements in the speech opening the national assembly include legislation to link Quebec to the national medical care insurance program, to provide legal aid and to protect the consumer.

Left over from last session is a bill which would authorize Quebec to hold a referendum on any subject, and another which would unify school boards on Montreal Island, now divided along religious lines.

New Brunswick is expected to announce legislation changing its corrections policy, to shift correctional emphasis from imprisonment to rehabilitation.

Ontario's throne speech may dwell on a hold-the-line theme, including proposals that will not cost much. Pollution, inflation and reform bills are expected to highlight the Ontario session, with a provincial election expected in 1971.

In other legislatures Monday:

St. John's, Nfld.—Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government easily survived a motion of non confidence by a vote of 21 to 8.

Halifax—Premier G. I. Smith reviewed his government's over-all record and rejected Liberal criticism as "altogether unfounded." He said all indications were that the province would end the year with a favorable balance on current account.

Regina—Frank Meakes (NDP—Touchwood) accused the Liberal Saskatchewan government of ignoring the plight of farmers and putting forward programs that would drive them deeper into debt. He said the program on farm diversification caters to large producers at the expense of smaller operators.

Edmonton—Public Works Minister Albert Ludwig said that if all the promises made by Alberta's Progressive Conservatives were implemented it would cost taxpayers an extra $500,000,000 on the basis of the budget proposed by the Social Credit government for the coming year. He said he had kept a record of the PC promises.

Victoria—A bill designed to discourage distribution of unsolicited credit cards and other goods was given first reading in the British Columbia legislature. The bill would amend the Consumer Protection Act and relieve a person of legal obligation in connection with unsolicited cards and goods.

Election Prelude

Ontario Spending Restraint To Usher in Low Key Year

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature opens today with the throne speech expected to indicate the Conservative government's concern with inflation and pollution.

Premier John Robarts already has promised an anti-inflationary budget with no tax increases.

Otherwise, the government's program is expected to be a low-key advance in such areas as consumer protection, electoral reform, labor legislation and regional development, both economic and political.

Leaders of the opposition Liberal and New Democratic parties have indicated they will criticize the government on the gut issues of taxes, the cost of living and housing.

Major confrontations during the third session of the 28th legislature are expected to arise over the issues of housing, medical health insurance and extension of provincial aid to separate schools.

Both opposition parties recently re-shuffled their shadow cabinets in preparation for a session they believe will be the last before a provincial election, possibly in the spring of 1971 although Mr. Robarts' present mandate extends into 1972.

The opposition believe they have a new campaign weapon: a feeling among voters that the Conservatives, after 23 years, have been in power too long. The NDP notes its victory in the Middlesex South byelection last year as a reflection of this trend.

Premier Robarts, with 68 seats in the 117-member house as against 27 for the Liberals, 21 for the NDP and one independent, lately has been charged by the opposition with attacking the federal government as a means of hiding his mistakes in Ontario.

Mr. Robarts has said he will go along with the decision at last week's federal-provincial conference to exercise restraint in spending.

There will be no increase in provincial prices and fees on such items as licence plates and liquor "for the moment" and although the government "won't cut services . . . they are going to have to cost less money."

In the last budget, brought down March 4, Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton called for a surplus of $2,000,000 above estimated expenditures of $2,996,000,000. This surplus still is expected to be achieved.

But even with a cut in departmental spending of $350,000,000, which Mr. MacNaughton said is a "reasonable estimate" of what is necessary to balance the budget, spending probably will increase by $349,000,000 this year.

Premier Robarts has indicated Ontario is considering asking Ottawa for permission to opt out of shared-cost programs, which he has said are chiefly responsible for increases in provincial expenditures.

Some of the fire of the pollution issue has been removed by the federal announcement that detergent makers must limit the amount of phosphates in their products within six months, but several moves likely will be made in this area.

Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr has said legislation is being prepared to insure the "proper dumping" of industrial wastes, particularly that containing oils and chemicals; and that four government departments will team up to track down polluters of recreational waterways.

The government so far has adopted a wait-and-see attitude toward the birth pangs of the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan which went into effect last Oct. 1.

OHSIP has been criticized by both the public and doctors because it pays only 90 per cent of the Ontario Medical Association fee schedule and there has been some delay in payments.

Lieut.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald will read the speech from the throne, and the proceedings, expected to start at 3 p.m., will be televised live by the CBC.

Another hot issue in the new session could be that of aid to separate schools, now provided only through Grade 10. Both the Liberals and the NDP have come out in favor of extending aid through Grade 13, but Mr. Robarts has been notably cool to the proposal.

Closed Sessions Are Attacked

HALIFAX (CP) — Federal and provincial government civil servants came under attack Monday night prior to the close of the first day of study of the potential growth of the Halifax-Dartmouth area.

The government officials were placed under fire during the close of the day's discussions after a 12-member panel of international specialists on urban development completed a series of meetings with federal, provincial and municipal officials.

The week-long series of talks was organized by the Nova Scotia voluntary planning board, a group of financial and business leaders representing private industry, to devise ways of stimulating the region's development.

The organizers of the unique study, being conducted by experts from the United States, Britain and Canada, were criticized by members of the panel for keeping the news media and the public from hearing most of the discussions with government servants.

T. J. Scanlon, director of the school of journalism at Carleton university, described the organizers' decision to close the meetings as ridiculous.

RELATES BAN

Benjamin H. Higgins, an economic specialist in urban planning at the University of Montreal, told the public meeting of the request by a provincial government official to make sure the press was outside the room before he made his statement.

The official, said Mr. Higgins, then told the session that the Nova Scotia government was having financial difficulties and would either have to raise taxes or reduce its spending program.

Martin Rein of the centre for environmental studies in London said he thought the government officials had a good reason to keep the meeting closed to the public.

"They didn't have the information at their finger tips and they didn't want anyone to find out," he said. "The knowledge by the civil servants increased as you went down from the federal civil servants."

At that point, A. Russel Harrington, chairman of the sponsoring board and of the urban development study, explained that it had been difficult to get the co-operation of the government authorities in the study.

"I had a little bit of difficulty convincing government authorities," said the president of the Nova Scotia Light and Power Co. Ltd.

"Perhaps they were a bit worried they might be embarrassed. Some people just won't meet with you if the press is there. We wanted the panel to see things as they are."

Transatlantic Fares Lowered

MONTREAL (CP) — New low transatlantic airline fares worked out at a series of meetings of the International Air Transport Association late last year will become effective March 1—subject to approval by the governments involved.

The new rates were agreed to at a meeting in Caracas, Venezuela, with the negotiations winding up Dec. 9 and resulting in what an IATA official described as some of the lowest fares ever offered to the public.

The IATA meetings were called after a decision by Alitalia to introduce a new low 22-day minimum-stay fare on its Italian-North American routes. The Alitalia move in effect pulled the rug from under transatlantic flight rates.

The new fares are applicable under the Caracas agreement which will remain in effect from March 1, 1970, until March 31, 1971.

A worldwide passenger traffic conference will be held in Honolulu next fall, aimed at creating a new simplified fares structure corresponding to the requirements of the market and sound airline economy.

The basic fares agreement in Caracas included a re-adoption of fares and service agreed to earlier in 1969 at an IATA conference in Dallas, Tex.

In addition, the airlines extended the 14-to-21 day excursion fare to 28 days in most areas with no change in price.

A new 29-to-45 day excursion fare was also introduced—as was a new lower fare for groups of 80 passengers. However, some limitations on stopover privileges accompanied the lower levels of the new fares.

The group fare for 80 passengers applied only to persons who are members of social clubs and other organizations with a similar common affinity.

An Air Canada spokesman said the airline tried without success to remove the affinity clause from the agreement so that anyone could go to an agent and have the agent make up the groups.

Under the 29-to-45 day excursion plan, return cost of travel in the off season between Montreal and London is $233 (U.S.); Winnipeg and London $297; Vancouver and London $373; and New York and London $250.

Under the 80-passenger group rates, individual return tickets between Montreal and London cost $153, while the fare between Vancouver and London is $251.

No Change in NATO Trudeau's Office Says

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau in an interview with Le Monde of Paris made no suggestion of any change in Canadian policy toward NATO, his office said Monday in a statement.

The statement was issued by his office in response to a number of queries about a report of the interview carried by a news agency Friday.

In the report of the interview Mr. Trudeau was quoted as saying that Canada and France "have taken or are about to take similar actions, including withdrawal from NATO's military command structure. . . ."

A transcript of the interview from the prime minister's office quotes the prime minister as saying: "And in one sense, but for other reasons, I believe that our slight withdrawal from NATO corresponds somewhat with certain moves which France made in the past."

Canada is in the process of reducing its manpower contribution to NATO. France has withdrawn all its forces.

Parents Anonymous Group Formed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dan Giroday knows drugs can kill and feels Parents Anonymous is one means of combatting the problem.

It was LSD which contributed to the death of his 18-year-old son, Dennis, on Oct. 18 last year and this tragic incident led Mr. Giroday and a small group of concerned parents to organize Parents Anonymous.

Based on the same principle as Alcoholics Anonymous, the members meet together on an informal basis to help educate themselves on the drug problem and prevent the spread of drug use in society.

"There now are about 100 people, divided into three cells, who belong to the group," Mr. Giroday said in a recent interview. "These are not just parents whose kids are on drugs but others who are interested in combatting the drug problem."

He said the main objective of Parents Anonymous is to get into the schools and, by education and control, cut down the increasing use of drugs by the students.

Mr. Giroday referred to drug use as a "disease," which he said must be located, isolated and then cured. He said it is time parents realized the seriousness of the situation among the young people of today.

"It is one of the greatest problems that society has ever faced, in my opinion, and it is threatening to destroy the minds and weaken the moral fibre of our youth."

He said he was not aware that his son, who was in his first year at University of British Columbia, was on drugs, and he feels this is part of the problem with other parents—they don't know what is happening to their children.

Before his son's death in a plunge from an apartment block, his family never mentioned drugs, but he said parents should talk about the drug situation.

"I think it is better to put the cards on the table. Parents should not be afraid to come right out and ask their kids if they are taking drugs."

He said this is one of the purposes of Parents Anonymous: to arm interested parents with sufficient knowledge about drugs that they can talk about them to their children with some intelligence.

"LSD is catching up to young people. Being an older generation we know about alcohol and fast driving, but perhaps parents, generally, haven't an awareness of the seriousness of this situation."

Another feature of Parents Anonymous was that it enabled parents whose child was taking drugs to talk to other parents in the same predicament. They could learn from one another.

"Above all, if any lesson is to be learned from the tragedy that took my son, I hope it is that people will realize LSD can kill."

He said anyone petitioning for any reduction in the legal penalties for possessing LSD "is not close to the situation."

He also gets irate with politicians who advocate the legalization of marijuana, or at best seem casual about such a thing happening.

"If it ever comes to the stage where we legalize marijuana, we are going to have a real sick society," he said.

To prevent this happening, Mr. Giroday and the other members of Parents Anonymous write letters to members of Parliament and encourage other parents to do so.

Mr. Giroday, driven by the memory of his dead son, feels society is drug-oriented, and the only way to fight the spread of the "disease" is for parents and interested individuals to unite and create a combat force.

He admits that he doesn't know all the answers, and that Parents Anonymous may not be the solution. But it was a start.

"If somebody comes along with a better idea, I will be the first to jump on the bandwagon," Mr. Giroday said. "But right now Parents Anonymous gets my vote."

Phil Flagler Speaks at Bay of Quinte Chapter, National Secretaries Assoc. Meet

The Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries Association held their February meeting at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville on Feb. 17.

Our guest speaker, introduced by Kathy Ellis, was Phil Flagler, farm director and salesman of CJBQ. Corresponding to our "Program of the Year - CNSA Calling" Mr. Flagler spoke on his over 25 years of experiences in radio broadcasting and then presented a film on the 50th anniversary of private broadcasting in radio. Some interesting facts were that radio began in 1919, and anyone who could play or sing was invited to perform. Microphones were disguised to overcome mic fright. Programs over the years such as Happy Gang, Tom McNeil and His Breakfast Club, Lone Ranger and Tonto, The Green Hornet, Benny Goodman and the Charles Lindberg Flight from New York to Paris non stop, brought back memories to some chapter members.

The first half of our "Program of the Year" was celebrated at Loyalist College on Feb. 2 where an exciting, informative and humorous evening was spent learning what goes on behind the scenes of a TV show. Loyalist College technicians allowed us to produce a program, where all members participated in directing, operating the sound and running cameras to put together two 10 minute programs of panelists discussing "The Future Secretary'.

Mrs. Marlene Phillips thanked Mr. Flagler for a most memorable presentation.

The vice - president Mrs. Phyllis Graham, chaired the business session. Two guests were introduced, Mrs. Fran Moon of Brooke Bond, Belleville and Miss Brenda Karachun of Quaker Oats, Waffle Plant in Trenton.

Mrs. Marj Cross led in a quickie quiz of radio statistics. Mrs. Gabrielle Watkins announced Mrs. Lorraine Stanley would serve on the education committee. Two new applications for membership were received. Secretaries' workshop to be held on Sunday afternoon on April 19 was discussed. The nominating committee for 1970 will be Mrs. Mary Magee, chairman, with members Mrs. Marlene Phillips and Mrs. Kathy Ellis. It was announced the Kingston Chapter was holding a fashion show on March 4. Congratulations to Mrs. Marg Kleinstuber who has applied for her CPS and has been approved. The ways and means committee will hold a flea market in late March. The meeting adjourned.

Greek Ladies' Auxiliary Sponsors Costume Party

A custom widely celebrated throughout Greece took place at Club Canara on Saturday evening when the Greek Ladies' Auxiliary of Belleville held a costume party for the Greek community and other interested Bellevillians.

The celebration known in Greece as apokries is the word for carnival, and customs for this event vary from one district to another, but all have the same purpose — to make all happy and enjoy themselves.

This was the first time the Greek community has held an apokries night in Belleville and approximately 70 persons were in attendance. A special guest for the event was Mrs. H. Fast of the newly formed International Club of Belleville.

Various prizes were awarded including one to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Nicholas as the best dancers, and to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Zegouras for being the best dressed couple (wearing Chinese costumes).

The Greek Ladies' Auxiliary is an active group in the community and are now preparing for a bazaar which is to take place in the fall.

Ann Landers

Mother Opposes Ideas Of Catholic Church

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Mother in Massachusetties," who said she is ashamed of you for speaking out in behalf of the liberalization of our abortion laws. She called it an insult to 46 million Catholics in this country who believe abortion is murder.

ANN LANDERS

Make that figure 45,999,998, please. My husband and I are Catholics and we don't go along with her. The Church is changing and it's about time. My husband and I have four children and we want more. But we insist on the right to make that decision ourselves.

We love our church and find great strength and solace there but we refuse to blindly follow a dogma designed hundreds of years ago when population growth was necessary. The world needed people then, but in 1970 the central problem is the population explosion.

Many Catholic leaders who opposed birth control have changed their position. I predict the same for abortion. Massachusetts Mother does not speak for all Catholics. — ENLIGHTENED.

DEAR ENLIGHTENED: The figure is lower than 45,999,998 — and I have several thousand letters to prove it. One of the best letters came from Dr. Bernard J. Ransil, a Catholic scientist-physician who teaches at Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Ransil, in his book "Abortion," suggests that Church teaching is handicapped by its cloudy understanding of human reproduction. He argues that St. Thomas Aquinas proposed a concept of the beginning of the soul that would allow a more permissive view of abortion today. Some eminent Catholic theologians are in disagreement as to when life begins. Writing on the nature of the human soul, in Summa Contra Gentiles, Thomas teaches that a life principle is present during the early months of pregnancy. But it is not the human soul as understood in terms of theology. The latter is infused later, Thomas says, at a time when the fetus has developed to the point that it can support the activities of a human soul. This would mean some time after the sixth month.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Who decides when to eat, when to get up and when to go to bed? The guests or the hosts? My in-laws spent four days with us and before they left my husband told them that the next time they come they'll have to stay in a hotel.

This is what happened. They never got up before 10:30. We were up with our children at 7:30. This meant I had to fix a second breakfast at 11:00 a.m. Naturally they weren't ready for lunch at noon so I had to fix a second lunch at 3:00. This meant they couldn't eat dinner with us at 6:00, so I had to fix a second dinner at 8:00.

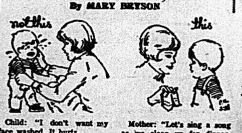
I was exhausted cooking six meals a day and doing dishes around the clock. This is why my husband told them that next time they'll have to stay in a hotel. Now they are mad. Was it worth a family breakup? — INDIANAPOLIS.

DEAR IN: No. Your mother-in-law could have fixed her own breakfast and lunch and you and your husband could fed the kids at 6:00 and waited until 8:00 and eaten with his parents.

Since they stayed only four days you could have been more gracious. After all, they are his parents and I wouldn't be surprised if they put themselves out for him on more than one occasion. Mend the quarrel and pass the peace pipe.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Child: "I don't want my face washed. It hurts.

Mother: "Stop making such a fuss about being cleaned up. If you didn't squirm so, I wouldn't have to wash so hard."

Mother: "Let's sing a song as we clean up for dinner. This is the way we wash our face, wash our face, wash our face - - - "

Child: "Now let's sing 'This is the way we dry our face'."

Put yourself in a 3-year-old's shoes and you'll know how unpleasant it is to have your face scrubbed as you struggle to be free. A little ingenious distraction, however, can help you manoeuvre a child through the necessary routines of a day with a minimum of friction.

Used Greeting Cards Aid in Financing Mission Centre

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have a thank-you letter from Saw Lader, Director of Christian Audio Visual Centre, 82nd Street, Mandalay, Burma, for Christmas cards I sent them last Christmas. I obtained the address from your column.

Mr. Lader says they remodel the cards, and sell them to finance the radio and audio - visual work. Some beautiful ones are made up into calendars and many are sent to far - away Christian churches in remote parts of Burma, for sale at a very moderate price.

He also says: "We national Christians are now on our own, shouldering all responsibilities in mission work. It is made so much lighter and pleasanter with prayers and material help from our kind friends over the seas". — Kingston Reader.

Dear Reader: I know that Canadians will be glad to respond. The cards should be put in plastic bags and tied securely, and marked "Used Christmas Cards, No Value."

• • •

Dear Doris: It just made my blood boil when I read the letter from Just Pat in your column stating that said column is wasteful and uninteresting. She must be a very ignorant and selfish woman.

Doris, I hope the small minority of crank letters like the one from Just Pat will not discourage your continuing to help so very many people.

I could tell Just Pat there are already too many columns for recipes and poems.

I have a question: How do you keep your blood pressure from rising when you receive a letter like that?

Keep up the good work, Doris. You're tops in my book. — Indignant.

Dear Indignant: I like your attitude! But if I am in this business of helping people to understand other people, I'd take a dim view of me blowing my top. Wouldn't you, now?

Just the same, your kind of message is the kind that keeps me turning out the column.

• • •

Dear Doris: How can I trace someone in another province?

Is it possible for an individual to write to some finance companies in the province and will they send such information as an address to you? If this could be done it would be so much cheaper than getting someone to trace him. — A Reader.

Dear Reader: The Salvation Army has a missing persons bureau. In desertion and non-support cases the police or a child care agency may be able to help.

No reputable finance company would give out a client's address for this or any other purpose.

Grandma's Madeira Cake Still One of Mary's Favorites

By MARY MOORE

When I was 11 years old my grandparents' shoe store was on my way home from school. If the store was not crowded I would drop in. Grandma would say "Madeira cake, Mary dear?" knowing perfectly well why I was standing there.

The memory of that first bite of cake still lingers with me. We never got a whiff of the Madeira it traditionally accompanies — nor did Grandmother I am quite sure. Yesterday I tried the nearly impossible — to reproduce it and I think I did.

For such a beauty it is surprisingly easy to make and since it requires only two eggs you could make one right now!

MARY'S MADEIRA CAKE

(2 eggs)

2 cups sifted cake flour — divided
¾ cup shortening (half butter and half shortening is better—room temperature)
2 large eggs
1 cup sugar
2 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. lemon extract (if artificial use 1 tsp.)
½ cup milk

Into beater bowl measure shortening (or shortening and butter) and 1 cup of the sifted cake flour. Beat until creamy. Then add eggs and sugar and beat until very light. Sift the remaining 1 cup sifted cake flour with the baking powder and salt and fold in, alternately, with the milk nad lemon extract until smoothly blended.

Turn into buttered pan. I used regulation size angel food pan because I wanted outside surfaces to be a little crusty like Grandma's Madeira Cakes were. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 35 min. but this cake may be baked in a buttered loaf pan, when it requires longer baking. Do not fret — it separates from sides of pan about 1-16th of an inch when it is done.

Bring this cake and yourself up to date by making it now.

NOTE: Recently a reader asked for a mock pound cake recipe. I think this may be close to what she is seeking.

QUINTE MEDICAL SECRETARIES

The Quinte Medical Secretaries held their monthly meeting in Education Hall on Wednesday, Feb. 11.

The members were well rewarded for braving the cold, snowy, night in having Miss Diana Savage, audiologist at O.S.D., speak to them.

One could not help but feel her great desire to help these handicapped children and her enthusiasm in the work as she related the procedure of testing for degree and type of deafness and then placing these children according to their academic and social requirements.

Young people looking for challenging and rewarding careers would do well to look into this possibility as there is need for specialized training in this field.

Miss Savage was thanked by Mrs. Beth Cunningham and a social cup of coffee followed.

ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE LADIES AUXILIARY

The Army, Navy and Air Force Ladies' Auxiliary held their monthly meeting in the Tartan Lounge of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201.

The meeting was called to order by the newly elected president, K. Gurnoak with a good attendance. All committees reported. Mary Northey, 1st vice - president gave a long list of dates for banquets, and weddings, in the coming month. The president and three other delegates and two visitors attended a provincial quarterly meeting held in London in January.

As this is the year the convention will be held in Vancouver in September, plans have to be made early. The official delegate will be the president.

The evening draws were won by B. Grass and C. Hales. Lunch was served by M. Northey, D. Tapp and C. Noland.

Jumped For Life

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — "Get out of your car," patrolman Robert H. Auld Jr. shouted over a bullhorn after Edna R. Johnson's car stalled on the railroad tracks. Mrs. Johnson, 62, jumped out quickly and ran over to give the patrolman a big hug. For good reason. A Southern Pacific Co. commuter train had been approaching and smashed the car to pieces seconds after she jumped out.

Milestone for Rotary

Charter president Bill House of Trenton Rotary Club cuts the club's 48th anniversary cake last night at the Dutch Mill Inn. Sixteen past presidents, including Mr. House, now 86, were present at the event marking the 65th anniversary of Rotary International and the 48th anniversary of the Trenton Club.

Club Role Commended

TRENTON — Charter President William House stole the show with his antics Monday night at the Trenton Rotary Club's 48th past presidents banquet at the Dutch Mill Inn.

Mr. House, 86, was full of spirit and humor, but he also had a serious message to convey: "When you Rotarians are asked to do something, do it willingly and do it the best you can."

Trenton's charter president lauded the 15 other past presidents at the tables of honor when he said: "It was the past presidents who did much to make our club the best Rotary Club in Ontario."

Each of the past presidents in the audience was called upon to make a few brief remarks on his year in office and they stressed the important role the Rotary Club has played in community development.

Among the Rotary community projects the past presidents recalled were the furnishing of the first operating room at Trenton Memorial Hospital at a $25,000 cost, the swimming pool at Trenton High School, the Rotary Gate at the east end of Centennial Park and the contribution Rotarians have made over the years to crippled children.

Monday night's meeting marked the initial regular meeting at the Dutch Mill Inn, after 47 years of holding the weekly meetings at the Gilbert Hotel, except for a brief interlude during World War II.

Musical Stocktaking

Ranken Bushby notes a point as he adjudicates vocal ensemble at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church as Rotary Music Festival opened today. The concert artist is one of two front-rank British musicians judging festival entries.

Belleville Hums With Music

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The town is alive with the sounds of music this week — and the event is testing the talent of maybe 3,000 Belleville - area youngsters.

Releasing the musical outpour is the Rotary Music Festival which opened in Belleville today.

In only its second year, the festival already has blossomed into one of the biggest Quinte community events.

It's a success which enhances a basic festival ideal—fostering of youthful talent and music appreciation.

Community response to the event has been "outstanding," says Rotarian Robert Ord, festival committee executive director.

Participation, he estimates, is up 25 per cent from last year — when Rotary first undertook organization of the festival here.

Entries — ranging from solo performers to big choirs—total 425, compared to 340 in 1969.

This means some 3,000 total participants in the 1970 festival, says Mr. Ord.

In turn this means four days of competition at morning, noon and evening sessions at two festival locations — Belleville Collegiate and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The event ends Friday night with a Festival of Stars at Centennial Secondary School, featuring the most talented performers in the four-day program.

Key personalities in the demanding selection chore are the adjudicators — Ranken Bushby and Sidney Harrison, both front-ranking musicians from Britain.

Mr. Bushby is adjudicating the vocal section of the program at St. Andrew's. Mr. Harrison is judging instrumentalists at the collegiate.

Mr. Harrison — well-known for piano recitals and talks on BBC radio and television — is no stranger to Canada.

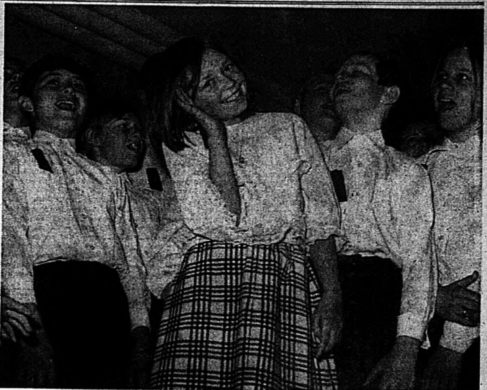
This is his fourth visit to Canada as a music adjudicator.

Mr. Bushby cautioned that a music festival was not merely a prize - winning event. It also gave participants an opportunity to judge their standards and receive an impartial critique from someone outside the community.

An extra day was added the festival this year when estimates showed entries would easily top 1969 totals, said Mr. Ord.

The added time also permits more time, if necessary, for adjudications, he said.

The festival, for which Rotary has budgeted $4,500 this year — has a prize list totalling $1,100 in cash awards and scholarships.



Bending A Musical Ear

Sheila McMurray, 13-year-old Harry J. Clarke school student bends an ear as school choir warms up before going onstage, at Rotary Music Festival in St. Andrew's Church. Choirs, soloists, instrumentalists have combined to give 1970 festival an estimated total of 3,000 participants.

The Art of Fine Shading

Adjudicator Sidney Harrison takes to the stage at Belleville Collegiate today to demonstrate technique to young students in Rotary Music Festival. The well-known British musician is one of two judges taking pains to hear and advise festival entrants.

Community Commended For Festival Sponsorship

Paying his first visit to Canada, music adjudicator Ranken Bushby yesterday praised Belleville Rotarians for their sponsorship of the local music festival.

"We do not have service clubs taking an active part in the support of the arts in Britain the way you are doing. I must say I take my hat off to you for coming forward as guarantors of the festival.

"This can only be to the good of the community and the neighborhood and Canada as a whole."

Once a student of mining engineering, Mr. Bushby gave up this career because of an injury. An amateur singer of note, he then took up music professionally.

In a world that was becoming more and more materialist, Mr. Bushby warned that the arts were lagging behind. He said there must be some culture in every community if society were to survive.

Support for the arts in Britain, said Mr. Bushby, was seldom manifested on a community basis. They were generally run by some ad hoc committee, starting from rock bottom, and finances necessarily had to be watched carefully. Local authorities were now taking an interest and funds were being raised by levies on citizens by local municipalities.

However, whatever the support, the arts would always lose money. There wasn't an opera or a ballet company in the world which paid its own way.

Mr. Bushby said a music festival was not merely for the winning of prizes but so entrants could judge their standards against others and receive an impartial report on their efforts by someone from outside the community.

Mr. Bushby's co - adjudicator is Sidney Harrison. No stranger to Canada — he first came here in 1947 — Mr. Harrison is well known for piano recitals and talks on BBC radio and television. His wife is a native of Winnipeg and her Christian name is the same as her husband's only it is Sydney with a 'y.'

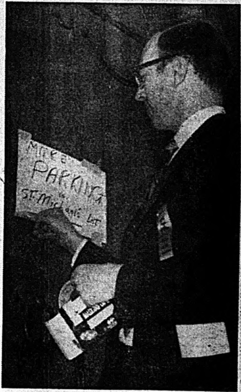
Mr. Harrison said adjudicators had been coming to Canada for 50 years and "in those early days we had a lot to learn." Gradually, as interest and competition quickened, and with the existence in Canada of some first - class teachers, standards have risen markedly, he said.

"Fifty years ago if anyone said a Canadian singer would sing opera in Germany, the idea would have been regarded as hilarious. Similarly a North American Negro singing on a European stage — yet that was the case, with a colored person singing in Wagner's Tannhauser."

Noting "there might be another Glenn Gould in our midst," Mr. Harrison urged young people to become a part of the music they learn — to the point of having records of the music concerned. He cited one "not very good class" which had been playing Mozart — not one of the competitors had a record of the composer.

Mr. Harrison urged personal concern in the young people taking part — in each boy and girl and in the music they are studying.

The festival opens today and continues until Friday. The Festival of Stars will be held at Centennial secondary school on Friday evening at 8 p.m.



Ecumenism, Too

An unconsciously ecumenical touch was loaned start of Rotary Musical Festival at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church this morning. Rev. Laurie Sutherland is posting notice advising participants if Presbyterian parking lot is full space has been made available up the road — at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church.

New Firm Has Office In Trenton

TRENTON — A Windsor-based architectural firm has chosen Trenton as the site of its first branch office.

Citing a stable increase in Trenton's economy as the reason for locating here, William J. Hillicker, B. Arch, MRAIC announced today that his firm is situated on Dundas St. West.

Depending on the amount of work in the Quinte area, the firm hopes to employ 8 - 10 people at its Trenton branch.

The firm maintains a general practice, but concentrates on institutional architecture, a field in which government funds, often in the form of grants, comprise a goodly percentage of the total expenditure.

Quinte Food Co-operative Now Has Ontario Charter

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
(Staff Reporter)

TRENTON — The presentation of an Ontario government charter Feb. 9, 1970, to Quinte Consumer Co-operative was the fruition of a year's work by some four-score Quinte-area residents.

With the right to operate a co-operative granted, the grant is now conducting a membership drive and seeking a store site in Trenton.

Secretary-treasurer Douglas Pettigrew expressed the group's common sentiment in explaining the reason for the formation of the co-operative: "I'm concerned about the price I'm paying for groceries and I think perhaps other people are too."

The interest was sufficient that 82 citizens attended the initial meeting a year ago and formed a board of directors.

After some study, the Quinte-area group rejected the usual type of co-operative which sells products to the public then pays dividends to its members. The local group felt that their purpose would not be fulfilled because prices would only be equal to that of the customary outlets.

Instead they followed the footsteps of a group of Ottawa citizens who, five years ago,— in an attempt to lower their grocery bills — formed a direct-charge co-operative.

Citizens in other areas have followed suit and there are currently eight direct-charge grocery co-operatives across the province, including stores in both Oshawa and Peteborough.

Based on a 20 per cent saving before the weekly operating charge of $2 is met, he estimated that a customer would need to purchase from $12 to $15 of groceries each week to break even with competitor's prices. Anything over this amount would mean a saving for the customer.

"In order to purchase capital equipment members must buy shares in the co-operative," the secretary-treasurer explained, "these shares are an investment but no dividend is paid. The shares may be refunded or sold to another person when the member wishes to leave the co-operative."

Expenses such as store rental, utilities, insurance and salaries are met by the weekly fee. Mr. Pettigrew said that 100 members were required to provide an initial $200 per week to cover expenses.

Present plans call for only one paid employee, a store manager, with the store being open one evening and one full day each week (tentatively Friday night and Saturday). A further step currently under consideration is the construction of a new store between Trenton and Belleville to serve the entire Quinte region.

President L. McSpadden and Doug Pettigrew are members of an 11-member board now steering the co - operative's policy, but Mr. Pettigrew stressed that the co-operative would be run in a democratic manner with a full membership meeting every three months.

Youngster Dies In Hospital

A Belleville - area youth, injured when he ran in front of a truck Friday died yesterday evening in Kingston General Hospital.

John Joseph Robertson, six, of RR7, Belleville was struck by a truck driven by Franklin Charles Allin, 36, of RR7, Belleville.

The child had been taken from the Belleville General Hospital to Kingston General Hospital with head injuries just following the incident.

Architects Seek to Change Housing Standard Concept

Maximum accommodation at a given cost rather than so - called standard accommodation at a minimum cost should be the goal when minimum housing standards are set out.

This is the feeling of the Ontario Association of Architects, members of which held their annual meeting in Toronto last week.

Belleville architect William Watson, reports there was considerable discussion took place at the convention about reversing the present situation of minimum standards by establishing a per unit cost which must not be exceeded but at the same time giving the architect freedom to produce the maximum housing environment.

Human environment as it pertains to housing was the major theme at the convention at which Paul Rudolph of New York, who has made an in-depth study of pre-fabricated housing, was the guest speaker.

The object of prefabricated housing is to reduce housing costs to the point where every person can be decently housed.

The current problem however, is that when minimum housing standards are set out these tend to become the maximum.

Architects would like to see maximum per unit costs established, but with the architect being given a free hand to provide the best possible planning.

Tax Date Extended

As result of a slight delay in the delivery of interim tax bills, city property owners are going to have three days' grace for payment of their first tax instalment.

The due date for the first instalment of the interim levy is Feb. 27, but this has been extended by city council to March 2.

According to the municipal act ratepayers are to have their tax bills a full 14 days before the first payment is due.

City treasurer Frank Morrell said the bills were mailed in plenty of time but as result of a pile-up at the post office and there being no delivery on Saturday, some of the bills were received late.

'Produce or Else' on Athletic Scholarships

Terry Wellesley

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

When former Ottawa Rough Rider Gary Schriedor, was asked recently to compare an American football rookie to one who played college ball in Canada, he replied, "It seems like the Americans are able to cope with the pressure better. Maybe it's because they seem to run their football teams as more of a business down there."

One Belleville resident qualified to comment on this is former Quinte and BCI gridiron star, Terry Wellesley, who is presently attending Tennessee Tech on a football scholarship. "Everything is based on 10 games", says Wellesley, "The coaches' jobs are in jeopardy and if you don't produce you get demoted to second string and then third and fourth until you lose your scholarship. Our league can only afford to give scholarships to first and second - string players."

The 21-year-old Belleville ex - patriot, was ineligible for football this year because of transferring from Missouri Southern to his present school. Despite being unable to participate in the actual games, he practised throughout the season with the Ohio Valley Conference squad and attended all the winter work - outs. "I think the winter work-outs are tougher than during the season because you go five days a week, whereas during the fall you only have heavy workouts three times weekly," claims Wellesley.

Training sessions in the winter months consist of weightlifting, running and agility drills that generally last about one and a half hours.

Terry, who has added about 20 pounds since leaving high school, while at the same time lowering his time in the hundred yard dash to the 9.8 neighborhood, has been given a four - week leave of absence to recover from a bout of mononucleosis, before beginning spring training.

The pre - summer workouts begin in May and last for three weeks, capped by an exhibition game against Western Carolina. Tennessee Tech, which finished its season at 5-5 last year, competes against such other small - college powers as Western Kentucky and Grantland Rice Bowl contestants, Eastern Tennessee.

At present the Belleville native is slated for the first - string tailback position in the offensive backfield, but adds, "I haven't proved anything yet. We've got six tailbacks listed so nobody is just going to walk into a starting position." Larry Schriber, the man he hopes to replace, was fourth in all-time college rushing last season.

Football teams at American colleges provide an important source of income for the athletic departments and so naturally are run as businesses.

"We average around 14,000 fans a game," says Wellesley, "and they're presently enlarging the stadium and adding astroturf. The football team's expenses run from $20,000 - $30,000 a year, so it has to be run like a big and complex business."

The ten - man coaching staff keeps close tabs on the football players who are strictly forbidden to smoke or drink, and face a midnight curfew. As Terry puts it "If you get caught breaking the rules they have you up for a six mile run at 5 a.m., so it just isn't worth it."

Scholarships, which include the costs of tuition, room and board and expenses, run for only one year at a time, so anyone dropping out of football or performing ineptly faces the loss of his scholarship for the remainder of his university career.

"It's a way of getting through college," claims Wellesley. "When you first hear about it, it seems unbelievable that you get all your expenses paid just for playing football, but when you're competing for practically all of the year you sometimes get sick of it. Some players feel that you put more into the university than you get out."

Is getting a free education worth the pressures and restrictions?

"That's a good question," says Terry.

Printers Plan To Press In Oshawa Opener

The Belleville Ellis Juniors plan to spring some basketball tactics on the Oshawa Crushmen tonight, in hopes of opening their Eastern Ontario semi-finals series, with a win in the Motor City.

"We're going to throw an all - out forechecking effort at them," says Floyd Crawford, "much like a full-court press in basketball." "It means a lot of skating for the boys, but if it works, we could pressure them into a lot of mistakes."

While being impressed with the pennant winning Crushmen, who he describes as a solid, aggressive hockey club, the Ellis mentor feels that his club will be up for the game. "They looked good in practice Sunday", says Crawford. "I think they're hungry."

Belleville's offence will get a boost with the return of centre John McConnell, who has been out of action with a broken nose. McConnell is a definite starter tonight and his return should boost the Printers' attack considerably.

The Junior B's are also counting on another strong effort from goalie Ron Jury, who was the main reason for a 4-2 Ellis win the last time the teams met. According to his coach, 'Ron looked real sharp in practice, Sunday. We have to get a top effort from him."

A bus will be leaving the Belleville Arena at 5.15 tonight with space available for interested spectators.

Quinte Midgets Caged

Centennial's league leading midget basketball squad closed their season on a winnote by taking a 68-58 win for the only Charger victory against Quinte Secondary School, while in the only other games played, Picton came out with three wins against Centre Hastings.

Vahe Parmekesigian's 29 points were tops for the midget Chargers in their win against Quinte, while McIntyre added 17 more. Bruce Nickle and Terry Collins each hooped 22 points for the Saints.

Number thirteen didn't prove to be any stumbling block for Quinte's juniors as they ran up their 13th victory in as many games, winning a 49-41 game. Barry Culkin paced the Quinte attack with 16 points, while Brooks, Easton and Nash all hit for half that total. Henderson with 15 points and Derry with eight were best for Centennial.

A fourth - quarter comeback attempt by the Centennial seniors fell just short as Quinte emerged with a 55-52 win after leading by 22 points after three quarters. Leo Baker (16), Tom Churchill (15) and Steve Ogden (13) were the top Saint scorers. Glen Mallory hit for 11 points for Centennial, with Johnston and Koch picking up nine apiece.

Picton bantams stopped Centre Hastings 42-18 to record their eighth win of the season as Rick Dance and Bob Hyatt each sank eight points. Price led Centre Hastings with 11 points.

Belleville, which has a win and a tie in their last two games with the Limestone City entry, will be looking for a win on enemy ice to give them the edge in their best four out of seven series. The second game is slated for the Belleville Memorial Arena at 8.30 p.m. Saturday night.

The key man for coach Davey Jones' crew will undoubtedly be netminder Steve Rexe, who shook a late season slump and has performed brilliantly in his last few games.

Season's ticket holders have until 6 p.m. Thursday to reserve seats for the Saturday contest in Belleville, at McKnight's variety store. Admission for the play-off matches will be $1.75.

Stinson's, Central Post Play-off Wins

Central Taxi took a 1-0 lead in their best of seven series after being tied by Aluminum Star in the opening game. Terry Casselman had a goal and an assist for Central, while teammates Doug Bolte and Tom Pierce each scored once. The winners picked up eight of the game's thirteen penalties including a major to Ron Morgan for his battle with Errol Johnston of Aluminum Star. Bob Chappel and Bill Rushlow scored for the Stars.

Future Olympic In Archery Course?

Twenty-one modern - day Robin Hoods picked up certificates at Ben Bleecker Auditorium last night, upon completion of an eight week archery course. The number represented three-fourths of the total enrollment in the program sponsored by the Belleville recreation committee, with instruction being provided by members of the Belleville archery club.

Archers of all ages enrolled in the course which placed special emphasis on safe - handling techniques. John Widdicks, one of the instructors, says, "We feel the program has been very successful and we're hoping to start another one very soon if a building is available."

Two-time Canadian archery champion, Carol Armstrong, who was present for the presentation of the certificates feels that it is a definite step towards producing future champions. "It's a terrific program", says Carol, "With archery on the Olympic schedule in '72, some of these kids are just the right age if they decide to take up the sport seriously."

Response was equally enthusiastic from the teen-agers who make up the bulk of the enrollment and the three or four adult members, most of whom plan to enroll in any further courses offered.

"We ran a course like this in the summer" says Widdicks, "but it was a hit-and-miss affair. We definitely need a building in Belleville since our club is too far out of the city for the kids to reach."

Mustangs Are In

The Mustangs edged Mulroney's 4-3 last night to win their best of five series 3-1 with one game tied. The winners now meet the Downtown Merchants in the final series, beginning next Monday.

Bob Mulvihill scored with six minutes remaining to snap a 3-3 tie and give the Mustangs their series victory. Paul Ruttan (2) and Don Irwin scored the other Mustang markers, with Jud Semark picking up a pair of assists.

Kevin Allen counted twice in a losing effort and Terry Casselman added the other goal for Mulroney's. Each team drew two penalties.

Baseball Stars Face 'Way Out' Contract Negotiations

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jim Maloney says Cincinnati Reds are "out of sight" in contract negotiations, St. Louis Cardinals find Richie Allen is out of touch, and New York Yankees claim Horace Clarke is out of line.

The three stars remained among the unsigned in a day of baseball activity Monday, including pitcher Juan Marichal agreeing to a San Francisco Giants pact. The ace righthonder—a 24-game winner last year—signed a $125,000 contract.

The Reds offered Maloney a $60,000 contract, on the condition he pitches at least 250 innings this year.

"The conditional contract is ridiculous . . . the number of innings they specify is out of sight," said the tall right-hander.

Only 14 National League pitchers went over the 250-inning mark last year. Maloney had arm troubles last season, pitching 179 innings while compiling a 12-5 record.

Allen, the gifted long-ball hitter acquired by St. Louis in a mid-winter swap, is still not in touch with Cardinal management.

The first baseman wants a $150,000 contract, which would make him the highest-paid player in the game. He drew about $80,000 last year with Philadelphia Phillies.

Second baseman Clarke has asked the Yankees for two salary figures—the lesser if the team helps his private business secure a $1,000,000 loan.

General manager Lee MacPhail said he would be happy to refer Clarke to a good bank, but retorted: "We're not in the banking business."

MacPhall also said that Clarke, who hit .285 and stole 33 bases in 1969, had been offered a hefty raise. His salary last year was estimated at $24,000.

Orr Continues Record Clip

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' all-star defenceman, continued his record-breaking clip in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race last week and Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks added another career mark.

Orr now has 93 points to lead all NHL point-getters, including 24 goals and 69 assists—both records for a defenceman. With 18 games left to play, Orr still has a chance to break team-mate Phil Esposito's record of 126 points set last season.

Meanwhile, Hull scored his 500th goal during his 861st regular-season game, enabling the left winger to reach the 500-goal mark in two fewer games than Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

Richard, the former Montreal Canadiens great, scored his 500th goal Oct. 19, 1957, in his 863rd game. He retired after the 1959-60 season with 544 goals, plus a record 82 in the playoffs.

Gordie Howe, the only other man to reach the 500-goal level, now has 752 regular-season goals in his 24th season with Detroit Red Wings. Howe's 500th goal came in his 1,045th game March 14, 1962.

Hull now has 49 points, 29 of which are goals.

Fans Unhappy With Baby Habs

MONTREAL (CP) — Fans attending Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series games of the Montreal Junior Canadiens at the Forum have been known to become extremely emotional at times.

When the Junior Canadiens bounced London Knights 8-2 Sunday night, the fans put on a display with a slight difference—contempt for the home side.

Throughout the evening, the crowd was becoming impatient with Floyd Curry, replacing Roger Bedard as coach of the defending Memorial Cup champions for the fifth consecutive game.

The 8,195 fans wanted to see their hero Allan Globensky on the ice and Curry would not send him.

Globensky, 18, is in his first year with Montreal after playing Junior B hockey in suburban St. Lambert. He is rated as one of the top fighters in the OHA and last Thursday he scored a decision over Steve Durbano, the tough Toronto Marlboros defenceman.

At 10:26 of the third period, the bubble burst. Pat Boutette of London scored to cut the Montreal lead to 8-2 and the crowd gave him a standing ovation, normally reserved for Junior Canadiens players.

Then they started tossing programs and assorted debris on the ice, chanting "On veut Globensky"—We want Globensky.

The game was delayed some 20 minutes and when play resumed Curry sent the people's choice onto the ice.

Kings, Leafs Test Trade-Winds

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Less than two weeks remain before the final buzzer sounds on National Hockey League player trades and at least two clubs have indicated they are trying to set up some last-minute swaps.

Los Angeles Kings, who last Friday announced trades with Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks involving 12 players, say they will attempt more trades before the league's March 7 season deadline for such transactions.

And in Toronto, Maple Leafs general manager Jim Gregory said he is "doing a lot of talking," but would not say with which clubs.

The East Division Leafs, like the Kings in the West, are in last place and face the task for rebuilding.

In New York meanwhile, the Rangers, East Division leaders, are having defensive problems although manager-coach Emile Francis claims to have the situation under control.

The Rangers lost all-star defenceman Jim Nielson with pulled knee ligaments two weeks ago and last Thursday rearguard Brad Park suffered a broken ankle in a game at Detroit.

Francis has had to call on rookies Allan Hamilton, Larry Brown and Mike Robitaille to fill the gaps.

Hamilton has been the extra fifth defenceman at New York all season while Brown was called up from the Buffalo farm club in the American Hockey League and Robitaille from Omaha in the Central League.

Rod Seiling and Arnie Brown, the remoining regulars on defence, are paired with Hamilton and Larry Brown while Robitaille is the fifth man.

Meanwhile Montreal Canadiens, the defending Stanley Cup champions, are still without left-winger John Ferguson and Monday announced that utility forward Christian Bordeleau will be lost for at least a month. Both players have fractured cheekbones.

Boston Bruins announced they have recalled veteran defenceman Gary Doak from Oklahoma City in the CHL along with goalie John Adams and right-winger Tom Webster.

McLain Gets Fan Support

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Denny McLain is elated over a drive by his fans in Detroit aimed at aiding the financially troubled Tiger pitcher.

"I just heard about it and don't know all the details yet," said the 25-year-old righthander who was indefinitely suspended from baseball Thursday.

"It sure makes a person feel great," he added during an interview at his modest but attractive Lakeland home. "It makes you appreciate Detroit fans and people generally.

"Usually, just because you're down, people want to put a nail in you and hit you."

The drive began shortly after baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended McLain pending an investigation concerning associations Denny allegedly had in 1967 with illegal bookmaking.

The campaign has been directed toward helping him out of financial hot water. He has had numerous troubles with everything from taxes to non-payment of bills on his rented house in suburban Detroit.

Argos Sign Dave Raimey

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts today announced the signing of halfback Dave Raimey who was knocked out of the Eastern Football Conference club's lineup with a knee injury late last season.

Argos' leading rusher, Raimey underwent an operation to repair the damaged knee ligaments soon after the Oct. 19 injury and has since been working out at a gymnasium.

Raimey's signing of a contract covering 1970 and 1971 means the Argos are assured of having their double-threat backfield in uniform for the next two years. Bill Symons, the other half of the powerful running combination, signed a three-year contract last season.

Shore Takes Trophy

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — Eddie Shore, one of hockey's all-time great defencemen and one of its most colorful and controversial characters, was named Monday to receive the 1970 Lester Patrick memorial trophy.

The award is for outstanding service to hockey in the United States and will be presented to the former Boston Bruins star at a dinner here March 9.

Shore, also a long-time owner of the Springfield team in the American Hockey League, played for Boston in the National league for 13 seasons, beginning in 1927. He was the NHL's most valuable player four times and made the all-star team seven times.

Stanley Cup Schedule

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League Stanley Cup quarter-final series is scheduled to get under way Wednesday April 8 and if all playoff games go the full limit, the two teams in the finals are faced with the latest finish in the league's history.

Under the playoff schedule released Monday, the finals could last until May 19, the latest penetration into spring by eight days for the league.

Subsequent quarter-final dates are Thursday April 9; Saturday April 11; Sunday April 12; Tuesday April 14; Thursday April 16 and Saturday April 18 or Sunday April 19.

Semi-final dates are Tuesday April 21; Thursday April 23; Saturday April 25; Sunday April 26; Tuesday April 28; Thursday April 30 and Saturday May 2 or Sunday May 3.

Final play swings into action Tuesday May 5 and follow-up dates are May 7 and 9 (or 10); May 12, 14 and 16 (or 17) and May 19.

Quebec Curlers Steal Show In Second Round

CALGARY (CP) — Saskatchewan and British Columbia took the lead after two rounds of the Canadian Women's curling championship Monday, but the crowd got the biggest kick from Quebec and its good luck charm Pierre.

"Pierre did it," Lee Tobin of Montreal said, patting the tiny stuffed seal. Her Quebec rink had just recovered from a fourth-end deficit of 8-0 in the second round to edge Ontario 10-9.

In tagging Kay O'Neill of Kingston with her first defeat, Quebec allowed B.C. and Saskatchewan to reach the top as the only unbeaten teams in the 10-rink, round-robin competition.

Doreen Schoenhals of Saskatoon, defending the championship Joyce McKee won for Saskatchewan last year, easily tripped Quebec 12-5 in the first round and Newfoundland 11-3 in the second.

B.C. kept pace, although Donna Clark of Burnaby had a little trouble in edging New Brunswick 10-7 in an extra end and defeating Manitoba 10-6.

Quebec, at 1-1, shared third place with Audrey Thorbourne's Nova Scotia rink from Liverpool and New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba and Newfoundland. Alberta and Prince Edward Island were at the bottom with 0-2 records.

In other first-round action, Glenda Buhr of Winnipeg skipped Manitoba to an 11-3 decision over Nova Scotia, Ontario edged Alberta, skipped by golf champion Betty Cole of Edmonton 7-6 and Violet Pike of Grand Falls led Newfoundland to a comeback 12-9 win over Prince Edward Island, skipped by Marie Toole of Charlottetown.

In the second round, Shirley Pilson of Bathurst picked up New Brunswick's first win, a 10-4 verdict over Miss Toole and Nova Scotia tripped Alberta 7-3.

Today's draws were scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. MST. In the third round it was B.C. vs Alberta, Manitoba vs Quebec, Ontario vs Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan vs New Brunswick and Newfoundland vs Nova Scotia.

In the fourth round it was Newfoundland vs Quebec, B.C. vs Ontario, Manitoba vs New Brunswick, Nova Scotia vs Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan vs Alberta.

Pierre got his name after the Quebec girls, including third Joy Sjare, second Perry Landrigan and lead Michelle Garneau met Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Sunday Sales Argued

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Law Reform Commission Monday heard a mixed bag of briefs on the question of whether retail food stores should be allowed to open Sundays.

The commission, investigating the relevance of present Sunday observance legislation, also heard a plea for an earlier Sunday opening of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Spokesmen for two-jug milk store chains, Mac's Milk Stores Ltd. and Becker Milk Co. Ltd., argued that their respective companies should be allowed to continue to operate Sundays.

Robert Lowe, president of Becker, also argued that all food stores, including supermarkets, should be permitted to operate although he expressed doubts this would be economical for the big stores.

But Craig Waldron, administrative manager of Mac's Milk, said the law should differentiate between "convenience stores" and other food outlets.

Mr. Waldron suggested the public interest would be protected by limiting Sunday operation to stores where food products make up more than half total sales and where working staff does not exceed two or three persons.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, told the commission Sunday openings would result in a demand from labor for higher premiums for Sunday work and the cost "would eventually be passed on to the consumer in the form of higher prices."

The OFL brief said if supermarkets were permitted to open Sundays, "it will be the opening wedge for other businesses to do likewise . . . and increase the tempo of irrational competition between the merchants in an all-out war for the almighty dollar."

The brief called for provincial regulation of store hours and fines of $1,000 a day for stores which break the new laws. Only exemptions from the closing law would be "the small family store" and stores in resort areas which would supply emergency needs such as drugs and gasoline.

Howard Tate, public relations manager for the CNE, showed a color film short of Sunday crowds at the gates of Exhibition Park to demonstrate popular demand for an earlier opening for agricultural fairs.

The hearings continue today.

Canada To Raise Its Aid

MONTEBELLO, Que. (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp Monday night forecast a steady increase in Canada's foreign aid appropriations in coming years.

Speaking at a news conference following a two-day meeting here of leading figures in the international aid field, Mr. Sharp said Canada's development assistance policies are currently under review.

While Canadian commitments would increase steadily, he could not say they would reach the goal recommended for donor countries in the report of an international commission headed by former prime minister Lester Pearson.

The commission carried out an intensive review of the international aid situation for the World Bank, and made its report last autumn.

A theme that ran through the discussions, Mr. Sharp said, was the need for a closer working relationship between donor and recipient countries.

Edwin Martin, chairman of the OECD's development assistance committee, said the mass of poor people has not benefitted from what economic growth has taken place in developing countries.

In rural areas of these countries, there was still a problem of "great gravity." Unless this is dealt with in the 1970s, there would be "very great trouble."

Grants Replace Federal Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — The industry department said Monday it is dropping industrial development loans in favor of non-repayable grants.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Lanark To Spend $799,000

TWEED — Lanark County Council, at a two-day session, heard a highways department report showing that $799,000 will be spent on roads and bridges during 1970.

The Christie Lake road running westerly from Perth for eight miles, started last fall, is about 50 per cent completed.

Work will commence again in the spring and paving will be carried out during the summer.

A six-mile stretch of the Scotch Line south of Perth will be rebuilt this spring and paved before fall.

Although the pre-engineering has been completed on the Murphy Point park road, construction of the road has been postponed until 1971.

The delay is due mainly to the lack of funds from the department of lands and forests.

This road will run south from the Rideau Ferry road to the new provincial park under construction on Rideau Lake. Lyle Wells, county engineer, was appointed to the county engineers' advisory committee, on a recommendation by Highways Minister George Gomme.

D. K. McLean, county treasurer presented the financial report for 1969. The county had an actual surplus of $30,460. Lanark Lodge, home for the aged had a surplus of $21,400 last year.

Queensboro

QUEENSBORO — Allan Ramsay is a patient in Belleville General Hospital where he reportedly underwent surgery.

The card party held recently by the WI was well attended with seven tables in play. Winners were Mrs. Credicott, Mrs. Alex Clarke, Mrs. William Cassidy and Harold Tokley. Lunch was served by the WI members. The next party will be on March 6.

Approved Appeals Total 80 Per Cent

According to the second annual report issued by the Belleville Financial Appeals Review Board it is estimated that approximately 80 to 85 per cent of funds raised by public campaigns in Belleville in 1967 are represented by campaigns approved by the board.

The board, which meets twice a month, acts as a channel through which all fund-raising organizations must go in order to receive approval for their campaigns.

Efforts to educate the industrial and commercial firms as to the purpose of the board resulted in a request from businessmen throughout the city for a card that could be displayed to indicate they would consider requests for donations only from organizations with FARB endorsement.

This card was mailed to more than 350 industries and commercial firms in the city during the year, and its use is being further encouraged by the board.

Indications are, however, that the board cannot function to the limit of its potential until it has made available to it the "service of an individual with training and experience in social work, that is, the executive director the United Community Services," the report reveals.

Chairman of the Board, Gerald Wishart remarked that the board should "aggressively seek out those organizations which are not applying for approval of their campaigns, as well as providing counsel and guidance to any fund-raising body upon request".

"Without the part-time services of a professional social worker, it is virtually impossible to achieve significant progress in these areas", said Mr. Wishart.

"It is understood that, because of financial limitations, the appointment of an executive director for the UCS is unlikely in the near future, and it appears that the FARB will have to continue its operations without part-time professional assistance", he continued.

"It is hoped that both the UCS and city council, in their planning of Belleville's social services, will recognize the need for additional professional assistance which could be used effectively by the FARB," he concluded.

Belleville City Police are investigating a break and enter at Sir Markenzie Bowell Public School that was discovered at 2.50 p.m. Saturday afternoon.

Stroke Victims Kept Living By Brain-cooling Equipment

OTTAWA (CP) — Brain-cooling and blood-vessel bypass equipment invented by Dr. Eric Peterson, a neurosurgeon, and National Research Council engineers can prolong life expectancy of stroke and brain tumor sufferers who undergo surgery, says an NRC report.

In the four years since the equipment was first used in patients, life expectancy was increased for 45 persons in danger of death or paralysis and for two dying patients who underwent brain surgery.

All except three are still living and "generally the results have been excellent," Dr. Peterson said.

Part of the equipment permits cooling of selected parts of the brain, enabling surgical procedures which otherwise would be impossible without permanent brain or other damage.

Another part has been adapted so that surgeons can bypass blood-vessel blockages without interrupting blood flow to the brain while removing the blood clots.

First clinical use of the equipment came in 1966 on a patient with a brain cancer in an extremely difficult location for removal.

The tumor had affected the patient to the point that his IQ —intelligence quotient—had deteriorated to less than 80. The average IQ range is between 90 and 110. He was classed as terminal.

A 20-member team of doctors, nurses, engineers and technicians used the brain-cooling equipment in a 14-hour operation. The patient is still alive and his IQ within a month had returned to normal.

When the research project began seven years ago, Dr. Peterson proposed that the brain be cooled by interrupting blood flow in a main artery. A heat exchanger would use the patient's own heart as a pump to pass blood through a cooling device and on into the brain.

This eliminated the problems of a mechanical pump and of subjecting other body organs like the heart to low temperatures. Once the cooled blood had passed through the brain a heating device returned it to the body's normal temperature.

Normally the brain can stand interruption of blood supply for only a few minutes without permanent injury. At normal body temperature the brain tissues need large quantities of oxygen. But the cooled brain needs only a small fraction of that amount to function without harm.

Russia for Law and Order

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It's a good feeling to turn the tables once in a while, and be able to say to certain people: "Why don't you go to Russia if you don't like it here?"

The "law and order" people are the ones I feel like saying it to: probably because they are so fond of saying it to others, in different contexts. But, actually, they belong in Russia.

The law and order people are unhappy with what they consider the "slack" application of punishment against offenders in the U.S. If what they are looking for is stern, swift and implacable enforcement of the laws, the Soviet Union would be a paradise for them.

Criminals of all kinds are harshly dealt with in Russia. There is practically no juvenile delinquency. Hippies are not tolerated. And sexual moralty is observed with a Puritanical fervor by the government. Lenin's old permissiveness has vanished without a trace.

The crime rate is exceedingly low in Russia, and is kept that way by the toughest police and severest courts in Europe. And the media of communication can't get frisky with elected officials, as Agnew complains they do in the U.S. One frisk and it's out of business.

In Russian jurisprudence, the rights of the state come first, and of the accused second, if at all. You are guilty until you prove yourself innocent, treasonable until you prove yourself patriotic, and suspect all your life long. This is the atmosphere of Russia's effective "law and order" regime.

It is fascinating that the Americans who deem themselves most "patriotic" are so often precisely the ones who resent the wide latitude of personal freedom built into the constitution, and envy the neat, orderly, precise, and inflexible police power of the Soviet Union. They don't say so, of course, but it's evident from the path they would like American police practices to take.

They miss the whole point that if you want anything resembling "liberty" for yourself, you have to hang loose about others. You have to strike a delicate balance, and the balance has to keep changing with conditions and needs. And those who think we have "gone too far" to protect the rights of criminals don't realize that we haven't yet gone far enough to protect the rights of innocent people.

It's marvelous to see how the stoutest "anti-communists" envy and would like to emulate Soviet repression of all dissidents and disturbers of the peace. In the name of "Americanism," they want to make us more like the enemies they imagine they differ from.

Fewer Canadian Doctors Are Moving to States

TORONTO (CP) — A reduction in the drain of medical brainpower to the United States is indicated in a report by the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges.

The report published in the Feb. 14 issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal shows that from 1966 to 1968, the number of Canadian-trained interns in the U.S. dropped to 68 from 103. The percentage was down to 6.8 per cent of those who graduated from Canadian schools from 11.6 per cent.

In the same period, the number of Canadian-trained medical residents training in the U.S. dropped to 702 from 905.

The report said the drop in the total number of Canadian-trained interns and residents in the U.S. "no doubt reflects improvement in Canadian facilities, as well as the diminishing number of American citizens being admitted to Canadian medical schools and problems associated with the U.S. draft."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Ankle Jerk Test Tells on Thyroid

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is there such a thing as an ankle jerk test? — Mr. J.

Comment: Kids still play the game: They hit below the knee cap to elicit a knee jerk in their playmates. If the knee jerk is quite active and the leg comes up fast they are likely to say, "It means you're crazy." If the knee jerk is slow or apparently absent they may say, "It means you're a dope."

They rarely, if ever, try an ankle jerk for the reason they are unaware that sharply striking the Achilles tendon will elicit a reaction of any kind.

It is interesting that some physicians are now using the Achilles reflex test as a screening method to determine if the thyroid gland is overactive. This "photomotogram" gives us a clue which we can follow up with other tests, basal metabolism, PBI blood test, radioactive iodine uptake, etc., to double check.

According to Robert A. Nordyke, M.D., of Honolulu in the Straub Clinic, this test is simple, results are immediately available. The speed of the ankle jerk (as determined on a moving graph) in response to an Achilles tendon tap indicates whether or not there is suspicion of thyrotoxicosis.

As far as I know it is not being used routinely by physicians who are suspicious that the patient's thyroid gland is not working properly. Most prefer to take basal metabolism tests, PBI's, etc. Yet, being a simple test, I believe it has its place as a screening test so we can put the patient in the proper category.

While I was on a lecture tour about 15 years ago, and stopping over in San Antonio, Texas, a physician first demonstrated the test to me. I am sorry, I have forgotten his name. He was quite enthusiastic about its possibilities. Perhaps recent interest indicates it will find a place in the management of thyroid disease.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I will be married soon and have about decided upon using one of the foam type contraceptives as my fiance and I do not want children for a while. My question is this: If conception should occur while using this type of product is there any likelihood that the baby will be affected in any way? — Miss C.

Comment: Not likely.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a 2-month-old baby and have been married a little over a year. My problem is that I have been losing an awful amount of weight. I am 5'7" and nothing but skin and bones. My husband works at night and I do not fix myself much of a dinner because there's only me and the baby who is still on baby food. Please tell me how I can gain some weight. — Mrs. Mc.

Comment: I can only go on the assumption that you are undernourished, but otherwise healthy. The way for people to lose is to eat less; to gain, eat more. See to it that you have a well-balanced diet, and try to get in some snacks between meals. If you do not gain within two weeks, then I think it will be time to see your doctor for a checkup. Persistent loss of weight, like pain or bleeding, may be a warning of more serious trouble than just an inadequate diet.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am a 16-year-old boy. I recently read somewhere that a lump in the breast may be cancer. I've had one for about a year. It hasn't grown, but I'm worried. Considering the fact that I'm so young, and a boy, is it possible I'm in trouble? — Mr. Q.

Comment: When lumps are of concern, neither the patient's age nor sex should influence procrastination. The fact it hasn't grown in a year is a good sign. Nevertheless, I suggest you see your doctor.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 25

Your birthday today: You will have to watch everything relating to money and its uses just to stay ahead in this coming year of increasing competition and confusion. Ventures inspired by sentiment bring great satisfaction; materialistic enterprises started now more often than not run into inexplicable misfortune.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Impulsive moves are unlikely to work out well. When all the uproar is over, you can say you learned a lot from today, since now you know of impending confusion and misjudgment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Hold your temper and your comment. Let others mix things up while you stand ready to help pick up the pieces afterward. Mechanical malfunctions are normal for today's influences.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Take a placating, receptive attitude. Avoid committing your group or your own services today. Promises are easily offered and accepted, but unlikely to be fulfilled.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your future credit depends on getting accounts settled quickly. Pressure brought on relatives or associates brings a prompt explosion — this is no day for confrontation. If quarrels beset you, pray for guidance past crisis.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): It is a moot point whether you are cross with the world or the world is cross with you. What matters is your awareness that things can be resolved tomorrow, after everybody shouts today. Seek personal serenity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Today's hunches are unsound. Madcap schemes abound but lead to no real result. Disregard adverse criticism or provocation. Focus on perfecting nonmaterial patterns of thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Nobody quite co-operates. Energy goes to waste on emotional turmoil over trivia or misunderstandings. Save your strength for tomorrow and its chores of recovery.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Even forewarned, details of today are apt to be dismaying. Let pieces fall where they may while you passively defend the main issues.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): It does little good to volunteer help or take action on behalf of another. That isn't quite what is wanted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): The more desperately money and its equivalent are pursued today, the more expensive life becomes and the less result achieved.

AQURIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Compromise will do little good as agreements reached today mean little tomorrow. Detach and wait for things to turn around for the better.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Impulsive friends land themselves and perhaps you as well in a predicament. Opinions on both sides of all issues run loud and vociferous.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief —here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months! Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions—even cases of long standing.

This was accomplished by a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

U.S. Reporters See Growing Opposition Here to U.S. Policies

WASHINGTON (CP) — An unusual flurry of journalistic interest in Washington-Ottawa relations had developed in U.S. newspapers recently with concern centred on the Arctic, U.S. foreign policy and what one headline-writer terms "Trudeau nationalism."

A story from Ottawa credited to the Washington Post foreign service says Canadian opposition to U.S. policies "appears to be growing more outspoken on such issues as Cuba, the (military) draft and Arctic sovereignty as direct criticism of Vietnam policy recedes."

The story adds, however, that "plucking the eagle's feathers is an old winter sport among some Canadian publications and there is nothing about the present spate of criticism to suggest that it is very serious."

Meanwhile, Jay Walz, veteran Ottawa correspondent for the New York Times, writes that "there is a certain amount of dissatisfaction in Canadian circles over the failure of President Nixon to mention Canada in his review of foreign affairs" last Wednesday.

The fresh concern expressed by both government and opposition, Walz writes, grew out of Nixon's warning of the great need to "head off the threat of escalating national claims over the ocean."

This was interpreted by some Washington sources to include the Arctic but External Affairs Minister, Mitchell Sharp said in the House of Commons that "It would be difficult to argue that the Arctic waters between Canadian territory have been regarded as part of the high seas."

This, in the words of Gerald Warning in an Ottawa story for The Post, was "the most open government assertion yet on the Canadian Arctic archipelago."

On the subject of Canadian nationalism, Robert H. Estabrook, a long-time observer of Canadian life who visits Canada frequently, writes that many people do indeed think Canada is "turning inward."

"The surface evidence is persuasive," he says.

Air Pollution Said Cause of Half Man's Ills

TORONTO (CP) — Air pollution causes more than half of all human diseases, Dr. Joseph McKenna of Toronto told a public inquiry into pollution Monday.

He charged air pollution plays a role in lung cancer and, by "irrefutable medical evidence," is held responsible for more than 50 per cent of all diseases in man.

Urban areas are hard hit because of weather conditions which cause a buildup of pollutants.

"People with reasonable normal lungs have enough reserves and protection to survive with slight discomfort.

"But those children predisposed to asthma or those older individuals with an already-compromised respiratory mechanism become seriously ill, or even succumb under this added stress."

He said that, as a surgeon, he has become increasingly aware "it is not adequate to just treat the results of pollution with drugs or with lung resections."

"We must instead recognize the cause and eliminate it from our environment."

The combustion of fuels such as oil and coal are mainly responsible for the belching of pollutants into the air, he said.

Dr. McKenna explained the characteristic symptoms of pollution-induced ills are coughing spells, sore throats, a sense of suffocation, shortness of breath and bouts of sinusitis.

When pollutants are inhaled, he said, many visual changes occur in the linings of human air passages.

There is an increased secretion of fluid which becomes thick and obstructs small air passages. Tiny hairs on the cells in the airways are paralysed, stop cleaning out extraneous material, and the cells are destroyed.

Deaths from the common cold, bronchial asthma, chronic bronchitis, pulmonary emphysemal bronchiectasis, can be correlated with the amount and type of fuel used and the sulphur dioxide level of the air, he said.

The hearings have been organized by the University of Toronto's Pollution Probe and Group Action to Stop Pollution (GASP).

The unofficial inquiry into Toronto's air pollution hopes to spur government action, particularly in the case of Ontario Hydro's lakefront generating plant, a focal point of the investigation.

Says Hydro Could Use Low-sulphur Fuels

TORONTO (CP) — A United States professor said Monday that air pollution could be greatly reduced in Metropolitan Toronto if Ontario Hydro used fuels with a lower sulphur content at its lakeshore generating plant.

Benjamin Linsky was speaking by a special telephone link to an unofficial investigation into Toronto air pollution which hopes to spur government action, particularly in the case of Ontario Hydro.

The professor, formerly associated with anti-pollution programs in Detroit and California, said that reports sent to him by Pollution Probe indicate formation of a "bubble" of highly-polluted air caused by sulphur dioxide from the hydro stacks.

He said, however, that use of low-sulphur fuels would add 20 per cent to hydro bills, based on statistics from a New York utility firm.

Canadian Awards Made

Andy Kim, Ginette Reno Top Pop Singing Stars

TORONTO (CP) — Montreal singers Andy Kim and Ginette Reno were awarded the annual Gold Leaf award Monday night as Canada's top male and female pop singers for 1969.

The 26-year-old Mr. Kim, who also composes his own music, has had more than 1,000,000 copies sold in North America of his recording Baby I Love You.

Miss Reno, who did not attend the presentation, cut her first two English-language recordings last year. They were Don't Let Me Be Misunderstood and Everything That I Am.

The awards were among 14 presented by RPM Weekly magazine. Recipients were determined by ballots cast by disc jockeys and television and newspaper critics across Canada.

Awards for best-produced single and album went to the Vancouver-based Poppy Family—one for their single recording Which Way You Goin' Billy, which has sold nearly 40,000 copies in Canada, and another for their album of the same name.

Top country male and female singers were Tommy Hunter and Dianne Leigh.

The Guess Who received the award as Canada's top vocal instrumental group and the Mercey Brothers were voted top country group.

The Guess Who, a Winnipeg-based rock quintet, has sold more than 1,000,000 copies of These Eyes and has recorded two long-play discs—Canned Wheat and Wheatfield Soul—for RCA.

Critics voted composer-singer Gordon Lightfoot of Toronto top folk-singer. Mr. Lightfoot, known particularly for his single recording Early Morning Rain, has recorded five long-play albums, the most recent Sunday Concert, which has sold nearly 200,000 copies.

Special RPM awards went to Saul Holiff as Canadian music industry man of the year and to CKLG radio station in Vancouver for community activities. Mr. Holiff, of London, Ont., manages Johnny Cash and Tommy Hunter.

Swiss Want Action On Airline Security

BERN (Reuters) — Switzerland is pressing for international action on air security following the crash Saturday of an Israel-bound Swissair jet in which 47 persons were killed.

President Hans-Peter Tschudi announced following an emergency cabinet meeting Monday that the government is prepared to act as host for an international conference on measures to protect civil aircraft from sabotage attacks.

The cabinet proposed that the International Civil Aviation Organization convene such a conference immediately.

The government also decided that, "to prevent the repetition of acts of terrorism on Swiss territory," it would in future require all visitors from Arab countries to have visas.

Moreover, these visas would be issued only on humanitarian grounds or if important Swiss interests are involved.

Tschudi said officials had been told to make stricter checks before issuing visas to persons from 15 Arab nations, "to avoid as far as humanly possible the entry into Switzerland of undesirable elements."

The countries to which the new controls will be applicable are: Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Egypt, Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Yemen, South Yemen, Bahrain and Qatar.

Hijacking to Be Fought By Canada and Cuba

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian government delegation is planning a visit to Cuba to discuss joint action against aircraft hijackers, an external affairs department spokesman said Monday.

Earlier, Donald S. Macdonald, Privy Council president, told reporters that such discussions had been agreed to by both governments.

The spokesman said preliminary discussions had already been held between external affairs department officials and Cuban embassy personnel here.

Future talks would deal with such things as the return of hijacked aircraft and captured hijackers to their countries of origin, the spokesman said.

Trade Surplus Boosted By Surge of Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — A strong surge of exports to countries other than Britain and the United States and a decline in imports sent Canada's commodity trade surplus up to $277,100,000 in January, compared with $14,300,000 in January last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported monday.

Exports rose to $1,345,700,000 from $1,136,600,000, while imports declined to $1,068,600,000 from $1,122,300,000.

Preliminary and incomplete figures showed exports to the United Kingdom and the United States were up 7.4 and 10.8 per cent, respectively. But exports to other Commonwealth countries rose 58.1 per cent, and shipments to Japan, the European common market, Latin America and other countries rose 44.9 per cent.

Imports from the u.k. and the U.S. were down 4.9 and 8.7 per cent. Imports from Japan rose by 64.8 per cent.

Scientists Plan to Get Stuck in St. Lawrence Ice

OTTAWA (CP) — Six scientists are going to lock themselves in an ice floe on an old wooden sealing ship next month to study ice drift in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The objective is a better ice forecasting service for the gulf and consequently more efficient winter shipping in the St. Lawrence River and gulf.

The scientists will sail Friday from Halifax in the Newfoundland sealer Stevenville and they plan to become deliberately trapped in gulf ice for four or five weeks.

A coast guard icebreaker will help the Stevenville nose her way into a big ice floe two feet thick—and will get her out again in early April.

The Stevenville will drift as a prisoner until broken out by icebreaker and then return to Halifax.

The expedition will investigate such factors as the interaction of ice and surface winds and of ice and currents immediately beneath the ice.

A ship as small as a sealer is being used so that the vessel itself will not affect appreciably the drift of the ice.

Canada Backs Plan To Publicize Pleas

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada has joined other Western countries in supporting a proposal under which individual petitions and complaints about alleged violations of human rights in a country could receive widespread publicity. Five or six such complaints were received in the last year from Canada.

The Soviet bloc, in the past a source of such petitions, and the Arab states are strongly opposed to the proposal, to be debated during the month-long meeting of the human rights commission which opened Tuesday.

Passed to the commission last year from the Economic and Social Council, it is designed to replace a system under which petitions seldom see the light of day after being received here.

This system has come under widespread criticism in the last year as petitions about alleged violations of human rights in the Soviet Union were brought to light by sources outside the UN. At the same time, Israel has complained about the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Under the new proposal, all petitions and complaints received by the UN would be put before a working group of five.

The working group would make a recommendation to a subcommittee of the commission which in turn could refer the matter to the commission. The commission could then decide whether to investigate or drop the matter.

If the matter came before the full commission it also would become public property, thus allowing for widespread publicity.

Tuesday, a Canadian official disclosed that five or six individual complaints were received from Canada in the last year or so.

Canada was informed of the substance of the letters and invited to reply to them, which it did in all but one case, still in abeyance.

Details of the letters are scant. One was from an Indian who complained about the status of his people in Canada. Canada replied that a white paper on Indian affairs would be released soon. It now has been released. Others dealt with welfare matters, described as minor.

The case in abeyance deals with a man in British Columbia who complained in June or July that he was unfairly imprisoned.

Ontario Budget In April

TORONTO (CP) — The 1970-71 Ontario budget will probably not be brought down until April, Premier John Robarts told opposition party representatives Tuesday.

This would be a month later than is usual but the government is said to face a particularly difficult budget-cutting operation this year to meet Mr. Robarts' objective—announced last week—to balance the budget with no increase in taxes.

This is intended as an anti-inflationary measure and as an example to business and labor to show similar restraint in the private sector.

Commonwealth Premiers Plan Singapore Parley

LONDON (CP) — The next Commonwealth prime ministers' conference will take place in Singapore in January, 1971, high-placed informants disclosed today.

The decision to hold the meeting there followed a meeting today of Commonwealth high commissioners who have been consulting with their government and with Secretary-General Arnold Smith on the question of the next conference.

Informants said that Ottawa, Trinidad and a number of other sites were considered but it was the consensus of representatives that the meeting take place in Singapore. The Canadian government had indicated a willingness to be host at Ottawa, but not until the spring or summer of 1971. The British government favored an early meeting.

Legislature Opens Tuesday

By FRED HAMILTON

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario legislature opened Tuesday with a throne speech largely devoted to civil rights, pollution, urban affairs and announcement of a minor shift in cabinet responsibilities.

The speech, read by Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald, gave few details of government programs and was criticized by opposition leaders as being "vacuous" and "innocuous."

Among specific details mentioned were creation of a new department of mines and northern affairs under Allan Lawrence, at present minister of mines, and an expanded role for the department of citizenship, which will remain under the provincial secretary's department.

The throne speech said pollution control activities will be consolidated under the department of energy and resources management.

For Other Stories On Ontario Legislature See See Pages 20 and 21.

Department officials said the 1970 program will include steps to bring federal and provincial legislation into line. One possibility was an increase to the federal level of $5,000 in the province's $1,000 maximum fine for industries convicted of water pollution.

The speech promised a provincial-municipal conference in April on urban problems with legislature sittings suspended to permit members to participate.

As if to dramatize the government's promise of increased participation for individuals in government, a man wearing a plaster body cast broke into the house shortly before the opening ceremony began to plead for changes in workmen's compensation legislation.

Premier John Robarts was on his way to welcome Lt.-Gov. Macdonald when Al Baldwin, 57, of Mississauga, fell to his knees near the premier's wife and children. He was removed by police and later charged with disturbing the peace.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and New Democratic Party Leader Donald MacDonald faulted the government for failing to promise revision of medical health insurance or to acknowl-

Pompidou May Face Hostile Reception

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite denials that his country has taken sides in the Middle East crisis, French President Georges Pompidou faced today the possibility of a cool, if not hostile, reception during his address to a joint meeting of Congress.

Some congressmen predicted nearly half the membership in the House of Representatives might boycott his appearance in protest of the French sale of fighter planes to Libya. At least one member, Representative Lester Wolff (Dem. N.Y.) said he would walk out in the middle of Pompidou's talk.

The French leader, on the first full day of his eight-day visit to the United States, said Tuesday France is "neither in one camp nor in the other" in the Middle East. "We are certainly not against Israel," he told The National Press Club.

Defending Libyan sale, Pompidou said "there was suddenly a gap, a vacuum we did not provoke. We felt it was in our interest to fill this gap."

Studies Not Linked to Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Resources Minister J. J. Greene reiterated in the Commons Tuesday that the government is not considering selling water to the United States.

Mr. Greene said three studies now going on in Canada concerning water have aroused some public concern and prompted his statement.

"I emphasize and reiterate that no possibility of sale or diversion of water to the United States is contemplated by these studies," the minister said.

He said a U.S. army corps ice survey on the Great Lakes was a research project designed only to provide information on the effects of ice decay on navigation.

Mr. Greene also said a federal-Ontario study of Northern Ontario waters was for the prime purpose of appraising the waters draining into Hudson Bay and James Bay for all forseeable uses, excluding sales to the U.S.

The government was taking no part in the Great Replenishment and Northern Development canal project which he described as a "very general scheme" promoted by a private company.

For Other Stories On Parliament See Pages 13, 20 and 27

Mr. Greene said some press reports indicated that water could be sold to the U.S. under the scheme.

But no water could be sold to the Americans "without the approval of the Government of Canada. No contemplation of such approval is under consideration by the government."

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said MPs had been concerned that water might be included in a "resource exchange package with the U.S."

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said he feared the U.S. might make a demand for Canadian water in return for Canada selling its oil to the U.S.

Mr. Douglas said the government should seek the approval of Parliament before entering into any agreement to sell water.

CLC Meets Inflation Fighters

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress will continue discussions with the federal prices and incomes commission about anti-inflation tactics despite the lack of progress in talks Monday.

A spokesman for the CLC said Tuesday more informal meetings will be held although no dates have been set.

Monday's meeting was described by CLC president Donald MacDonald as an "informal get-together at which there was an exchange of views."

There was, however, no change in the CLC response to the commission's plea for voluntary restraints on wage demands. Mr. MacDonald called the proposed policy "unworkable and unjust."

Two weeks ago the commission won an agreement in a conference with business leaders that price increases this year will be kept at a lower level than cost increases.

Two Survive 17 Hours Buried in Snow

RECKINGEN (CP) — A French couple buried under an avalanche for 17 hours were dug out alive today while rescue teams continued to search for 25 persons missing in Alpine snowslides that hit this Swiss Alpine village and the French town of Lans-le-Villard Tuesday, leaving at least 20 persons dead.

In Reckingen, high in the Swiss Alps, rescue teams held out little hope for 17 persons still unaccounted for after a huge snowslide engulfed seven houses and a military barracks.

Twelve bodies so far have been dug out among 48 persons originally trapped. Another man died in hospital. Eighteen others found alive were injured.

About 100 miles to the southeast, troops, firemen and volunteers in the French ski resort of Lans-le-Villard reported they had dug up seven bodies after an avalanche which crashed on a hotel late Tuesday.

A man and a woman were dug out of the hotel wreckage this morning. They said that they heard the rescuers getting closer to them and cried out to attract their attention.

Five injured persons also were found by the rescue teams and officials reported that possibly as many as eight persons were missing.

Rescue workers said the snow was like cement and that picks were often ineffective.

One witness, talking about the avalanche, said: "Suddenly, you could see a big cloud of snow rising, then there was a wall of snow built where, a second before, there was the road alongside the hotel.

"We heard nothing. The snow raced down without noise. . . ."

Board Debates Estimates

Costs Run High for Special School Services

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings county trustees last night matched the need for special education and psychological services against the cost of providing them and confessed the problem had them stymied.

In the last of a series of pre-budget reports on educational needs, assistant superintendent E. T. Morris and co-ordinator of psychological services M. A. Godin presented programs that would cost more than $200,000 to initiate, and considerably more to bring to optimum standard for the county.

As trustee Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton observed: "It's so frustrating knowing what we should do and knowing we can't afford it".

Mr. Godin, a registered psychologist employed by the board last year to assess county needs and set up a psychological service in the schools, estimated in his report that the county needs seven psychologists to handle the case load of students needing help and four psychometrists to conduct testing and assessment programs.

He suggested the board hire three psychologists and three psychometrists to begin the service in 1970. Total cost to initiate the program this year would be $120,000.

Trustee MacDonald Smith did a rapid calculation to show that the total program, when the seven psychologists and four psychometrists are on staff, would cost in excess of $200,000. Assuming that provincial grants will cover about half the cost, he calculated that the total program would cost Belleville ratepayers one mill on their assessment.

"This program should be in the schools, but should the burden be put on the property owner?" he asked.

"This is a community service; should education have to assume the burden?" added Mrs. Hutchison.

"Something has to be done for these children and the only agency aware of the situation is the board of education," noted chairman James Clarke.

Trustee John O'Flynn commented that the lack of preventative care is costly to the community.

"If you leave these children untreated they burn down a school at $60,000 for each fire," he said.

Mr. Godin presented figures from American centres to prove that institution of psychological services saves seven times its cost over a period of years.

"Then our task is to balance one mill on the property tax now against the equivalent of seven mills paid later on in sales tax, income tax and the rest," said Mr. Clarke. "The question here is not can we afford it, but can we afford not to do it?"

"That depends on whether it's some one down the street, the next door neighbor or your own child who needs this service," commented Mr. Smith. "In the last case it's critical."

The psychological services report followed one from Mr. Morris calling for 26 additional improvement and special class teachers to look after the estimated 10 per cent of county students who suffer learning handicaps. Thirty-two such teachers are now employed by the board.

Estimated additional cost to the board would be $128,400.

"If everybody were equal there would be no need for special education," said Mr. Morris. "This program is an effort to reduce the inequalities whenever and wherever we find them."

Because of the lack of qualified personnel in the system at the present time to survey the student population, Mr. Morris could not give an accurate figure on the number of children needing special education to overcome handicaps in learning. However, he estimated that about 1,412 children in Grades 1 to 8 require help.

A survey was shown that 300 children in the city of Belleville have speech defects requiring the care of a speech correction teacher.

Last year the board included $48,000 in its budget to hire specialists in teaching the handicapped. Because of the shortage of such teachers, only one was hired.

In addition to the 26 improvement and special class teachers, Mr. Morris estimated the county this year needs five speech correction teachers, two teachers of the perceptually handicapped, one teacher of the emotionally disturbed and three consultants to assist regular teachers.

Kin Week Set for Picton

PICTON — Highlighting Kin Week in Picton will be a dinner dance tonight in the Elks Hall, marking the 50th anniversary of Canada's Kinsmen Clubs. Special guest joining the celebration will be Hal Rogers, Hamilton, founder of Canada's Kin movement.

Members of the Picton Kinsmen Club will celebrate their 26th anniversary while local Kinettes mark their second year of activity in community projects. Outlining this evening's program club president Archie Kingma announced that Pierre Blanchard, district 6 governor, Montreal and zone deputy governor, Ronald Hotston, Picton also will attend the anniversary party. Featured speaker will be former Pictonian, Arthur Duncan, now of Batawa. Mayor H. J. McFarland will present Hal Rogers with a key to the town, joined in his good wishes by county warden Gordon Lloyd and representatives of several Picton service clubs.

Mr. Kingma estimated that the Picton Kinsmen Club has a membership of 33 while the the Kinettes claim 23 members. Although club members have not planned an anniversary project Mr. Kingma explained they expect to be active in a number of regular programs. A fund raising campaign to build an additional cabin at the Salvation Army's summer camp at Roblin Lake has been reported as very successful. Kinsmen have set their goal at $2,600, and have raised $1,428 toward this figure.

Recently local Kinsmen undertook sponsorship of the 4th Picton Cub and Scout troop as a regular project. Concerned for Picton's senior citizens as well as its youth, members of the Kinsmen and Kinette clubs entertain residents of the Prince Edward County home annually at a Christmas banquet. Kin week, officially declared by town council, will close on Saturday.

Vandalism At Base

TRENTON — Officials at Canadian Forces Base, Trenton say they are questioning a suspect after a case of vandalism on the base Tuesday night.

Windshields of nine cars parked near the Corporals' Club were smashed at approximately 9.40 p.m., causing an estimated $1,000 damage.

A spokesman said that no charges have been laid yet, and that the suspect's name is being withheld pending further investigation.

Bandit Still Sought

City police today were still seeking clues in the search for a man who staged an attempted holdup at an east end Belleville bank branch Monday night.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today there had been no new breaks in the case.

The man, his features distorted by a nylon stocking, is believed to have entered the Bank of Montreal branch on East Dundas Street through a rear door to surprise acting manager Clinton Halliday and snatch a bank pistol.

The bank's cash holdings earlier had been placed in the vault and secured with a double combination lock.

The intruder fled after the 22 - year - old Halliday suddenly closed with him and a fight ensued for possession of the loaded gun.

edge the delay in implementing tax reforms.

Mr. Nixon said that "if this is the government's plan for the 1970s it won't be good enough."

He said the need to curb spending in order to fight inflation, recognized by the throne speech, "is no excuse for having no positive programs at all."

Mr. Nixon stressed the government's failure to announce steps to "clean up the mess" in the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan, which has come under fire because of high premiums, slow payments and lack of full coverage.

The Liberal Leader also was critical of the lack of any indication that the government will establish a provincial ombudsman and the lack of a policy statement on the issue of extended aid to separate schools, a proposal supported by both opposition parties.

Mr. Nixon also said the throne speech statements on polution and inflation contained "no specific proposals of any significance or magnitude."

Mr. MacDonald said there was so little in the throne speech that it lent support to those who say the opening of a new legislature session should be a purely social event, although he personally does not favor this.

The NDP leader said the greatest omission from the throne speech was the lack of any acknowledgment that the government is "in the midst of postponing—that means scuttling—their own tax reform program."

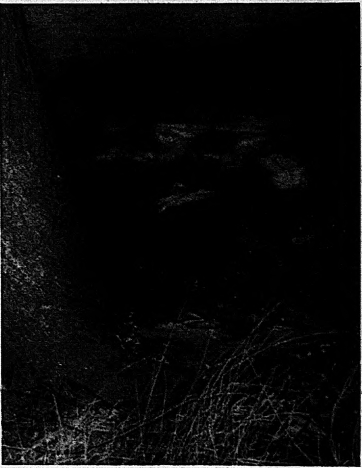
Winter Food Supply

This plot of corn is part of 40 acres of crops grown annually at the Brighton Provincial Hunting area to provide feed and cover for animals. Corn stalks are left standing in the fall to supply animals with additional food source during harsh winter months. All plots are situated near cover areas so animals can flee to safety if alarmed.



Animal Picnic Ground

The base of this tree serves as a winter picnic ground for animals at the 800-acre Brighton Provincial Hunting area. Remnants of corn cobs and corn husks carried to the shelter of the tree by animals prove the use made of the Department of Lands and Forest policy of providing winter feed to improve and increase game sought by hunters.

Brighton Park Game Control Shows Successful Results

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Staff Reporter

PRESQU'ILE PARK — The song "A hunting we will go!" is becoming more applicable all the time in the province of Ontario.

Partly because the Ontario department of lands and forests is conducting a campaign to provide controlled hunting areas throughout the province.

Included in this project is the Brighton provincial hunting area — an 800-acre block of land just north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway between Trenton and Brighton — supervised by the department's Presqu'ile division headquarters.

Presqu'ile division superintendent Kenneth Moore said: "The results have been very good since the program was instigated here in the fall of 1968."

He revealed that 2,772 hunters visited the Brighton provincial hunting area in the peak of the 1969 hunting season, between Oct. 3 and Dec. 5.

Their quarry included pheasant, partridge and deer — prime game targets of the fall season. In the winter months hunters travel to the hunting area on snowmobiles in search of cottontails, jack rabbits and the occasional snowshoe hare.

Lands and forests officials are striving to promote the hunting area through various methods. One of these methods is stocking. "Prior to the 1969 fall pheasant hunt we released a number of birds in the area at different times to build up the population and encourage public interest," Mr. Moore said.

A second method employed to improve and increase the game crop is the planting of corn and such grains as oats and buckwheat to provide feed and cover for wildlife. These cultivated crops comprise approximately 40 acres — five per cent of the total hunting area — and are situated in plots spread throughout the region near cover areas.

Mr. Moore noted that his department had provided parking lots, picnic tables and a road through the middle of the hunting area for the benefit of hunters.

He also said that the department was in the process of fencing the irregularly-shaped block of land and adding to it when neighboring land was available.

"The Brighton provincial hunting area is a public service along the lines of the department's program of providing hunting areas for the public, but it has also proved beneficial to local schools who have made conservation tours of the area," Mr. Moore stated.

Mr. Moore estimated that over 50 per cent of the hunters using the area came from the metropolitan Toronto area and stressed that during the fall the hunt was watched closely by lands and forests personnel.

A side-benefit of the hunting area is a reduction in trespassing on local farmland, and correspondingly, a reduction in the possibility of the accidental killing or wounding of cattle and other farm animals, the superintendent said.

The hunt in the Brighton area has been generally favorable, Mr. Moore stated, as evidenced by the trio of hunters who travel down from Pembroke each fall specifically for the annual pheasant hunt.

Two Families Homeless In Carrying Place Fire

CARRYING PLACE — Two Carrying Place-area families are temporarily homeless following a Tuesday afternoon fire which partially damaged a duplex on the Carrying Place Road.

The fire broke out in the portion of the frame structure occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. McBride and their four children, say firemen.

Mr. McBride, a night shift worker at a local plant and two of the children, Robert 5, and Joan 4, were asleep at the time. However Mr. McBride awoke in time to carry the two children to safety.

Gary Baker, also a night shift worker, was asleep in the other half of the duplex which he occupies with his wife and two children. He was awakened by smoke and escaped unharmed.

The Trenton firemen arrived on the scene before the blaze was out of control and extinguished the flames, deputy chief Henry Barre said.

Three bedrooms in the McBride portion of the home were gutted and some furniture lost, while the Baker portion of the frame structure sustained smoke damage, deputy-chief Barr revealed.

He said that the building, ownd by Arthur Bird of RR3, Carrying Place, was insured but the contents were uninsured.

Both Mrs. McBride and Mrs. Baker were working at the time, while the older McBride children, Sally, 11, and Edward 9, and the two Baker children David, 8, and Wendy, 7, were in school when the fire broke out.

An estimate of damage was not available this morning.

Soviet Science

The picture on this page today is indicative of the Soviet Union's progress in scientific research. The operation described is in the Leningrad area, but it is in Siberia that the most dramatic work is being performed.

Typical of the latter-day technological scene in Siberia is Akademgorodok, described by George St. George in his book Siberia: The New Frontier as "the little town with probably the biggest IQ anywhere." A town built by scientists for scientists, Akademgorodok is located in the midst of virgin forest. Unlike the drab, monotonous structures found in other communities of the vast region, this home of "the big science" has also been built with an eye to color. Pastel greens, blues, creams, and pinks predominate, and matching flowers are in the windows. The buildings themselves are of materials capable of standing up to the rigors of the Siberian winter.

Here live the young elite of the Soviet scientific world. St. George was shown one school where all teaching is in English from the first to the last grade, as well as a youth club called "Under the Integral." The name has a strangely western flavor, in the avant-garde tradition — but there the comparison ends.

Can you imagine Canadian youth clubs being the haunt of mathematicians where according to St. George, "one wall in the central hall was covered by a huge blackboard on which any argument could be settled, with juke-boxes rendering an accompaniment, and dancing couples pausing momentarily to watch the equations."

Or by any stretch of the imagination can one visualise any of our young people carrying on the arguments after midnight closing — the sidewalk serving as a blackboard for those algebra formulas?

Akademgorodok is also home for the Institute of Automation which among other things has designed a plant which reduces huge logs of wood into matches with a single operator controlling the entire process. Here there are also university studies (at a branch of Novosibirsk University) into sociological and psychological problems, while at the Calculus Centre a computer has been constructed capable of performing 100,000 mathematical operations per second. As if this were not enough a team of three young scientists at the Department of History, using computers, broke the mystery of the ancient Mayan writings, which as St. George points out, have long been considered indecipherable.

On a slightly more human level, St. George learned that the citizens of this community are great travellers. Well paid, they fly to Moscow and Leningrad for weekends, and abroad during vacations. Nor are the arts neglected; there are performances of the ballet, opera, Shakespeare. It may be appreciated then that on these strictly non-political levels of activity, whether in the sphere of science or of culture, the Soviets exhibit a very high degree of excellence.

Right and Wrong

Could there be any better illustration of the contrast between good and evil than in the two news items on Monday concerning Madoc public school and Sir Winston Churchill public school, Belleville, respectively.

The welcome accorded the students from a predominantly Negro section of Washington, D.C. by the young people of Madoc and their families, is something of value which both groups will carry with them all their lives. It is a lesson in brotherhood, in human relations.

The attempt to burn the Bellleville school on the other hand is in unhappy contrast. Those who perpetrate such acts damage not only public property but also their own inner personalities. There is nothing in such behavior of which they may be proud.

Accent on Youth

The prediction of the Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada that his successor would find himself drawn further away from traditional "Christian society" and more directly involved in the world at large, is in line with the times.

Most Rev. Howard H. Clark suggested also that his successor might be a younger man, one who is not only physically fit but has youthful attitudes as well. One thinks in this context of someone like Dr. Maguire, the Irish-born Bishop of Montreal.

In spelling out just what he means by youth, Archbishop Clark made this startling observation: "after all — I know a lot of middle-aged 18-year-olds when it comes to their attitudes to life."

We would never have guessed — maybe it is the teenagers who are the squares today.

Economic Motives

Ontario Backs Confederation Out of Self-Interest

(Third of Series)

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ontario may seem primarily intent on its long waltz or frug with Quebec but is nevertheless suitor of the other provinces as well.

Or putting the thing less romantically, Ontario needs the rest of Canada more than the rest of Canada needs Ontario.

These ideas bounced around in interviews throughout the province that pointed to a paradoxical conclusion: The well-being of powerful Ontario is ultimately more dependent on the other provinces than, collectively speaking, the other way round.

Interviews also indicated that while Ontario's ardor in defending Confederation is sometimes termed a matter of economic self-interest, there is a desire to cultivate a Canadian condition of benefit to all.

Alfred Powis, 39-year-old president of Noranda Mines Ltd., moved into the broader subject while discussing evidence of backlash against the emphasis on things French in Canada today.

Whether regional resentments now are worse than in the past is difficult to gauge, said Mr. Powis, adding that in some way they have lessened, thanks in part to jet travel coast to coast.

British Columbians, for instance, have always felt exploited by central Canada—Ontario as well as Quebec—said the chief executive officer of a firm with operations in each of Canada's five main economic regions.

"I think we have to recognize that B.C. is viable in its own right. It doesn't depend on Eastern Canada markets. It's an export-oriented part of the country.

"I think that, actually, all of Canada west of Ontario could survive in a separated Canada without any particular impact. If you look at the Prairie provinces—wheat farmers, a certain amount of mining, oil production. This is all viable.

"But it's in Ontario, the manufacturing centre of Canada, and Quebec that we depend on markets in the rest of Canada.

Marcel Gingras, editor-in-chief of Ottawa's Le Droit French-language daily, said he feels Ontarians identify with Quebec more than with any other region of Canada or the U.S.

"It is much easier (for Ontario) to sell things in Quebec than in the U.S.," said Mr. Gingras, emphasizing the economic relationship and dependence.

"If some kind of separation were to happen with the other provinces, I would see those two staying together . . . a federation of two countries."

Without the others?

"It might be with them, too, but I can hardly see it being a federation of Quebec with the Maritimes, or Quebec with British Columbia."

Morden Lazarus, an official of the 600,000-member Ontario Federation of Labor, commented:

"On purely rational grounds I'd agree with that. But only as a rational argument. I think there would be more antagonism among separatists toward Ontario than to the rest of Canada. They look on us just as the western provinces do. We're not loved uncles."

The need of Quebec and Ontario for each other was also stressed by Mr. Powis—that being the "nature of the country."

What of the feeling in the Atlantic provinces that Canada exists for central Canada?

"I get into great arguments with my friends in the Maritimes. There's a certain amount of separatist feeling there. People say they have no opportunities, must move to Montreal or Toronto, or would be better off with the U.S.

"My answer is they would then have to move to Boston instead of Montreal. The northern part of Maine is not exactly a booming industrial area. Why people in New Brunswick think they would have sudden prosperity as part of the U.S., which they don't have as part of Canada, is beyond me."

J. Wesley McNutt, North Bay lumber company president who also has country-wide connections, said he has been converted to the Atlantic point of view.

"I wouldn't feel it justified were it not for a particular individual in the same business. He convinced me they are disadvantaged.

"He feels it is within the power of people in central Canada to correct the condition of disadvantage to a large degree.

One of the classic gripes in Canada east and west is that products largely manufactured in Ontario are bought behind a tariff wall at higher than U.S. prices.

The problem was touched upon in an interview by Carl A. Pollock, president of Electrohome Ltd. of Kitchener and former president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, who declared:

"I believe in freer trade, but I don't believe in free trade for a country that is just developing in the manufacturing sense."

In theory, free trade with the U.S. seemed attractive, opening a market of 200,000,000 in exchange for one of 20,000,000. But, said Mr. Pollock, it was akin to the parent who gave his small child a St. Bernard dog only to have the tot inquire:

"Is he for me or am I for him?"

"We've tried at Electrohome to sell our products to the U.S.—and we do sell some there—but we've found they wave their flag very, very energetically when it comes to the things they buy. . . .

The Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov called the biological station he founded in the village of Koltushi, now Pavlov (near Leningrad) "the conditioned reflexes capital." Pavlov worked here from 1933 to 1936 on his theories relating to conditioned reflexes and the nervous system. Professor Ivan Kurtsin and researcher Nina Gaza are seen here conducting an experiment on a dog which has been placed in a sound-proof conditioned reflexes chamber.

About 350 members of Toronto Kiwanis Club celebrated charter night of the Bloor - Toronto Kiwanis Club, started last November, with a banquet. About 40 members of Belleville Kiwanis formed the largest block of out-of-town guests at the banquet which also celebrated Kiwanis 35th anniversary.

Little encouragement was given to the Hastings County Roads and Bridges Committee and county officials, who waited on the Ontario Minister of Highways regarding the taking over by the department of the Foxboro to Madoc highway, according to a member of the delegation. It was intimated that this decision had been made owing to war and other considerations.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 25, 1970 . . .

Pope Pius V excommunicated Queen Elizabeth I of England 400 years ago today—in 1570—and declared her a usurper. Elizabeth's concern about maintaining her supremacy in ecclesiastical matters had resulted in breaking of diplomatic relations with Rome in 1561. The Papal bull excommunicating her came too late to encourage northern rebels.

1908—St. Boniface, Man., was incorporated.

1952—An outbreak of foot and mouth disease was reported in Saskatchewan.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—officials announced that the Canadian Army had taken 1,200 prisoners since the opening of a new offensive at the northern end of the front on Feb. 8; United States troops moved to within 15 miles of Cologne; more than 200 bombers bombed Tokyo and Kobe vicinity.

Unions Suggest Price Freeze

Montreal Le Devoir—At the end of its remarkably serious and well-documented brief to the federal government, the Confederation of National Trade Unions repeats a proposition it has made many times. It recommends the freezing of prices and the creation of an arbitration tribunal on prices.

This proposition is radical. It appears to contradict previous statements in briefs that inflation has not reached alarming levels in Canada.

It is too soon, it seems to us, to envisage such a radical recourse. It's not definite that the depressing effects of it would be balanced by the unifying power of an emergency situation such as a state of war.

But it is not too soon to insist that the state endow itself, in matters of prices and incomes, with instruments of analysis and research more refined than those with which it has been satisfied until now. There would be a role for the prices and incomes commission, headed by Mr. Young.

The CNTU will admit without difficulty that this body, to be efficient, must concern itself not only with the movement of prices but also with salaries and other forms of revenue.

The 'Y' in Cornwall

Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Cornwall has had a combined YM-YWCA for less than a decade, though both the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations go back many years more. Since the two moved in under one roof, the story has been one of crises met and surmounted, the latest being the survival of the building itself thanks to the support of the community as a whole.

Throughout, there has been concern about the Y's public image. One undesirable image the Y had to live down was the idea it was a private club for English-speaking Protestants, an image lately laid to rest . . . in large measure by the combined efforts of the churches in Cornwall. Such an image does not die easily, but it seems fairly safe today to say that the Y is considered by most people to be an organization serving the whole community, and not one segment.

Tonight the Y faces a new crisis at its annual meeting. It is paring its unwieldy board of directors to 15 members from 31, and part of the trimming proposed by the nominating committee includes the elimination of clergy representatives on the board. The basic philosophy, apparently, is that the Y is a lay organization and that "organized religion" on the board might frighten away young people who are not necessarily churchgoers.

Not everyone feels that way, and the Y has an election on its hands as a result, with Rev. George Clifford and Father Rudolphe Villeneuve proposed as candidates by individual members of the Y.

Quite aside from the ludicrous suggestion that the clergy don't belong on the board of an organization which incorporates the word "Christian" in its title, we can't help but wonder at the short memories of the nominating committee. They'd probably be holding their meeting in a rented hall tonight had they taken the same attitude a few years back.

Regina Leader - Post

A peak in community effort will be reached in Regina with the opening Friday of the YWCA building on McIntyre St.

The building, which cost in the neighborhood of $2 million, includes a $112,000 75-foot swimming pool. The citizens at large owe a deep debt of gratitude to the various community leaders who headed campaigns for funds, special contributions and specific projects associated with the new YWCA.

The YWCA is the result of years of planning and this is apparent everywhere — the main lobby and lounge on the ground floor; the locker rooms, gymnasium, swimming pool, dressing rooms and crafts room in the basement; club rooms on the second floor and, from the third to the sixth floor, 56 single and 12 double rooms which constitute the residence. On the fifth floor there is a laundry room and modern lounge with kitchenette. There is also an outdoor summer deck with facilities for sun-bathing.

Look West Young Man!

Fisheries Minister Davis, in an address to a British Columbia Audience

"There is much more to life, of course, than hard-nosed economics. It has a quality, a particular Canadian quality, as well. In this connection British Columbians can help to introduce a special life style to the Canadian scene. We can give it the zest and we can give it the openness which it so badly needs.

"By openness I mean the opposite to isolationism. I mean welcoming people from other lands who choose to make Canada their home. I mean tolerance for differences in race, color and creed. I mean also a willingness to look facts in the eye and to shift one's ground if we are proven wrong. No ancient fueds for us; no old-style treaties to hobble our imagination. It is the future which all Canadians have in common, not the past. This is B.C.'s thinking today and I hope it is Canadian thinking tomorrow.

"The East needs us on another front as well. It needs the West to give it a sense of size, a sense of grandeur. It needs British Columbia also as a window on the Pacific. It needs our ports as a jumping off place and for contacts with Asia and the Far East.

"We in B.C., are the California, the Oregon and the Washington of Canada combined. Sooner or later, we will earn the same degree of attention from our own national capital.

"It is up to you and me to see that this focussing on the West Coast comes about in a hurry!"

Township Roads Treacherous

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Ameliasburg township roads periodically have been the subject of discussion for years, but never has there been heard more justifiable criticism than during the past two weeks.

Roads were left in extremely hazardous condition for several consecutive days. Immediately west of the village of Rednersville a culvert overflowed onto the road and froze, creating a treacherous mound on the south lane. On Monday of last week, when eastbound motorists had been forced to stop for oncoming traffic before driving around this icy pot-hole, a work crew cleared away the ice. Sand was spread sparingly two days after an accident (which could easily have resulted in a fatality) occurred at Rossmore on Saturday evening.

On the Sunday afternoon, a skating party was held for students at Kente School at Ameliasburg and I had occasion to drive over the route travelled by the school bus my youngster rides. The road had been neither sanded nor plowed and traction on Fingerboard Hill (coming in from the east) was non-existent. And this on the route of a school bus loaded with youngsters! These road conditions prevailed throughout the whole township — a drive on any one of the Ameliasburg roads is an endurance test of driving ability and skill following a snow or freezing rain storm. Our school bus drivers are to be commended for safely transporting our children to and from school over these roads.

Surely motorists (and especially residents who pay taxes for road maintenance) can expect to have better than "passable" conditions on these roads where present maintenance is almost negligible.

Picton School Shows Marks of Vandals

Repair School After Vandals

PICTON — Construction workers are now dismantling portions of Picton's Mary Street School, erected in 1871, to create office space and prevent further vandalism. Members of town council last year agreed that since the school had been closed vandals were tearing the building down piece meal, despite efforts to curb such destruction. It was suggested that a portion of the school could be renovated for office space for town use and workers are now gutting the interior of the condemned section of the brick building.

Henry Leavens, Bloomfield Heads Conservation Body

PICTON — Guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority held last night in Shire Hall was A. S. Barnes, director of all Ontario conservation authorities.

Members of the authorities' education and information advisory board voted last night to review the possibility of doing a survey in Prince Edward County on the problem of non -returnable bottles using schools, students and the department of highways.

Ann Landers

Husband 'Gets an Eye Full'; Wife Disturbed

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My neighbor asked if Iknew where my husband spent most of his noon hour. I replied, "Eating lunch. Where else would he be?" She answered, "Would you believe in Filene's basement?" I was stunned.

She went on to explain that Filene's basement has become a favorite place to get an eyeful. Whenever they have a sale on dresses, which is often, female bargain hunters think nothing of stripping to bra and panties to try on merchandise. I asked, "Why don't they use the dressing rooms?" She replied. "They don't want to wait."

When Dale came home for dinner I asked if what I had heard was true. He said yes, but he added, "I went six or seven times and lost interest."

If Dale was sex-starved I could understand it, but believe me, Ann, he has more than he can handle at home. What's the matter with a man who would do such a thing? Is he sick? — BROOKLINE.

DEAR BROOK: More childish than sick. But Dale's "boredom" suggests that his curiosity has been satisfied, so perhaps he is growing up. I predict the same fate for the stage and movie garbage which is currently so big at the box office. Nudity and gutter language are poor substitutes for talent and imagination. People will get sick of it eventually and demand their money's worth.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a girl 17 with an unusual problem. Last week I went on a blind date, arranged by my cousin. I liked Jim right away. I hope you won't think I'm terrible, but we ended up making out.

All of a sudden Jim said, "You kiss funny." I asked him what he meant by that. He said, "Well, it's like taking a shower with your clothes on." I asked him how I could improve. he said "Practice."

My feelings are hurt, Ann. I've been told I am a very good kisser. Now I'm self-conscious and unsure of myself. Can you give me some helpful hints on how to improve my kissing? — D. FLATED.

DEAR D.: Sorry — this isn't that kind of column. I do have some advice for you, however. Don't be so free with your kisses, kiddo. When you meet a boy you really care deeply about (and you can't possibly make such a decision on the first date), you won't need lessons.

UCW MEETINGS

MELROSE — A joint meeting of the afternoon and evening units of Melrose UCW was held in the basement of Melrose church recently with an attendance of 16.

Mrs. R. Badgley conducted the worship service after which a business period followed the reading of the minutes.

The group accepted an offer to cater to a wedding Aug. 15. Further arrangements will be made at the May meeting.

The matter of a bus trip to Ottawa during tulip time was considered and information regarding transportation will be obtained by a committee.

The World's Day of Prayer will be observed in March and invitations will be extended to surrounding organizations.

The treasurer reported that the net proceeds from catering to the Scout banquet, at Masonic Temple were $208.60. This amount with the balance on hand at the end of 1969 gave a total of $744.90.

The president Mrs. N. Demille, welcomed Mrs. Harrison, the guest speaker for the evening, and her friend Mrs. Colden, to this meeting. Mrs. Harrison, as literature secretary of Belleville Presbytery, recommended a number of books for use in the worship service and chose to read excerpts from same.

Mrs. Harrison, with her accordion accompaniment, led in a sing-song of familiar hymns following which she operated the projector and presented a film on Narcotic Addiction.

Mrs. D. Lazier made a money presentation to Mrs. Harrison and thanked her for the effort she made to be present at this general meeting.

An announcement regarding the year's meetings of the combined units was made. Mrs K. McMeehan gave a short reading and the program concluded.

Lunch was served by the lunch committee and a social time was spent over a cup of tea.

QUEENSBORO UCW

VISION WEAKENS

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Safety League says the amount of light required by the eyes of the older driver doubles every 13 years. A man of 42, in order to see objects at night as clearly as he did when he started driving at 16, needs four times as much. Darkness doubles danger and even the best drivers are warned to slow down at sundown.

Belleville's Bell

The bell which has been ringing out time in Belleville since 1872 caught the interest of Mrs. Lena Purley, Supreme Honored Royal Lady of the Order of the Royal Purple from Woodstock, N.B., as she toured City Hall yesterday afternoon. Pointing out the date on the bell is city personnel director Gerald Hyde, while Lady Joyce Clark (centre) of the local organization looks on.

Honored Royal Lady Makes Official Tour

Mrs. Purley, from Woodstock, N.B., concluded her official visit to Ontario at Belleville. While here she had the pleasure of presenting past Honored Royal Lady Ruth Gordon with a 15-year-pin, at a dinner meeting held at the Elks' Hall Tuesday evening. Prior to the meeting, Honored Royal Lady Rita Francis, president of the Order of the Royal Purple Lodge 164, with Lady Joyce Clarke and Past Honored Royal Lady Ruth Gordon took Mrs. Purley on a tour of the Lanning Hat factory, as well as the Belleville City Hall.

As national president of the Order of the Royal Purple, Mrs. Purley started her official visits of the Canadian provinces in September, allotting a month per province, with return trips to Woodstock after each tour.

During an interview, Mrs. Purley explained the latest national project using the Royal Purple fund for deaf detection and development. Belleville is being considered for the first satellite centre in Ontario, with Belleville Hospital being agreeable to have equipment set up for neo-natal screening and a nurses' workshop for training.

Mother, Daughter Banquet Held

MARMORA — Guides' and Brownies' mother and daughter banquet held Monday evening in the White Hall of St. Paul's Anglican Church was a most enjoyable event.

Captain, Mrs. David Saunders proposed a toast to the Queen and to Lady Baden Powell, wife of the founder of the Movement, who celebrated her 81st birthday recently. After welcoming mothers and daughters, Mrs. Saunders emphasized that the girls need parents' support in their work. "The girls take guiding home with them and live it through the week, and can only do it with the support of parents and those around them," she said.

Captain Saunders introduced head table guests as follows: Cadet Betty Demorest, leader in training, Mrs. Sid Demorest, Brownie Brown Owl, Mrs. Don Walton, Mrs. Lloyd Walton Sr., Kathie and Donna Walton.

She made a number of announcements including: All guides in the area are invited to a rally in Peterborough Friday evening in celebration of Guides and Brownies Diamond Jubilee. Girls are to be in full uniform and meet the bus at the intersection in Marmora at 6.45 p.m.; annual hot cross bun sale this year will be March 21, the week before Easter; meetings in future will be on Monday evenings, the next one to be March 9; girls were commended for their good attendance at the church parade at the Anglican Church on Sunday.

It was noted that the blue and gold company flag is missing. This would be very costly to replace and it is urgently requested that it be returned. Jubilee crests have arrived and will be given out at the next meeting and worn on right cuff for this year only.

Camp crests were presented to Donna Walton and Linda Sweet, and Camp Year Bars to Patty, Colleen and Cathie O'Connor, Marie Lalonde and Janet Maloney.

Donna Walton expressed thanks to the ACW on behalf of the Guides for the meal which was completed with birthday cake to commemorate the Jubilee.

Brown Owl, Mrs. Walton, presented Golden Bars to Laura Beare and Anne Doyle, and Susanne Nesseth was enrolled by Captain Saunders as member of the First Marmora Pack.

Attention was drawn to a Thinking Day project, a group of dressed dolls depicting a pack of Brownies, which will also be displayed at Bennett's Insurance Office.

Enrolled in Guides was Anita Wisti, formerly of Reading USA, who was presented by patrol leader Cathie Smith.

Guider Betty Demorest spoke on last year's program and described the many challenges in guiding. The pennant for September to January was won by the Canary Patrol comprised of Cathie Smith, Cheryl Smith, Anita Wisti and Cathie O'Shea.

Child Nursery at Factory

ELORA, Ont. (CP) — Thomas Bruce wants mothers to work at his furniture factory. Because of that, a furniture plant now being built has 3,000 square feet in it set aside for a nursery.

The nursery will have a sleeping room, a play room and an outside play area. It will be staffed by two registered nurses, two assistant nurses and someone in charge of the kitchen.

Mr. Bruce says he expects the plant to employ about 150 people, including mothers whose children are two to five years old. He says the nursery will save the mothers the expense of baby-sitters and save them mental anguish.

"They won't have to worry and wonder how little Johnny is getting along 20 miles away."

Mr. Bruce is general manager of the Selig division of Simmons Ltd.

Sex Education Classes Encourage Questions

By DORIS CLARK

An imaginative school program in sex education encourages free discussion and questions in class. The following are some of the questions and comments of younger girls and boys:

1. Are sex and sexy the same meaning?

2. I like to talk about our own bodies. I like to know the names of parts of our body.

3. I like to know about the man's body and the woman's body, too. I like to learn how to get a new baby.

4. How do twins happen?

5. Will we talk about how babies are born? I like that very much.

6. Where do freckles come from?

The teachers start by talking about growing up and in the middle school the boys and girls meet separately for these sessions. But information about both sexes is discussed in each group, and a free exchange of ideas and questions is encouraged.

As the classes proceed and the children grow older there is a discussion about how to manage sexual urges, and to understand their own body changes.

DORIS CLARK

All of this goes on at the Clarke School for the Deaf, Northampton, Massachusetts.

Dear Doris: I want to counteract the sour taste after reading the criticism by Just Pat.

I think your column is just fine, and that it fills a need for a lot of people. People who do not look around, fail to see how many there are who are distressed or lonely and need a shoulder to rest on for a little while.

Long may your column continue! — E. S.

Dear E.S.: Thank you for your warm sentiment.

• • •

Dear Doris: Tim says things like "I like a girl who believes in free love," and he also said that I remind him of a teaser during the day and a pleaser during the night, and he means them as compliments.

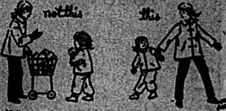
He also keeps track of how many guys I am with during the night, meaning who I sit and talk with and dance with. The other night he said I was with four and I was only with two.

We only know each other through these parties but I think he likes me and I like him. So how can I see him more? We don't go to the same school. — Sunshine

Dear Sunshine: If you go by me you'll see him less. Tim spells trouble. His remarks are far too suggestive, little Fifteen-Year-Old.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Betty, why must you act so naughty in the store? I told you we couldn't buy any cookies today. Oh, stop crying. I'll get them this time, but I'll never take you shopping with me again."

Mother: "You know if you don't behave in the store, we will go right home. It annoys other people when you cry for things I can't buy. I'll go to the store later and you will have to stay home with Grandma."

Children must learn — and they might as well do it while young — that throwing a tantrum in public is not a rewarding act.

'Today's Young More Concerned with People' Says Retired Librarian

MONTREAL (CP) — Margaret Edwards, a retired specialist librarian for young adults, says "this is the best generation of young people we've ever had."

"Despite their raucous music, sexy dancing and drug-taking, they're intelligent, well-educated and above all really interested in social problems," she said in an interview.

"They're not prejudiced. Their concern for the poor is genuine and I hope to see them completely overturn the materialism of our previous generation—mine—which was almost solely concerned with homes in the suburbs, two cars in the garage and isolating the riff-raff.

"The young of today, who are more concerned with people than with high salaries, will usher in a new day for the world."

Mrs. Edwards has been closely associated with young people for 46 years. After 30 years as head of young adult work at the Enoch Pratt Library in Baltimore, she now visits Montreal to lecture at McGill University and gives seminars at Rutgers University and the University of Texas.

Her McGill assignment at the Graduate School of Library Science involves being there for a month each year. She has been doing it since 1965.

"It is an intensive course—2.5 hours of lecturing every night—dealing with the introduction of adult literature to teen-agers."

In her spare time since retirement, Mrs. Edwards has written a book about libraries and young adults called The Fair Garden and the Swarms of Beasts.

The title was derived from a quotation found in an old 18th century almanac.

"I read an article written by an old librarian named Bean. He warned librarians to be careful whom they allowed into libraries—to be particularly suspicious of women, because their presence deteriorated from scholarship—and, under no circumstances, to let teen-agers into libraries."

After a short career as a teacher and four summers at Columbia University to earn a master's degree in library science, Mrs. Edwards went right into work with teen-agers.

"It is kind of hopeless to work with adults," she explained, "and I'm a bit scared of little children.

"It is an important area but I'm not suited to it. For me, working with teen-agers is a real pleasure."

Her present life of travelling and lecture tours "has been wonderful, even if it is not as I planned."

"I long ago determined to retire by 60 at the latest, because it is my belief that a woman of 60 should get out of the way of younger people."

Now 67, Mrs. Edwards originally meant to retire to a farm about 20 miles from Baltimore, which she bought and stocked with Herefords when her late husband, a school principal, retired.

If there is anything wrong with librarians, it is that they "sit too much," she said. "They are too concerned with dispensing information and the mechanics of 'getting books on and off shelves.'"

They should spend their time "stimulating people and giving them vision."

"Librarians should be able to give people a point of view about controversial books. They must read them and let youngsters read them and be ready to discuss the books with the youngsters."

Mrs. Edwards is against "hot shelves" or places where books with "ugly words" are locked up so people can't read them.

"If a book is good enough for the library to buy, it should be freely available to all. Librarians should stand up to parents and have the courage to defend a book that has value even if it does contain some ugly words."

Comparing today's young people with her generation, she said:

"We read Elinor Glyn and didn't care a hoot for anyone else. The age of jazz and the roaring '20s produced a hollow generation that was mostly surface.

"We were proper but our minds were often dirty. We were hung up with ugly words; teen-agers today are not. They may be unconventional but their minds are clean. They don't read to hunt out sex passages or ugly words. They know all about sex and are more interested in reading about people and problems."

What about the future of libraries?

"It is the teenagers who are abandoning TV. They read better than teen-agers of a generation ago and are reading older books at earlier ages.

"They read more seriously than adults and want really good books which they can relate to present problems and emergencies."

Liver Stroganoff Tempting Dish

By MARY MOORE

Here is the story. The men at a buffet supper ate all of the Liver Stroganoff in the chafing dish. They were not being selfish. They had lined up politely behind the girls, but the girls had started serving themselves at the centre of the table and turned left. The men at the end of the queue found themselves in front of the steaming chafing dish of Liver Stroganoff and alerted those fellows in front. Result: they took it all, assuming the girls had started at the near end of the table.

Settled and eating in the living-room one husband said to his wife "Best liver I ever tasted." "What liver?" "In the chafing dish." "I didn't see that." "Well it's all gone now."

And here is the liver dish and I agree with the husband — best liver yet.

LIVER STROGANOFF (serves 4 or 5—could be served in chafing dish)

1 lb. beef liver cut in 2 x ½" strips
Flour
3 tbsps. butter
One 10-oz. can mushrooms stems and pieces
One 10-oz. can ready - to-serve mushroom soup
½ cup chopped onion (or 3 tbsps. bottled instant onion)
½ cup hot water
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ tsp. salt
1-16 tsp. pepper
One 6-oz. can evaporated milk

In fairly hot frypan melt butter. Dredge liver strips all over with flour and saute gently in the butter until gold — about three or four min., moving them about constantly.

(NOTE: At this stage the liver tastes great and you could serve it as is.)

Skim meat from pan and set aside on large plate. Drain mushrooms. Reserve liquid. Add mushrooms and onions to pan and cook stirring for two min. on medium heat. Stir in mushroom liquid, soup, water and seasonings. Return meat to pan and simmer gently for 8 to 10 min. Add evaporated milk, bring just to boil and serve over Fluffy Boiled Rice prepared by cooking together in heavy pot 1 cup raw long grain rice with 1 tsp. salt in 2 cups boiling water, covered, 30 min.

Liver Stroganoff may be served on boiled noodles if desired.

Tasty refreshments were served under the convenership of Mrs. Wanda Clare PM and Mrs. Isobel Jones and their committees.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: I shall be travelling from Kingston to Jamaica, New York, by the New York Thru-way. Where do I connect on to 9A to reach 37th and 11th Ave. to Midtown tunnel and 24 to Jamaica?

ANSWER: The quickest and best way to reach Jamaica, New York, is to stay on the New York Thruway to The Major Deegan Expressway, which by-passes Manhattan on the east. Take this to the Brucker Expressway, turn south here over the Triboro Bridge. Take Grand Central Parkway to Van Wyck Expressway and exit off this on No. 24 east to Jamaica, New York. There are very few exits if you use 9A and then you would have to travel through busy New York streets to reach Midtown Tunnel.

QUESTION: Please name some of the main tourist attractions in Florida for adults and children, and also the admission charge, if possible. This is our first trip to Florida.

ANSWER: You can tour the Space Centre at Cape Kennedy for $2.50 adults, $1.25 youth or 50 cents for children. Pirates World is south of Fort Lauderdale, at Dania. It costs $3.75 for adults and $2.75 for children but there are 110 acres of exhibits and rides and they are all free.

Cypress Gardens is a great attraction if you like water skiing. Then there are the Parrot Jungle, Seaquarium, Monkey Jungle, Wax Museum and Hialeah Race Track at Miami Beach. The Lion Country Safari is a 640-acre park near West Palm Beach. This is very interesting for children, admission for adults $2.50, children $1.25. Here you can drive through the park and observe lions, chimps, elephants, rhinos and giraffes.

At Fort Lauderdale you can take a three-hour sightseeing cruise on the Jungle Queen. This costs $3 for adults and $1.50 for children. They have two trips a day from the Bahia Mar Yacht Centre. There are 290 miles of palm-lined lagoons, canals and rivers. As the Jungle Queen sails along, a guide will point out the well known mansions you are passing and identify the local plant life.

QUESTION: When will Disney World near Orlando, Florida, open?

Construction work on the Walt Disney World 16 miles southwest of Orlando is progressing favorably. The first phase of this big entertainment complex will open October 1971.

QUESTION: I am flying to England in June. Where may I obtain a passport application and what do they cost?

ANSWER: Passport application forms are now available at Post Offices across Canada. The new passports are good for five years and cost $10. You will need documentary proof of Canadian citizenship, vaccination, and two identical passport photos. It is supposed to take four weeks to get a passport but it sometimes takes a lot longer, so it would be wise to send your application in as soon as possible before the spring rush gets underway.

QUESTION: Is it a good buy to purchase a demonstrator automobile?

ANSWER: That depends. If it has been driven by a lot of people as a test car, chances are it has suffered from some bad handling. On the other hand if it has been driven by employees of the dealer as a show car it is probably a good buy. There usually is a substantial saving on the price of the car, usually up to $500. If it has been driven carefully and has a true low mileage, this is quite a saving.

Bertrand Opens Campaign

Ceremony Is Simple as Quebec Assembly Opens

QUEBEC (CP) — The national assembly of Quebec Tuesday began another session with good old-fashioned politics wrapped in a new package.

Old was the campaigning of the politicians, preparing for a general election which could be called in Quebec province any day.

New was the ceremony, centred on the premier as government leader rather than on the lieutenant-governor as Queen's representative.

The inaugural speech, read by Lt.-Gov. Hugues Lapointe, lasted four minutes and didn't say a thing about the Union Nationale government's legislative program.

The premier's speech, read by Union Nationale Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand, lasted nearly an hour, but there was no talk about legislation.

The proposed legislation was announced early Tuesday on the order paper of the assembly, which listed 31 bills to be brought before the house.

Included is legislation on consumer protection, medical care insurance and air pollution. Plans are to introduce all bills quickly.

Mr. Bertrand told a news conference government has 50 other bills prepared for study.

The premier made what he admitted was an election speech, praising his Union Nationale government and haranguing the Liberal Opposition.

He dismissed the new Liberal party leader, Robert Bourassa, as "the voice of his master," Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Bertrand said Quebecers would make more headway at Ottawa if political parties here united in "a sacred union" to defend the province's interests.

The premier said Rene Leveque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, is a politician who had come up with what he described as the wrong answer to the right problems.

He said the Union Nationale had done more to develop Quebec's economy than any other political party.

Mr. Bertrand attacked Prime Minister Trudeau as "unyielding, to firm, arrogant and negative" in his dealings with the provinces. "He doesn't negotiate. He is federal infallibility."

The premier said if Mr. Trudeau maintains this attitude, the central government would have to accept the blame for building separatism in Quebec.

A sensational variety of home conveniences for you and your family.

Nobody Knows Yet When Foreign Policy Paper Will Be Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — Work on the government's long-heralded white paper on Canadian foreign policy is moving along but it has not reached the point where anyone knows for sure when it will see the light of day.

Informed sources say it's uncertain at the moment whether there will be one white paper or six white papers.

Another possibility: one white paper and five appendices.

This slightly fuzzy picture results from the fact that the foreign policy review undertaken shortly after Prime Minister Trudeau took office has encompassed five distinctive areas of policy in addition to the study of general principles.

They are: Latin America, Europe, the United Nations, international development aid, and the Pacific. Each has been exhaustively studied by interdepartmental committees, whose basic work now has been largely completed.

The general policy statement, when it comes, will owe a lot to the spade work done by these various committees. But whether their printed reports are to have a life of their own, or form part of the over-all statement of principles, is a question not yet settled.

The government has promised to produce the white paper for the present session of Parliament, expected to end sometime this summer.

Its exact timing apparently depends on the speed with which the cabinet acts upon material sent up to it by a small committee of officials. It could conceivably come before Easter.

In addition to the external affairs department, other departments having a direct interest in foreign policy—such as trade and commerce and defence—have made inputs into the policy-making process.

An informed source was careful not to use the word recommendations in referring to the material being placed before cabinet ministers. Instead he used the phrase "topics of discussion."

It is understood that heavy emphasis is being placed on outlining optional lines of policy, with the officials generally not committing themselves to one line or another.

This may be a reaction to the experience of last year when external affairs officials made recommendations to the cabinet which, it is believed, called for a generally unchanged Canadian policy towards NATO.

Rejecting the advice, Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet decided instead on a drastic reduction of Canada's military contribution to NATO and a reorientation of Canadian defence policy towards North America.

Eagleson Wants Provincial Election on White Paper

TORONTO (CP) — R. Alan Eagleson, president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, said Tuesday he would welcome a provincial election on the issue of the federal white paper on taxation, which he described as a socialist document.

Mr. Eagleson said the federal Liberal government has effectively "pre-empted the New Democratic Party position" in its proposal for taxation reform.

He told a meeting of the Eglinton Young Progressive Conservative Association the NDP has so far been reluctant to offer judgment on the proposals.

"For a socialist there is nothing to criticise in the . . . white paper. It is the kind of approach that the NDP themselves would have taken."

Mr. Eagleson's speech was the first public suggestion by a senior party official that the government should call a provincial election on the issue.

"In my opinion, a provincial election would give the people of Ontario the opportunity to register an overwhelming protest to the Trudeau white paper and might just force a complete reassessment of its proposals.

"I consider this document as one which seeks to subvert the power of the provinces, to weaken the voice and the will of the people, and to advance the centralist position of the Trudeau government. In that context it is no longer the Benson white paper, but the Trudeau white paper."

Talent Flocks to Festival

Morning, Noon and Night in Belleville It's Now Music, Music and More Music

There's music — and plenty of it — in the air in Belleville this week.

Now hitting full stride is the city's second Rotary Music Festival.

By numbers it's now safely ensconced as the biggest event of its kind in the city's annual calendar of community projects.

The number of entries are up some 25 per cent from the first festival launched in 1969.

In all, about 3,000 people are participating, as soloists, in groups and choirs.

For the participants, it's primary significance lies with the adjudications they receive, imparting to them a finer understanding of the world of music.

For audiences, it graphically emphasizes the infinite varieties of the world of music. It is a scope which is illustrated by the events of the festival as reported on this page.

Diploma Winner

Linda Beswick, 10, sits proudly in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with a first-place diploma she earned yesterday afternoon at the Second Annual Rotary Music Festival.

Accurate Base Needed for News

Student protest movements well meaning but ill-informed "do-good" missions such as the Biafra relief, and erroneous reporting by modern day news media came under attack in Belleville last night by a Winnipeg newspaperman.

Shaun Herron, editorial writer for the Winnipeg Free Press and well koown lecturer, radio and television writer, was speaking to members of the Canadian Club on "Canada — The New Mood".

Mr. Herron was especially critical of student and other protest movements headed by "ill - informed and radical" protesters.

He said it was impossible to have dialogue with these people who felt that to change society they must first destroy.

Today's high schools were too large to allow any degree of personal attention and thousands of students going into university "factories" can hope only for instruction rather than an education.

Fifty per cent of the students entering the huge University of Manitoba were found to be in need of remedial reading — and the situation was worse in Ontario than in Manitoba.

Turning to misinformation spread by the news media, Mr. Herron said that the recent Biafra relief program was the most shameful hour in religious journalism and one of the most stupid.

He said 10,000 Africans died each week from disease, but this was never mentioned in the press or by former CBC commentator Stanley Burke who headed a Biafran relief movement.

If, on the basis of the relief propaganda, Biafra had won out, Mr. Herron said the bloodiest tribal war in all African history would have ensued.

"Blood would have flown like water down the St. Lawrence," he said.

Another glaring example of misinformation spread by the news media were divorce statistics which indicated the marriage break-up in the USA was almost one in three marriages.

Actually, however, Mr. Herron said the divorce rate south of the border was only one in 109.

During a later question period Mr. Herron agreed that drug use had been spread more by the news media than by any other single factor.

SHAUN HERRON

Now a special enquiry was to be made on the effect of the use of marijuana with the result that the findings of one brief enquiry could be accepted. Mr. Herron said it would be much better to go to Egypt or some other country with a long history of drug usage.

Personally, Mr. Herron said, he would never think of writing an editorial solely on the basis of a news report. He first wanted to check the facts.

Young Talent Commended At City Music Festival

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

The evening session of the Rotary Music Festival at Belleville Collegiate last night yielded a number of first-place winners as well as good music.

Adjudicated by Sidney Harrison, the evening was crammed with accordion duets, brass quartets and violin solos.

In Class 681 (accordion duets for 18 years and under) the combination of Josie Pecek and Ruth Hills won them not only the praise of the adjudicator, but netted 87 marks and first place.

Three brass quartets competed in class 206 (for 17 years and under) — two groups representing the Sea Cadets and one from Moira Secondary School.

Moira's quartet captured first with a total of 83 points and the first group of Sea Cadets to perform went home with a second place certificate and a total of 76 marks.

As for the violin soloists, Mr. Harrison had a few words of criticism to pass on to both Kerry Stratton and Peter James (class 167 and class 166) concerning not only how they played but how it looked.

Mr. Harrison praised Kerry Stratton's treatment of the selection "Salut D'Amour", indicating his only criticism as far as Kerry's musical prowess was concerned was to say simply: "If it can be played this well, why can't it be played better?"

He remarked he could find no fault in either specific tones, pauses or inflections, but that the only thing that could happen was for the piece to be played utilizing a greater degree of skill.

Kerry, who played in the class for 18 years and under, was awarded 87 marks for first place.

Playing in the 20 years and under class, fourteen-year-old Peter James was awarded 85 points — also a first.

Mr. Harrison said his efforts had great potential.

"You have a lot to offer your audience, but you must make them listen, you must put more of yourself into your playing. On the whole, it was very well done," he added.

In class 21, piano solos for 16 years and under, Jill Miller was awarded first place and 86 marks. Second was Jerry Fontyn with 80 and third, Thomas Aquino, 82. Marilee Jones scored 78 points.

Mr. Harrison took the better part of 20 minutes explaining to soloists the necessity for using what he called "imagination" and "discovery" in playing the piano.

"You cannot play the piano by rules," he said to the soloists, "you must use your intelligence to guide you, you must feel the notes and above all be graceful in your movements when you are performing," Mr. Harrison remarked.

Whether Seven or 20 It's A Chance to Sing

Bruce Pearce is seven, he sings, plays the mellophone and goes to public school.

Kathy Smithrim is 20, sings mezzo, and is studying for her bachelor of music degree at Toronto University.

Both have the Rotary Music Festival in common and typify the broad range of its participation displayed on the event's first day yesterday.

Last night, during the festival's voice and choral sessions staged at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Bruce was the youngest soloist. He placed third in the class for boys under 11 years.

He also placed third in last year's festival and likely will enter the 1971 event.

Kathy, a Trentonian, also participated in last year's festival. Yesterday, she sang in three different solo sections to win high marks of 87 from adjudicator Ranken Bushby.

She was back again today and will sing for the fourth time Thursday.

Kathy's reason for entering the festival is in line with one of the event's primary objectives. She's there not so much to compete but to take advantage of the adjudication — the advice and constructive criticism of professional front - ranking musicians.

Adjudication marks given at St. Andrew's last night were:

Church choirs (30 voices or less) — St. Andrew's Church, 160.

Junior choirs (14 years and under) — Tabernacle United Church, 82; St. Andrew's Church, 79.

Soprano — Ann Colebourne, 87.

Boys' solo (11 years and under) — Steven Levick, 84; Andrew Plane, 83; Bruce Pearce, 80.

Mezzo — Kathy Smithrim, 87; Rosslyn Robertson, 82; Elsie Keates, 79.

Contralto—Shirley Wiegand, 87.

Baritone — Colin Robbins, 87.

Contestants Benefit From Adjudications

The second annual Rotary Music Festival offers more for Belleville musicians and vocalists than an opportunity to compete for prizes.

Notable is the instruction given by festival judges Ranken Bushby and Sidney Harrison, during adjudication.

During a piano solo competition yesterday afternoon at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where the primary emphasis is on vocalists, young pianists, 10 years and under, were given a 15 - minute instruction concerning the music they had played and the piano and music itself.

Mr. Bushby, through a series of questions, illustrated a number of musical technicalities and some aspects of musical art to the young musicians, instruction that will be beneficial in future competitions and performances.

Of the 24 in the piano solo class, 22 competed for top marks. First was Linda Beswick with 85 marks. Ursula Berger was second with 84 marks. Jane Miliken and Catherine Stam tied for third with 83 marks each.

Following a mid - afternoon break, school choirs took over the activity at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

In the grade one choirs class, Queen Elizabeth School placed first with 84 points. Queen Victoria School, the only other competitor in this class, was second with 83 points.

St. Joseph's School took first place with 84 points in the grade two choir classification. Queen Victoria School placed second with 83 points.

In the grade three classification for school choirs, Queen Victoria School and St. Mary's School in Trenton tied for first place honors with 84 points each.

Canadians Said Too Casual About Natural Resources

Canadians are all too casual about their natural resources and their natural surroundings.

This is the claim of Douglas Sadler of Warkworth, director and past president of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists who spoke at the annual dinner meeting of the Quinte Field Naturalist Club at Eastminster United Church.

Mr. Sadler compared the misuse and abuse of natural resources to the actions of ancient vandals who, sweeping into civilization and finding the marble benches of palaces hard and cold for sleeping, pulled down priceless tapestries for use as bedding.

The speaker said that ignorance of the long - range effect of the way Canadians treat their environment is no excuse and that the Federation of Ontario Naturalists with which Quinte naturalists are affiliated, is drawing attention to the seriousness of the situation.

Bird watchers and other field naturalists are no longer limited to Boy Scouts and small elderly women with binoculars, but rather, are vital, vocal and well informed groups who are in the forefront of the struggle to preserve the environment from uncontrolled development and so - called improvement, he said.

The meeting honored charter members of the club who were presented with suitably inscribed copies of "Birds of Prince Edward County" by Terry Sprague, Big Island. Now in its 23rd year, the Club is active and continuing its work in upgrading members in a knowledge of the Quinte region's ecology.

Following dinner served by the women of the church, the meeting closed with the showing of slides taken by Mr. Sadler.

Festival Players Learn

There's More to Music Than Just Sitting Down to Play

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

As spectators and participants in the Second Annual Rotary Music Festival are beginning to learn, there is more to music than just sitting down and playing an instrument.

Instrumental adjudicator, Sidney Harrison, yesterday afternoon explained this aspect of musical performance to those involved in sessions at BCIVS.

"Music is an art of action and movement," Mr. Harrison said during one of his adjudications. "You must use a variety of actions to play the piano."

In yet another case, he complimented a pair of performers for their bows after their turn at the piano, not really part of playing but an aspect of performance just the same.

Mr. Harrison, after one performance, felt it "nice" that the girls in a piano duet had seen fit to wear the same colored dress.

He described one performance as good but the players played heavier on some keys than others despite the fact they had good touch and tone.

One classification, he felt, should show a little more ambition, especially in next year's festival. He felt that performances could be more completely "finished."

Mary Pope and Michelle Stratton, led off the afternoon activities at the collegiate with a violin duet for violinists 14 years of age and under. The pair accumulated 81 marks.

In the cornet or trumpet solo for musicians 15 years of age and under Terry Marck took first place with 84 marks. Douglas Pyne and Robert Graham took second and third with 83 and 82 marks respectively.

In the classification for 12 years and under in the cornet or trumpet solo William Cailes placed first with 83 marks. Roger Sprague was second with 75 marks.

The accordion class for 13 years of age and under netted Lois Martin first, with 88 marks. Denise Rhodenhizer was second with 85 marks.

For 12 years and under, Clyde Dawson took the accordion honors with 88 marks. Brenda Pearson was second with 83 points.

It's Words Then Tune And Song

By NANCY BARRIAGE
Staff Reporter

"It is important to remember that words come first, tune second and the whole song third before one starts to sing," advised Ranken Bushby, adjudicator at St. Andrew's Church for Rotary Music Festival competitors yesterday.

At the end of each performance Mr. Bushby elucidated his ratings in a sincere and straightforward manner and tried to make the performers see exactly where they may have gone wrong. However, he did not forget to praise their efforts.

Marks awarded in the morning session were: Girls' Triple Trio - 17 years and under: Queen Alexandra School Girls Triple Trio (78); Harry J. Clarke School Triple Trio 2 - (76); Harry J. Clarke School Triple Trio - 1 (75); School chorus grades 7 and 8, Harry J. Clarke School (162); Queen Alexandra School (153); Class 9, Harry J. Clarke School (83); Class 92, School Chorus grades 7 and 8, Queen Alexandra School (83) and Harry J. Clarke School (82).

Class 150 was a Girls' Solo, 18 years and under with five girls competing. Here Mr. Bushby explained how to punctuate the song, where to pause and other helpful hints. Winners in this class were Janice Smith, 85; Gail Shaw, 84; Diane Duffy, 83; Connie Vardy, 83 and Sandra Windsor, 82.

Class 153 was a Girls' Solo, 12 years and under. Marks awarded were Mary Wonnacott, 85; Lee Fleming, 84; Mary Elizabeth Cronk, 83 and Cheryl Ashbury, 82.

Mikita's Corset No Restriction On Scoring Bulge

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Sometimes the puck goes in and sometimes it doesn't," said Stan Mikita, the man who right now finds the puck going into the net for him at a rapid rate.

Despite a back ailment which forces him to wear a corset, the Chicago Black Hawks centre has put on a late-season burst to push his goal-scoring total to 35, tops in the National Hockey League.

Mikita and his team-mates have their eyes on a playoff spot, and that is the reason the 29-year-old Czech-born player gives for his scoring success.

"Every time I go on the ice I try to go all out," he said.

"We have 19 games to play. Our next six games are on the road. If we can break even or better on this road trip, I think we'll be in good shape for a Stanley Cup playoff spot. That's all I'm thinking of."

The Hawks, now holding fourth spot in the Eastern Division, a point ahead of Detroit Red Wings, will certainly have to do better than break even to keep pace. The Red Wings have held the last playoff spot most of the season and lost it to the Hawks only last Sunday due to a 1-0 shutout at the hands of Montreal Canadiens.

Mikita says his back has been so painful it was difficult for him to get up some mornings.

"I would struggle up, walk around slowly and gradually start moving better," he said. "Then I would have rub downs and go out and play.

"I wear this corset day and night now. I've worn it for one full game and two-thirds of another. It restricts my movements and breathing a little and I can't stay out there as long."

Mikita said he suffered the back injury in a game last year and it got worse this season.

"At first the doctor said the only thing that would help would be a complete rest for a couple of weeks. Well, I certainly couldn't do that with us trying to sew up a playoff spot. The corset seems the answer."

Another player bothered by recurring back trouble is Ralph Backstrom of the Canadiens, who will miss tonight's game when Pittsburgh Penguins visit Montreal.

The Canadiens are also without left winger John Ferguson and utility forward Christian Bordeleau, both recovering from fractured cheekbones, but right winger Bobby Rousseau will be back in the lineup tonight. Rousseau sat out last weekend's games with a groin injury.

Back in the Toronto Maple Leafs lineup against visiting Oakland Seals tonight will be defenceman Jim Dorey, who has recovered from a knee injury.

Chuvalo Warned

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — If George Chuvalo of Toronto does not defend his Canadian heavyweight title by May 1 the Canadian Boxing Federation will withdraw recognition of his championship, the national commissioner Dick Pearson, said Tuesday.

Pearson said he understood an opponent for Chuvalo would be the winner of a March 16 fight in Toronto between Charlie Chase of Montreal and Frankie Bullard of Toronto.

Ashley Fined ?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Tribune said Tuesday referee John Ashley and two linesmen have been fined for a rule misinterpretation in a National Hockey League game Feb. 19 in Chicago.

The newspaper said the fines were handed down by referee in chief Scotty Morrison, but no amount was mentioned.

Ashley, the newspaper said, erroneously allowed Chicago Black Hawks' Keith Magnuson to leave the penalty box after Minnesota North Stars scored in their 3-2 loss to Chicago.

Chicago's Pit Martin already was in the penalty box and the rule states that only the player who made his team shorthanded can leave the box when a goal is scored.

Danny O'Shea was penalized at the same time as Magnuson.

Mauch Banks on Newcomers To Bolster Pitching Ranks

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Montreal Expos moved into their second day of full-scale workouts at spring training today with six members of the roster missing and manager Gene Mauch viewing a rebuilding process with almost rosy optimism.

Of the absentees, only third baseman Coco Laboy was a regular last season. He arrived from Puerto Rico Tuesday and signed his 1970 contract.

Mauch's rebuilding process, almost constant last season in Montreal's debut in baseball's National League, was the main topic of conversation with the field manager.

He reiterated an earlier prediction that he is looking for a minimum of 70 wins this season from a club that won only 52 of 162 scheduled games last season.

"And I mean minimum," Mauch added.

In general, Mauch said he found that the 1969 tail-enders had three major weaknesses—inexperienced pitching, inadequate catching and a shortstop problem until Bobby Wine showed full recovery from a back operation late in the season.

Mauch is counting heavily on two new acquisitions to the pitching staff, plus a few regulars from last season who should show improvement.

The newcomers are Joe Sparma, six years with Detroit Tigers of the American League, and Jim Britton, two years with the National League's Atlanta Braves. Sparma's won-lost record last season was 6-8 and Britton's 7-5.

The holdovers include Bill Stoneman, 11-19, Dan McGinn, 7-10, and Steve Renko, 6-7. McGinn and Don Shaw are the only two southpaws on the roster.

"Our catching admittedly was weak," Mauch added. "But with better pitching you usually find that the catching improves also.

"If it's not better we'll get somebody else."

It turned out last year that young Ron Brand did the bulk of the catching and hit .258. Big John Bateman's work fell off. He suffered a finger injury and hit .209. John Boccabella, currently taking extra batting instruction, hit a woeful .105 last season.

"Our offence wasn't bad," said Mauch. "Defensively, we are getting stronger, certainly with Ron Fairly on hand for a full season at first base."

Fairly was acquired last June from Los Angeles Dodgers and was potent in the remaining 70 games as he hit .289 and supplied the long-ball belting the club needed.

In addition to a strong fielding effort, Fairly hit 13 doubles, four triples, 12 homers and drove in 39 runs.

Mauch is taking time this year to stress fundamentals, a factor he found necessary after last season when several of the regulars were found lacking in the basics.

"I assumed they were already well versed in the fundamentals," he said. "But I found out differently—this year they'll spend more time in the field where they are going to learn them."

Indictment Names Diz

DETROIT (AP) — Federal court arraignments are scheduled Monday for 10 men indicted by a grand jury investigating country-wide gambling and its relationship to the sports world.

The indictments, made public Tuesday, named baseball Hall of Fame pitcher Jerome (Dizzy) Dean as one of six co-conspirators, but not a defendant.

Dean and his nephew, Paul Dean Jr., were alleged in the indictments to have placed bets with three defendants from Biloxi, Miss., in behalf of Howard Sober, 74, a Lansing, Mich., trucking executive. Sober also has been named a co-conspirator.

None of the seven Michigan men and three from Biloxi, Miss., indicted by the grand jury, are sports figures.

The 10 are charged with using the telephone between states in violation of federal gambling laws to exchange information on odds, "place bets, payoff bets, and accept bets on horse racing and sports events."

U.S. District Attorney James Brickley said the indictments had no relationship with testimony given to the grand jury a week ago by Detroit Tiger pitcher Denny McLain, which he said involved "a separate matter."

Allen Gives Cards Break

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Richie Allen's asking price and Ken Harrelson's ears have been lowered considerably, giving St. Louis Cardinals a dubious gain of $15,000 and Harrelson's barber a solid windfall of $15.

Allen's salary impasse with the Cardinals, who liberated him from Philadelphia Phillies last fall in the Curt Flood trade, was lessened somewhat Tuesday when the controversial slugger reduced his original demand of $155,000 to $140,000.

Jim Toomey, the St. Louis assistant general manager, confirmed that some adjustment had been made, but added, "We're still not close to an agreement."

Harrelson, meanwhile arrived in Cleveland Indians' camp at Tucson, Ariz., and was immediately offered an option: Have his shoulder-length tresses trimmed or face a $1,000 fine.

"I figure I saved myself $985," said Harrelson after shelling out $15 to a hair stylist. "It's probably the best investment I ever made."

Harrelson, beginning the second year of a two-year contract, passed manager Alvin Dark's post-haircut inspection and joined his team-mates in the club's first full-scale workout, conducted without unsigned first baseman Tony Horton.

Horton became an official holdout with passing of the Indians' reporting date for regulars, as did Bobby Murcer, Horace Clarke and Jerry Kenney of New York Yankees, among others.

Belleville Mo-Hawks' Steve Rexe makes a one-point landing after kicking out a Kingston drive during last night's 7-5 OHA Senior A win by the host Aces. Meanwhile defencemen Bob Wilson and Greg Marchen make sure that the Aces' Rod Graham also has a front row seat for the performance.

Aces Draw First Blood, But Do Most of Bleeding

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

KINGSTON — Who deserved to win last night's Belleville Kingston OHA Senior A playoff opener?

Answering that one might hang a jury, but the verdict is unanimous about one thing:

Following last night's free-wheeling 7-5 first blood by the host Aces, Saturday night's second instalment in Belleville promises to be a classic among the two - city rivalries.

The Mo-Hawks played perhaps their best two periods on Kingston ice this year, got Grade A 'large' goaltending, yet still found themselves fighting a losing third-period comeback battle.

Playing coach Davey Jones came up with one good reason: the lack of an effective third line that has plagued the Mo-Hawks all year.

Bill Armour, Wayne McConnell, and John Baker were on the ice for no less than five of the Kingston goals without contributing a point to the Belleville scoring cause.

"If we can't get some action out of a third line Saturday, we'll just go with two—it's as simple as that," fumed Jones after watching his club record their biggest goal output in Kingston this year.

"Five goals on the road is enough to win a hockey game. But you've got to have 15 guys working with it."

The third line lost most of its zip when Ray Johnston left the game after taking Rod Graham's unpenalized cross-check in the face during the first period.

Johnston may play Saturday night wearing a face-guard to protect a badly - bruised cheekbone, originally thought to be broken.

Johnston was more fortunate than a pair of Aces. Neither rugged defenceman Bob Olajos nor winger Tom Smallman returned to action after first-period collisions with the Mo-Hawks' Ralph Plane.

Olajos is out for the season with a broken kneecap as a result of an apparently harmless brush with Plane behind the Kingston net. Smallman was unfortunate to run into what Jones called "the best body-check I ever saw Ralphie throw". Smallman was helped from the ice holding a towel to a neck laceration.

Plane continued to be one of the Mo-Hawk sparkplugs, picking up a solo-effort third-period goal, and earning an assist in addition to taking two Aces from the Kingston deck.

Second-period goals by linemates Lorne O'Donnell and George Godson put the Mo-Hawks on their only even footing of the game, at 2-2. But Fred O'Donnell's sharp-angle shot near the end of the period gave the Aces the lead for keeps.

O'Donnell beat Steve Rexe three times in all. Bob Clayton hit for two, and Rod Graham and Charlie Convery added singles.

Jones and Al Ferguson caught Neil Perry flat-footed with long sizzlers in the third period, but the comeback bid was too late. Ferguson's goal came with only 15 seconds remaining in the game.

The Mo-Hawks missed enough first-period scoring opportunities to win two hockey games. Lorne O'Donnell shot wide on one, and Perry robbed Jones in alone from the side on another.

It was one of two good stops the Aces' goalie made all night. The five Mo-Hawk goals were the products of only 21 shots.

Plane's goal was almost a video-replay of the goal he scored on Perry to give the Mo-Hawks a 1-1 tie in their last regular-season meeting in Belleville.

He rushed up the right side, held off a Kingston defenceman with one arm, and jammed the puck past Perry with the other.

RALPH PLANE

Plane squared off with Charlie Convery late in the third period, but the scrappy Aces' forward decided it was a better course of action to hang onto his stick than try and swing it out with the Mo-Hawk captain.

Seconds later Bob Wilson tied the Aces' Hugh Harvey up in his sweater when the Kingston rookie decided he should tackle a 13-year pro hockey veteran.

If a goalkeeper can be sensational and have seven goals go by him, that's what Steve Rexe was.

Most of the 38 shots that came Rexe's way were tough chances, many screened.

At one time or another during the game, Rexe beat Bob Clayton, Hugh Harvey, Rod Graham, and Fred O'Donnell in alone. He stopped point shots by Jim Gebhardt and John Ford that came out of nowhere.

Of the seven goals that beat him, one trickled in off defenceman Lionel Botly's skate another resulted when Kingston centre Bob Clayton walked in unmolested after taking a draw in the Belleville end, and two were the result of loose pucks that should have been cleared.

Two Kingston goals came on power-play situations.

Game time for Saturday night's return bout in Belleville is 8 p.m.

Printers Take Flying-Leap In 14-5 Pasting by Oshawa

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Like the Arctic lemming's small rodents of the northland which gather every so often to march to the ocean and take a fatal, flying - leap, the Belleville Ellis Printers appeared to be doing everything in their power to commit playoff suicide last night.

The 14-5 margin of victory by the Oshawa Crushmen was indicative of the play in the Eastern Ontario Junior B playoff opener. As team manager Jim Matthews put it: "They played 60 minutes of hockey and we played five."

JOHN MULVIHILL

Coach Floyd Crawford was naturally unhappy with his team's performance, but felt that much of the reason for their dismal effort could be attributed to the fact that it was their first playoff action. "We've got too good a hockey team to fold like that", says Crawford, "Kids who have paid their own way on the bus to out of town games, all year, want to play hockey. I'm certain it will be a different story Friday night."

Belleville had taken command of the game at the outset and built up a 2-0 lead mid - way through the first period on a pair of goals by winger Reid Mallory. The Ellis' then appeared to lose interest in the game and went for a leisurely skate at centre ice as the Crushmen pumped four goals past a beleaguered Ron Jury. Jury played his poorest game of the season, but facing 54 shots in a game, as he did, can ruin a goalie's outlook on life.

The Crushmen, who played a fine hockey game, administered a few well - placed kicks to the Ellis corpse, in the form of five consecutive markers in the first ten minutes of the second period.

A brief altercation between usually mild - mannered John Hill and Ron Webb of Oshawa, along with a fine rush by defenceman John Mulvihill, who was robbed on the play by goalie Brian Rose, sparked the Printers into briefly playing the kind of hockey they're capable of.

Terry Meagher, who was easily the best Ellis forward on the ice, fired three consecutive goals, and for a while it looked like the visitors would make a contest out of it.

A goal by Eric Howard at 2.53 of the final period, however, collapsed the Printers again and Oshawa added four more markers to their total. Highlighting the third period for Belleville was defenceman Al Jones, whose body-check near the 16 - minute mark, startled one Oshawa forward.

The main reasons for the 14 - goal total was a total lack of backchecking by the Belleville forwards, who spent most of the night looking for a fast break that never came, and a failure to hit by the Ellis defence.

Rearguard John Mulvihill, who along with Meagher, was an Ellis standout, played just below his usual steady game. Dalton Lambert managed to hand out a few good hits, although he was also victimized by some fine stickhandling by John Nestic.

Nestic, voted the most valuable Oshawa player for the season, gave a fine exhibition of all - around hockey and was responsible for two of the Crushmen's four short-handed goals and netminder Brian Rose was outstanding on occasion, stopping two clean-cut breakaways among the 32 shots he faced.

Belleville, which is capable of playing far better hockey than they showed, last night, get a chance to redeem themselves, Friday in a 9.15 game in Belleville.

Kinsmen Bantams Cooled

Belleville's Kinsmen bantams were just warming up to their playoff task last night when they were cooled off by some fancy footwork and saw their OMHA playoff series tied 1-1 by Whitby.

The Kinsmen had overcome a 4-1 deficit and narrowed the Whitby margin to 4-3 in the third period when the hosts decided to change goalies.

But the change proved out to be an evasive measure when the original goalkeeper returned after the first whistle.

The tactic served to cool off the Kinsmen attack, and the hometowners added an insurance goal with less than two minutes remaining to square the second - round playoff series.

Third and deciding game is an 8 o'clock Saturday night contest, again in Whitby.

Peter Smrke, Steve Kirby and Andy Ricketts accounted for the Belleville goals and Bobby Moore played goal in place of regular Bruce Clark, who was injured in last weekend's Cornwall tournament.

"It was one of our poorer efforts," said team manager Bob Ricketts. "They out-hustled us most of the night. And our defence, after playing so well on the weekend in Cornwall, played just horribly last night."

Quinte Spiel Draws Yanks

There will be an international flavor to the tenth annual Bay of Quinte Men's Bonspiel when it opens at 8:30 tonight. Listed among the 53 rinks competing for the Corby's Trophy are three foursomes from south of the border, including a rink from Utica, New York.

Other competitors in the five-day event hail from Toronto, Kingston, Trenton, Picton and Napanee. Last year's winning skip, "Biff Anderson of CFB has moved out of the area, leaving the competition wide-open for the remaining rinks.

The Corby Trophy is just the first of seven events played at CFB Trenton, Trenton and the Quinte Curling Clubs, with the finals being held at 7 p.m. Sunday at the three clubs.

The championship round for the Corby's Trophy will be held at the Quinte Curling Club.

Senior Collegians Finish Unbeaten Season

BCI's senior basketball team finished its schedule undefeated by stopping Moira 63-41 in high school action last night. The teams split the other two games with BCI winning the midget contest and Moira coming out on top in junior.

Dave Wright, scoring ace of the senior Collegians scored 34 points in the team's 14th consecutive win. Mike Lebaron added seven points for BCI, while Dave Thompson (13) and Rob Ralston (12) were best for the Trojans.

Dave Pulver and Phil Kirby each hooped 12 points to pace Moira to a 44-33 victory in the junior bout. Gallupe with 11 points and Woodley with eight were BCI's best.

The first place midget Collegians took a 45-33 decision as Wayne Giles had 12 points and Jones eight. Paul Neil scored 11 points for Moira.

Throne Speech Anti-climactic

Demonstration Disrupts Legislature Opening

TORONTO (CP) — A bald, 57-year-old bachelor, claiming he was short-changed in compensation benefits for a broken back, disrupted the opening of the Ontario legislature Tuesday when he burst into the packed chamber and flung off a jacket to display a plaster body cast from neck to hip.

The man, who identified himself as Al Baldwin of nearby Mississauga, walked through the chamber's swinging doors, past a cordon of security guards and ushers, wearing only a light jacket over the cast on which was painted a black-striped tie.

"It looked like the guy was wearing a nice jacket with a black tie," one guard said later.

"Nobody stopped me," Mr. Baldwin said. "I just walked right in." He said he wasn't asked to show a ticket which is required to enter the chamber. Police later charged him with causing a disturbance and, under the Ontario Public Works Protection Act, with being on a public work without lawful authority.

The demonstration, in which the man first knelt, then lay prostrate on his back in front of the government benches while shouting abuses, occurred two minutes before Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald was to arrive to read the speech from the throne.

The opening of the third session of Ontario's 28th legislature was delayed about 10 minutes while six policemen first reasoned with the man, then gingerly carried him from the chamber.

As he was being lifted from the red-carpeted chamber floor, he locked his legs around Mrs. John Robarts' chair and the premier's wife leaped to her feet to avoid being knocked over.

"If he was in pain, it wasn't obvious," a police spokesman said. "Several of our policemen have bruised shins to prove he was kicking pretty good."

Police carried him to an elevator and questioned him in a public works department office on the first floor for an hour before removing him to a police cruiser.

As he was carried to the car, he shouted: "The Gestapo; that's compensation for you; everything for the rich people, nothing for the poor."

"I just proved that the great ritual of the legislature is more important than a broken back," he shouted at reporters. "I'm through. I'm finished. This is what the Workmen's Compensation Board did to me."

A crane operator, he said he broke his back in 1954 when he fell from his crane and has been unable to get work since. He has been receiving $101 a week but claims he should be getting $140 to make up for what he earned as a crane operator which he said was between $14,000 and $18,000 a year.

Baldin, who was later identified as a member of the Toronto-based Just Society which is campaigning for changes in the Workmen's Compensation Board, was released from hospital only a week ago after having a disc removed from his back.

Mr. Robarts had just started to leave the chamber to summon the lieutenant-governor when the demonstrator strode into view. The premier turned and looked as the demonstrator tore off his jacket to reveal naked shoulders and the body cast, then continued out of the chamber.

As the premier was walking out, the man stationed himself directly in front of Mr. Robarts' empty chair, and a few feet from where the premier's family was sitting on chairs arranged in the chamber for invited guests.

Among the guests close to the demonstrators were the justices of the Ontario Supreme Court, former lieutenant-governors J. Keiller Mackay and Earl Rowe, and former premier George Drew.

Speaker Fred Cass, in a brief interview at a reception following the throne speech, said he did not intend to hold an investigation into the matter or into house security generally.

"I really haven't given the matter any thought. It is the responsibility of the OPP, who are in charge of security here. I presume there will be an investigation, but I don't know whether I'll hold it. The house wasn't sitting at the time."

While Mr. Baldwin was carried, shouting in protest, from the scene the lieutenant-governor was escorted into the chamber to read of "specific steps . . . to encourage the individual to become an active contributing member of our society."

The demonstration, which delayed delivery of the speech for 10 minutes, so upset Mr. Macdonald that at one point he spoke of a government leading Ontario "into the 19th century" instead of reading the words "1970s."

The 11-page speech, opening the third and probably last full session of the 28th Ontario legislature, was short and lacking in excitement by provincial standards.

It was criticised both by Robert Nixon, leader of the 27-member Liberal caucus, and Donald MacDonald, leader of the 21 New Democrats, as lacking in specific programs.

Mr. MacDonald said the speech was so "vacuous" that it "casts into disrepute the useful function of a throne speech."

"If that is all the official opening is to be then perhaps it should be left as a purely social function with the government on the second day outlining for the legislature its real programs," Mr. MacDonald said.

The speech did, however, say enough to indicate that the last of the recommendations made in the McRuer report on civil rights—dealing with the courts, commissions with extra-judicial powers and professional associations with powers to license, discipline and punish—are to be put into legislation.

Government spokesmen indicated the speech means there will be a complete revamping of the rules for the Ontario Supreme Court and the provincial courts; and a modernization of the coroner system.

A new Law Society Act will probably place the restrictions recommended by Mr. McRuer on the Law Society of Upper Canada, as a prelude to similar restrictions on other professional bodies.

Other major legislation indicated in the speech involves new labor laws dealing with collective bargaining and protection of the public interest during labor disputes; and intensified fight against pollution of air, water and soil; a beginning of talks aimed at solving problems of the cities, and a new Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Nixon said he regretted that the speech made no reference to an amalgamation of health and hospital insurance services to cut costs or to mention specific government programs.

Mr. MacDonald said the speech "as usual conceals more than it reveals."

He promised "full and adequate confrontation" before the debate on the throne speech ends March 19 while the legislature adjourns for an Easter recess.

He said the emission of any reference to tax reform indicated the government "is in process, under cover of an attack on the federal white paper on tax reform, of postponing, scuttling, its own reform program after 10 years' study."

A white paper on tax reform was issued by Treasurer Charles MacNaughton with his budget last year.

The speech announced the government's intention of forming a standing legislature committee on constitutional matters —requested for a year by the opposition—so that issues discussed at federal-provincial conferences can be debated.

The speech confirmed an earlier statement by Premier Robarts that there will be no increase in taxes and a balanced budget this year.

It promised "closest scrutiny of all spending programs" as an anti-inflation measure and asked "all individuals and business enterprises" for restraint and co-operation.

It also confirmed indications Mr. Robarts had given earlier of a concentrated Ontario trade drive in Japan and other Pacific nations.

Despite the economy drive, the throne speech indicated that the government intends to push its programs on educatio, housing, agriculture, integration of transportation, improved social services, creation of new jobs and solution of urban problems.

Our Waters Quote Was Federal Policy Says PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's sovereign rights in two widely-separated coastal areas were the subject of exchanges in the Commons Tuesday.

Concern about possible encroachment by the United States in both areas was accompanied by renewed opposition demands that the government take a stronger stand on sovereignty.

Prime Minister Trudeau agreed under opposition questioning that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp expressed government policy last week when he referred to waters between the Canadian Arctic islands as "our waters."

The prime minister told New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas that Mr. Sharp was speaking for the government.

Arctic sovereignty has been a recurring issue since it was learned the giant U.S. oil-tanker Manhattan may make a second voyage through northern waters in April. She sailed the Northwest Passage last summer with the aid of a Canadian icebreaker.

Mr. Trudeau also assured the Commons Canada has taken a strong stand in negotiations with the U.S. over an area of the Continental Shelf off the East Coast.

The area is between the Bay of Fundy and Cape Cod and includes Georges Bank.

A public notice issued in Washington Feb. 12 by Elliot Richardson, acting state secretary, said the U.S. does not "acquiesce in or recognize the validity" of permits issued by Canada to explore for natural resources in the area.

Canada has been issuing oil exploration permits for the area for some six years.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Tuesday whether the government made a formal reply to a note from the U.S. government last November disputing Canadian territorial rights in the Georges Bank area.

Mr. Trudeau said there had been an exchange between the two countries on the matter and the Canadian position was clear.

The Geneva convention provided for a median line to apply in such cases. Canadian exploration permits had only been granted for areas of the shelf inside this line.

But the U.S. disagreed with the median-line principle in this case, Mr. Trudeau said, saying there were special circumstances because of the shape of the Continental Shelf.

A spokesman for the external affairs department said earlier that Canada and the U.S. will meet within two months to attempt to settle the dispute.

Opposition Leader Stanfield told reporters outside the House that Canada should make its position known on all sovereignty matters and "stand by it."

He said the U.S. would not respect Canada if the government did not take such a stand, on both the Georges Bank and the Arctic waters question.

Mr. Douglas had asked whether Mr. Trudeau is aware that a prominent U.S. official had said recently Canadian territory extended only three miles from land in Arctic waters. Mr. Trudeau said he was not aware of the statement.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said no Canadian icebreakers would be provided to aid the Manhattan unless the ship meets with anti-pollution regulations the government plans to introduce as legislation shortly.

Mr. Trudeau told Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin the second voyage would be allowed only if the Canadian government is convinced that the trip can be made "safely and securely." This had been made clear to Humble Oil, owners of the tanker.

Parks Bill Described as Sign Trudeau Aims at Dictatorship

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties used a Commons debate on a national parks bill Tuesday to dig in against what they say is the government's trend toward a full-fledged dictatorship.

The charges came during second reading debate of a government bill to amend the National Parks Act, setting up a Crown corporation to administer property in al national parks.

Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) said another Crown corporation would establish "beyond any doubt" the government's desire to seize absolute power.

"The ultimate will be to have each government department run by a Crown corporation with the prime minister directing them as a dictator," Mr. Yewchuk said.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) warned that the proposed corporation would have tremendous powers to control park development and the lives of park residents.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said his party strongly opposes the tendency "of this government to take over power and decision-making from the people."

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) said the bill contains an implication that a national park in his home province of Prince Edward Island will likely be made smaller.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said Banff and Jasper national parks now are being run essentially as colonies with decisions being made in Ottawa.

The townspeople there had no assurance that their aspirations were being considered and felt that they were being manipulated.

Mr. Peters said Jasper and Banff should become Alberta municipalities.

Space Drains Off Anger

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Someone was telling me about a couple we know, who have terrible fights, throwing things at one another, and yet never doing any real damage. They are not mock fights, the couple is angry, and yet the blows are glancing, the dishes miss their aim.

I recalled a book I had read lately, "Self and Others," by R. D. Laing, a British psychiatrist. He mentioned the report of a policeman who watched a little boy running around a large apartment building.

After the boy had run past him for the 20th time, the policeman finally asked him what he was doing. The boy said he was running away from home, but his father wouldn't let him cross the road!

Laing then pointed out how this boy's "free space" was curtailed by his "internalization" of this parental injunction. Even at his moment of rebellion, the built-in prohibition against crossing the street still operated to keep the "running away" within limits.

In the same way, the fighting couple unconsciously preserved the inhibition against hurting one another (physically at least), by pulling punches and misaiming the crockery. Real injury in such marital disputes usually occurs only when mutual consumption of alcohol has acted to release the inhibition.

How much "free space" we grow up believing we have tends to determine whether we will actually run away from home or merely circle the block; and whether, in later life, we will strike to hurt or to miss.

Here the social environment plays an enormous role. It is not true that the mere "poverty" of slum living engenders truancy and violence; for there are as many kinds of poverty as there are kinds of societies.

It is, rather, the restricted amount of "free space" in the slum environment that encourages such actions. It is almost an inverse equation that, as physical space becomes more cramped in a neighborhood and in a family, "psychic space" becomes more extended. That is, when the boundaries are too tightly drawn, either flight or fight becomes a prime strategy for survival and self-expression.

If a child can retire to his own room, a wife to her bedchamber, a husband to his den, the sanctuary of this physical space drains off hostilities and allows the recuperative processes to begin. If the family is pressed together — in the house, and also in the ghetto — then running away or striking out remain the only alternatives to conflict. The middle-classes are better behaved about such matters because they have room to breathe, to move, to strike out — and to miss.

Welch Now Responsible

Indian Affairs Now Under Citizenship

TORONTO (CP) — Responsibility for Indian affairs will be transferred from John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, to the department of citizenship under Robert Welch, a cabinet spokesman said Tuesday night.

Mr. Yaremko's handling of Indian affairs was severely criticized last year.

He faced the biggest storm of his 19 years in the legislature last May when seven of the 10 top officials of the Indian development branch resigned to protest government policies.

The cabinet spokesman Tuesday did not say when the portfolio switch would be completed.

After the resignations last May, opposition members said Mr. Yaremko's department had failed to spend $1,000,000 of the $1,400,000 allotted as the provincial budget for Indian programs in 1968.

Mr. Yaremko had said the province was hamstrung in its Indian programs until Ottawa and Toronto decide whether the federal or provincial government has financial responsibility for Indians.

Proxy Voting Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons elections committee was roasted by two of its members Tuesday night after their motions on proxy voting were defeated.

Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) and Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) later succeeded in getting their proposals sent to the steering committee for further consideration.

Liquor Charge Against Priest Is Withdrawn

TORONTO (CP) — Charges of illegally keeping and selling liquor laid against a 33-year-old Roman Catholic priest New Year's Eve were withdrawn Tuesday.

Rev. Ambrose J. McCabe and six bartenders were charged during a holiday banquet at St. Mary's parish hall after police checked the permit issued by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario and found an error.

Crown Attorney Richard Furnell told Judge Fred Hayes that "police had every right to lay the charge at the time."

"Subsequent information showed that the permit was made out to an address down the street."

Girls Found By FBI

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The FBI reported early today that it found unharmed two little girls kidnapped at Butler, Ala., and arrested one of the men charged with taking them.

John Charles Messick, 22, of Tucson, Ariz., was arrested about 2.30 a.m. at the home of a relative in Liberty, Mo., a suburb of Kansas City.

With him were Tiffany Cain, 3, and Tina Cain, 2.

Donald Bradford Lee Jones, 23, charged with joining Messick in the kidnapping Monday, still is being sought.

Sheriff Leon Clark at Butler said the two kidnappers alleged that Cain owes them a $4,000 gambling debt. Cain was working near Laurel, Miss., when the girls were taken.

Law to Limit Sulphur Level In Fuels Asked

TORONTO (CP) — An unofficial pollution inquiry recommended Tuesday that legislation be enacted to prohibit the use of fuels with a sulphur content of more than one per cent.

The two-day hearing, which ended Tuesday, also urged the provincial government to conduct a major study into pollution and the ecological effects to human health.

Organized by Pollution Probe and Group Action to Stop Pollution, the five-man commission has no power to act, but its recommendations will be forwarded to the provincial government.

In briefs, Ronald Potts, sales manager for Consumers' Gas Co., said sulphur dioxide emissions at the city's main electricity plant would be reduced to .7 pounds an hour from 26,000 pounds if Ontario Hydro would burn natural gas instead of coal.

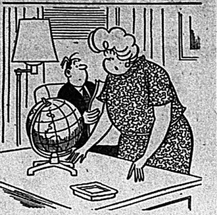
Earlier, two doctors studying Ontario's air pollution challenged a Toronto surgeon's statement that pollution is responsible for more than half of all human diseases.

Dr. Joseph McKenna, who made the statement, said he based his statistics on reports in North American medical journals and a United Nations-sponsored conference of 200 experts.

Dr. G. A. Jackson of North Bay, chairman of an Ontario Medical Association public health committee studying air pollution, said the figures quoted "sound a little high."

Dr. Max Fitch, conducting air pollution research for Ontario's health department, said he thinks Dr. McKenna exaggerated in blaming more than 50 per cent of all ailments on the air we breath.

THE LITTLE WOMAN



"It looked a lot prettier in those color photos from the moon."

Greene Issues Order

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene met representatives of detergent companies Tuesday and said he "stated in the clearest possible terms" that the phosphate content in detergents must be reduced to an acceptable level by Aug. 1.

Mr. Greene said in the Commons that while a substitute for phosphates might have been discovered, there are no supplies available. Industry needed time to get supplies of the substitute.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Breathing Is Not Always So Simple

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: People don't seem to be using this simile much anymore: "It's as easy as breathing." I guess one reason is that when one has seen a heart patient, or one who suffers from asthma or emphysema fight for his breath, he never forgets it.

Breathing may be natural, free - and - easy for normal people, but it's certainly a big problem when the breathing apparatus goes out of whack. — Mrs. O.

Comment: I go along with you. Breathing is taken for granted. I don't mean that people should become self-conscious about their intake and output of air. First thing we know, we'd all become too self - conscious, and foul up the apparatus.

Nevertheless, I believe that readers should know of a breathing problem we call "hyperventilation." Basically, all it means if overbreathing.

Many people who suffer from anxiety have this complaint and don't suspect it. They overbreathe unconsciously by taking rapid shallow breaths when nervous, which only intensifies the nervousness. They sigh a lot or yawn often.

What this does is create an imbalance of oxygen and carbon dioxide in the blood. Too much breathing forces out an unnatural amount of carbon dioxide.

The carbon dioxide tensions in the alveoli (of the lung) and in the blood become abnormally low. As a result there is a lessened blood supply to the tissues, especially to the brain.

Then come such symptoms as faintness, rapid pulse, perspiration, numbness in hands and feet, and extreme anxiety. Rebreathing into a paper bag for a few minutes often makes these symptoms disappear (by rebuilding the carbon dioxide balance).

I have helped many anxious patients by teaching them how to breathe. Anxiety and breathing are so tied - in that helping the one often improves the other. Many gave up tranquilizers, sleeping pills and other sedative medications after they learned how to breathe normally.

I suggest that any chronically nervous and anxious patient reading today's column check with his or her physician to make certain that hyperventilation isn't complicating the problem.

This relatively simple procedure has saved many anxious patients from years of unnecessary suffering. It doesn't work in all nervous patients, but is certainly worth investigating.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 36 and for 20 years have had an inguinal hernia on my left side that slides all the way down. For the past six weeks it has been giving me lots of trouble. I'd like to know if wearing a truss, as I have been doing, will finally cure it. — Mr. V.

Comment: A truss will not cure a hernia. As you haven't even mentioned surgery, my guess is that you don't like to consider operation. Yet, if it were my problem, I'd choose surgery over the uncomfortable expectation of wearing a truss for another 35 or 40 years.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For February 26

Your birthday today: Principle comes to outweigh material gains in your outlook now. Your work takes on a quality of service, conservation, or defence of the public interest if it is to have great significance. Last year's mischances and errors are fully expiated this year.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Work out deals with property owners, or go househunting. Today has the spirit of a sellers' market.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Knowing the right people opens so many doors you can't use them all. Think which is the main line of your interests, and head in the right direction to achieve progress.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Set a very high value on your wares and services. Encourage partners and associates in their search for fun.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Business and pleasure fall right in together today, or pursuit of business is rather pleasant now — whichever way you choose to define it. Organize formal entertainment for your own group.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Be seen in good company and the right places. Make sure your work is not skimped, whatever else may happen. In the evening seriously plan long-range goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Morning confusion clears up with just a little effort. New contacts are just as intrigued with you and your potentials as you are with them. Be your natural self, take the lead today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): New enterprises are favored to develop quickly and well. It is not your proper job to be more than a go-between or arbiter. Social activity waits until pending issues are resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Now that you have outwitted the major tensions, take the lead, present your side of the issues firmly and graciously.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Get right on with your normal, ordinary activities and put in a healthy day's work. Tidy up promptly at quitting time and organize a small celebration this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Make one last check of details, then sign papers connected with home and its care. Propose changes to people who can order them put into effect.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Business and career issues now are negotiable, and it is about time you got down to practical realities and settled them. Take something home for your loved ones today.

PISCES (Feb. 19— Mar. 20): Your past experience and your intuition together guide you through the complex patterns of modern civilization and its pitfalls.

AID BIAFRA

TORONTO (CP) — A 40-hour starve-in held by over 300 students at Woburn Collegiate and 28 teachers in suburban Scarborough in January raised $3,500 for starvation relief for Biafran refugees, Scarborough board of education was told.

MPs Would Make Advocacy Of Genocide at Home Crime

OTTAWA (CP) — It should be a crime to advocate genocide at home or in the street, the Commons justice committee decided Tuesday night.

It voted down an attempt by Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster) to limit the new offence to public behavior.

Mr. Hogarth said the hate propaganda bill before the committee could make a living-room conversation a crime.

'Agents provocateurs might be planted to lead a person into offensive talk.

"It always starts with a couple of people in a living room," replied David Lewis (NDP—York South).

"That's the way the Hitler movement began, with little meetings of two and three people.'

He and Mark McGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) argued for an absolute prohibition against promotion of genocide.

Mr. McGuigan said there is no excuse for such conversation, public or private, if the intent is to destroy a group.

Justice Minister John Turner said prosecutions as a result of casual conversation obviously aren't likely.

The committee passed a clause that would make it a crime to promote or advocate the killing or destruction—by concentration camp, for example—of any section of the public distinguished by color, race, religion or ethnic origin. The offence would carry a prison term of up to five years.

In 1965 the government appointed a special committee under Maxwell Cohen, then law dean of McGill University, to study hate propaganda in Canada.

Members included Mr. McGuigan and Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

The committee's report resulted in the present bill, which passed the Senate last fall after a three-session battle.

There have been arguments that it will infringe upon freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

Paul St. Pierre (L—Coast Chilcotin) said he thinks the bill may do more harm than good.

He wondered whether an actor in a play portraying Himmler, the Nazi Gestapo chief, could be prosecuted.

The bill creates two other offences:

—Inciting in any public place hatred against any identifiable group, where this is likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

—Willfully promoting hatred against any identifiable group by communicating statements.

Tribunal Urged to Hear Bids to Sell on Sundays

TORONTO (CP) — Establishment of a special tribunal to hear applications from companies wishing to operate on Sundays was recommended Tuesday by the president of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada.

J. G. Coburn told a Law Reform Commission hearing into Sunday observance legislation that modern technology posed the greatest threat to the five-day work week.

"A critical tension is developing between the technological demands which move in the direction of continuous operation and the human consideration which favors a common day of rest."

The Alliance head recommended a licensing board made up of municipal and provincial experts, before which companies would have to justify requests for seven-day work weeks.

He said that some industries such as steel and chemical firms required continuous operation but in other cases the question of extended work levels was too complex to be decided by labor negotiators or courts.

While the alliance expressed continued opposition to Sunday newspapers, it said that Sunday broadcasting and newspaper work should be permitted by legislation.

Later, a brief by the board of evangelism and social action of the Presbyterian Church opposed any widening of commercial Sunday activities and urged legal safeguards for those who wish to attend Sunday church.

Then, W. B. Hambly, president of the Greater Toronto Business and Professional Federation Inc., opposed any move to allow shopping plazas and "large chain stores" to open Sundays.

"We feel that six days a week is enough for anyone to make a living," he said. Only small, owner-operated stores which traditionally cater to the public's emergency needs should remain open.

A brief from the Oshawa and district labor council recommended double-time pay for all Sunday work. It also suggested a study on the effect of Sunday work on the family unit, and prices.

And while recommending "certain minimums of Sunday observance" be legislated by the province, it said that municipalities should remain free to impose further restrictions on the basis of plebiscites.

Air Canada Halts Freight For Israel

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Air Canada said Tuesday night that a 48-hour embargo has been placed on all freight destined for Israel.

The spokesman said the embargo, which began earlier Tuesday, includes "unaccompanied luggage."

The embargo is the result of Saturday's suspected terrorist explosion which brought down a Swissair Coronado jet flying to Tel Aviv from Zurich, killing al 47 persons on board, including two Montrealers.

A spokesman for BOAC said his airline's freight embargo, begun Sunday, would probably be lifted today. Air France had no restrictions, but had increased "our security measures."

New Grain-delivery Rules Are Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — New grain-delivery rules for Western Canada, prompted by slow demand for record-sized wheat surpluses, have been proposed in a government-sponsored special report.

They are designed to make the marketing system more sensitive to demand for a broad range of grains and thereby speed up payments to hard-pressed farmers.

The report was tabled in the Commons Tuesday by Otto Lang, minister without portfolio responsible for the Canadian wheat board. The board is the federal marketing agency handling farm deliveries of most prairie-grown grains plus those from parts of British Columbia.

Separate quotas for major grains are proposed. Farmers under the regulations of the wheat board have been governed by a complex system of delivery quotas set on the basis of how much grain has been exported.

In good years, wheat quotas have been high and occasionally lifted entirely.

Now, when sales have dwindled due to International surpluses, farmers have been limited to delivery quotas so low income has been cut sharply.

Under the proposed changes, the wheat board would have a freer hand in setting delivery quotas to meet sales opportunities.

That would apply to various types of wheat from the most common hard spring type to durum, in demand for spaghetti-type products. It would apply also to oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed.

The special report was prepared by a committee named Jan. 21 and made up of vice-president E. A. Boden of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, general manager W. G. Winslow of United Grain Growers Ltd., and J. L. Leibfried, executive assistant to the Canadian wheat board.

Mr. Lang said he expects to announce shortly "any special provisions with respect to deliveries in 1970-71 which may be required to deal with the current unusual surplus position in wheat."

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported last Friday that Canada's wheat exports for the first four months of the current crop year, begun last Aug. 1, were the lowest in 14 years at 82,700,000 bushels.

At the same time, Canada's wheat stocks Dec. 1 were an unprecedented 1,286,400,000 bushels.

Mr. Lang has said prospects for sales are somewhat brighter and a Soviet trade mission here this week will be pressed to make further purchases.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

ANAF News

The battered, old fur lined trophy, symbolic of the friendly rivalry between Branch 99 and the Duke of Edinburgh Unit over the years, has been taken from its secret hiding place and cleaned and polished up in preparation for the hockey game of the year. This hockey match between two teams consisting of bona fide members from the two associations, will be played in the Memorial Arena on a date late in March set by the Arena manager. There will be a small admission charge and all proceeds will go to the Junior B Hockey League. There are enough members, together with their friends, to pack the arena so watch for the date and plan to attend.

The Apollo Bar Bell Club will be putting on a very interesting demonstration in the downstairs lounge on Thursday. They will be host club for the Canadian Championships for 1970 in which they hope to retain the three championships they now hold and to add to them. It will be a good night.

The president and executive are well pleased to announce that Cde. A. H. "Al" Burns, well known Drum Sgt., with the Pipe Band, has accepted the appointment of Sgt.-at-Arms for 1970, thus completing the elected and appointed roster of the executive for this year.

The President and all members of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit wish to make a farewell salute to a gallant veteran of W.W. I, whose life was dedicated to the good and welfare of all veterans and their dependents. He will be sadly missed by all but more especially by the Royal Canadian Legion in Belleville where he had been a pillar of strength since it was first organized in the early twenties. Sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family by all Unit members. Hall and farewell Comrade Everett Liddle.

Have your colleens get titivated up for the big St. Patrick's Day Dance in the Tartan Lounge on Friday, Mar. 13th and don't forget the regular social evenings in between. Dance or enjoy the music of the Cameos and the fun and good singing of other distinguished artists.

The Saturday afternoon Dart and shuffleboard tournaments are being very well attended with the Mr. and Mrs. Darts every other Saturday night.

Brown, 477 and A. Austin, 477. Cde. K. McLeod is recovering nicely in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto and expects to be home next Saturday.

TWEED-HUNGERFORD DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOL

DEMOCRACY OR TOTALITARIANISM

It is becoming more apparent that various levels of government, elected officials, and their administrative bodies no longer listen to or consider the voice of the people. This is an opportunity to exercise your Canadian right and prove whether the above statement is

TRUE or FALSE

It has been said, that the people were informed about the sale of the Tweed-Hungerford District High School by the press when the decision was made in June, but everybody was too busy to read it. THE FACT IS that no official word was received in the Tweed-Hungerford Area by the people until the open Ratepayers Meeting on October 2nd, 1969.

It has been said, that "Separatism" is historical and nothing can be done about it. THE FACT IS there is no question of separatism, religious or otherwise involved here.

It has been said, that the County Board does not control spending, but rather administrates it (the money) according to instructions from their elected bosses. THE FACT IS, that full authority for the control of money is with the County Board.

It has been said that the cost per student in Centre Hastings Secondary School will be $555 after Tweed-Hungerford District High School is closed, due to the increased number of students. THE FACT IS that according to facts and figures of all schools of comparable size the minimum cost per student in Hastings County will be $864.

It has been said that Tweed-Hungerford District High School could not supply the proper education for the student. THE FACT IS that this school had 83 Ontario Honor Graduates (1966 - 1968 inclusive). As a source of comparison a school with four times the student population in this County for the same period of time had only 65 Ontario Honor Graduates.

It has been said that there are too few students to make it financially feasible to keep the school open. THE FACT IS that presently there is an overload of 400 students in Belleville, many of whom come from this area and who are bussed 15 miles South to Belleville, rather than 10 miles North to Tweed.

It has been said that in September 1970 regardless of whether or not the Tweed-Hungerford District High School is closed there will be 1000 students at Centre Hastings Secondary School and by 1971, 1215. THE FACT IS that 300, plus additional students from Tweed-Hungerford District High School, will force the Board to bus the overflow to Belleville. Prior to the June sale this fact was common knowledge to the Board Members and has been confirmed by their own facts and figures. THE FACT IS that as of September 1970 there will be 1739 students attending Secondary School from the Central Hastings Area. The Centre Hastings Secondary School capacity is 1235 students as of September 1970. Therefore, as of September 1970, the balance of 504 students could be more reasonably accommodated in present facilities (which is nearly clear of debt — outstanding debenture less than $20,000, plus 6 acres of open land) at Tweed-Hungerford District High School.

It has been said that there is nothing the County Board can do re the sale. THE FACT IS that the Ontario Department of Education can nulify the sale in the event that accommodations are not available for students and further the County Board is re-considering its decision of June 1969.

It has been said you don't have any dope addicts in the Tweed-Hungerford District High School but it would do you good to have two or three. THE FACT IS this is one of the reasons the students don't wish Tweed-Hungerford District High School to close They are not associated with this type of thing now nor do they wish to be. This reaction on the part of the students is exactly what the Minister of Education advocated. (Toronto Star, Oct. 4, 1969), i.e. students should exercise more self discipline. Also Liberal M.P.P. T. Reid, an educational critic, introduced a Bill to give the students greater voice. Will this voice even be heard?

It has been said that the Board Members would not have voted to close the Tweed-Hungerford District High School if they had known the facts they know now. THE FACT IS WE AGREE.

It has been said that the area residents were in favor of closing the school. THE FACT IS that 91.2% voted in 1961 to retain the Tweed-Hungerford District High School as is, and the petition 1970 bears this out also.

It has been said that the new system of education cannot be implemented in a school of less than 1000 students. THE FACT IS that in region 9 of which we are a part 48% of the total of 43 high schools are less than 1000 students and 21% are less than 600 and the Deputy Minister of Education when asked, replied, "that the present school in Tweed could be readily adapted to any of the new educational innovations that are being proposed". (October 1969).

It has been said that as of 1971 the Ontario Department of Education will not support the closure of any school. THE FACT IS that if this is a good policy why not implement it now.

It has been said after 1971 in order to accommodate students, another school can be built. THE FACT IS that as taxpayers we don't have the money, and presently have a school that is adequate

The decade of the seventies will bear out the assumption in the introductory remark.

Centennial School's Cafeteria Damaged

Harry Mulhall

More Than Music in Common

Kim Van Norman, (left) 12-year-old St. Michael's Academy student, and Joyce Gardiner, 11, Harry J. Clarke School, had more than Rotary Music Festival in common yesterday when their school choirs competed at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Both girls went on with their schoolmates and gave of their competitive best, despite earlier mishaps that resulted in broken legs. For festival stories see Page 3.

Queen Victoria Also Entered

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Police today are probing the second major case of vandalism at a Belleville school within four days.

Being sought is the identity of the culprits — or culprit — who entered Centennial Secondary School to damage the cafeteria, smash windows in various school areas and apparently toy with the idea of cutting through the school vault.

The incident occurred while police still are investigating an attempt to burn down Sir Winston Churchill public school on MacDonald Avenue.

Meantime, early this morning a window was discovered broken at Queen Victoria School, where a teacher's desk was overturned. There was no other damage.

Today, Eric Runacres, Hastings County director of education, said he was preparing a report for trustees on an after-hours school surveillance hook-up.

Such a system, if found desirable by the school board, could channel alarms from all Belleville schools to a central alert point over the city's telephone - line network.

The Centennial breakin, say police, was staged by breaking a window in the roof of the school's greenhouse.

Scene of the heaviest damage was the cafeteria.

Glass in food display cases was shattered. About three dozen eggs, hamburger patties and fruit juice were hurled on the kitchen floor. In the dining area, eggs were smashed against tables, the glass top on a deep-freeze broken and a soft-drink machine damaged.

Heavy glass panes in corridor doors also were broken.

Acetylene torch equipment was wheeled from a school machine shop after entry was gained by smashing a glass door panel.

The cutting equipment was wheeled to the administration centre. Police say no attempt was made to cut through the steel door of the school vault. However an acoustic tile was taken from the ceiling over the vault. This indicated, police believe that an attempt to enter the safe from above was meditated.

A baseball was hurled against windows in the centre — including the office of principal James Musgrove.

Vice-principal Gerald Boyce surmised the ball was taken from his desk. He was keeping it for collection by a student from whom he had earlier confiscated it.

Police say there was little, if any, cash in the vault since school funds are banked daily.

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Benson told the Commons Wednesday he will bring down the federal budget March 12.

Five Marines Charged With Slaying Sixteen

DA NANG (AP) — Five U.S. marines have been charged with killing 16 South Vietnamese women and children in a village south of Da Nang Feb. 16, military spokesmen announced today.

The names of the marines and the village were not disclosed immediately.

A spokesman for the 1st Marine Division said the men were members of a combat patrol operating in the Que Son district about 27 miles south of Da Nang. Another marine patrol found the bodies and reported what they saw to higher authorities.

An investigation followed.

A headquarters spokesman said marines in that area had suffered a large number of casualties from sniper fire and booby traps.

No Election This Year Says Robarts

TORONTO (CP)—Premier John Robarts indicated Wednesday there will be no provincial election in Ontario this year and suggested that "anyone who uses a little sense" would realize this.

Allan Eagleson, president of the Ontario Conservative party said in a speech Tuesday night he would welcome an election called on the issue of the federal white paper on tax reforms.

Mr. Robarts, asked by Donald MacDonald, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, if he accepted Mr. Eagleson's proposals, said:

"No — and I reserve the right of my office to decide the time of an election.

"Anyone who uses a little sense would realize this. After all, the government is not yet 2½ years old. Why should we give that any consideration?"

Studded Tires Proving Costly

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the Ontario department of highways says studded tires have worn painted lines from highways in as little as three days this winter.

In a letter to The Glbe and Mail, E. A. Ingraham, director of information services for the department, says a recent study indicates damage caused by studded tires on Ontario highways, municipal roads and streets will total $127,000,000 in the next eight years.

Mr. Ingraham says the estimates take into account the need for markers more resistant to wear.

Angry Senators Attack U.S. Presence in Laos

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an angry attack against the American role in Laos, a group of senators has demanded the administration disclose how heavily the United States is involved in the Asian nation.

"The facts of our involvement have been concealed from the American people," Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore said during floor debate Wednesday, a charge supported by Senator Charles H. Percy (Rep. Ill.).

Another Republican, Senator Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, said "Laos has become an arena for the repetition of the mistakes of our Vietnamese involvement."

He pointed to "news reports from usually reliable publications" indicating hundreds of former Green Berets military advisers "swarming over the country in numbers proportionately larger than the Kennedy administration commitment of advisers" in Vietnam.

A strong North Vietnamese force has moved quickly and with great success against the Royal Laotian army despite heavy bombings by U.S. B-52s.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said that if U.S. involvement in Laos grows "all the plans for Vietnamization will go down the drain. . . ."

Mathias was the most vehement. "It would be a cruel disappointment of President Nixon's hopes for peace," he said, "if success of Vietnamization in South Vietnam depends on escalation of the U.S. engagement in Laos."

"U.S. military activities in that country (Laos) clearly violate the spirit of both the national commitments resolutions—requiring specific congressional approval for every new engagement of American troops abroad—and the amendment to the Defence Appropriations Act prohibiting use of funds for American ground combat troops in Laos or Thailand."

So far, the administration has refused to disclose how many Americans are serving in Laos, the rate of American air missions in that country or the U.S. casualty rate.

President Nixon has denied any U.S. ground combat forces are there, but he has said American planes have raided the Ho Chi Minh trail where it runs through that country.

Laotian Premier Wants Geneva Powers to Meet

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — Premier Souvanna Phouma said today he believes the situation in northern Laos justified a meeting of the powers that signed the 1962 Geneva accord on the country's sovereignty.

As he spoke, government troops braced for a possible new North Vietnamese attack on two key towns 100 miles north of here.

Speaking to reporters, the prince said:

"We are going to send a protest letter to the co-chairman of the Geneva conference (Britain and the Soviet Union) to tell them about the large-scale offensive of the North Vietnamese."

Police Find Getaway Car for $55,225 Toronto Bank Robbery

TORONTO (CP) — Police early today recovered $6,744,170 in non-negotiable cheques from what is believed to be the getaway car used Wednesday by three armed men who robbed a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal. Also stolen was $52,225 in cash.

The cheques, payable to the Ontario department of transport, were in the back seat of a car found by police in the underground parking lot of a downtown apartment building.

Also found by police were two hoods, toques and ski jackets which fit the description of those used by the bank robbers.

Police say the car was stolen in Quebec, but carried Ontario licence plates taken from a car belonging to a Toronto man now vacationing in Mexico.

Police were examining the cheques for fingerprints and hoped to return them to the bank sometime today.

The three men entered the bank shortly before 2 p.m., just two minutes after an armored Brinks truck delivered two large canvas bags filled with the cheques and cash.

Two of the men wore ski masks and turtle neck sweaters. One stationed himself at the door with a revolver, another stood at the end of a counter with a revolver and the third scooped up the bags from behind the counter.

The three then fled. They never spoke. Cash in the tellers' cages were untouched.

The men ran out of a rear door, past a group of workers renovating offices in the building, and jumped into a waiting car.

Police said the robbers appeared to know exactly what they wanted. While the government makes frequent deposits at the bank, they are made at different times of the day.

"They had to at least have been watching the bank waiting for the Brink's truck," a police spokesman said.

A bank spokesman said two armed Brink's guards normally remain in the bank until the money is placed in the vault, but they did not do so Wednesday.

However, a Brink's spokesman said there is no set policy on when the guards leave and the company's responsibility ended when the money and cheques were handed over to the bank.

Learning by Machine

Janet Riedel and Wendy Sutton, pupils at Sir John A. Macdonald School in Belleville yesterday tried out a diagnostic machine that photographs the movements of the eye in reading. The machine was one of several displayed by six companies in the school auditorium to give county teachers an idea of the equipment available to help them in reading programs. Operator of the machine was George Gibson.

Society Made Today's Youth And Should Give It Chance

PICTON (Staff) — Kinsmen club members across Canada can do much toward closing the generation gap, members of the Picton Kinsmen Club were told last night.

As feature speaker at the Picton club's 26th anniversary dinner, Arthur Duncan of Batawa urged parents to take a general view of youth and not form opinions from "watching the kids on the street corner."

"If the elders look at Canada's youth today they'll have to admit these youngsters are bigger, stronger and brighter than we were," said Mr. Duncan. "They are better athletes and smarter academically."

"We made them that way and they must move into the most competitive world that ever existed. Let us not criticize youth until we take a blanket look. Integrity, truth and righteousness will come to them when they mellow."

"They'll take hold of these qualities in full grasp saying their parents were right in supporting them."

On the other side of the coin, however, Mr. Duncan said that youth frequently seems to be without respect for the older generation.

To close the generation gap more men of youth and vigor like the Kinsmen are needed, he said.

The anniversary of the Picton club also marked the golden anniversary of Kinsmen Clubs in Canada and club members had as their special guest Hal Rogers of Hamilton who founded the service organization which now boasts of a membership of 40,000 across Canada.

About 75 Kinsmen and Kinettes attended the dinner.

"Kin is a working organization serving community's greatest needs" said Mr. Rogers. "We don't measure service work with a dollar sign — we measure it with community need and the extent of our response to it."

Other meeting highlights included a Kinette induction, reading of the history of the Picton club and a presentation by Mayor H. J. McFarland of a key to the town to Mr. Rogers.

Library Report

Trend Is to More Serious Books

Belleville Public Library operated on a budget of $163,281 in 1969 to circulate the 94,146 books in its collection 319,262 times.

Adults read 15,411 more books in 1969 than in 1968, Miss Olive Delaney, chief librarian, said in the annual report recently released. Because of the withdrawal of library collections from two schools, circulation of children's books decreased from 140,989 in 1968 to 126,956 in 1969.

"The sixties were years of turmoil and unrest, amazing scientific developments and sweeping changes in the manners and morals of society," Miss Delaney noted. "In the library, the concern of the reader was apparent in the trend to a more serious approach to reading. Books on drugs, religion, pollution, taxation and current political and economic trends were sought."

"In 1969, more books were added to the book collection than in any one year in the library's history," she said. "There were 7,682 adult books and 3,123 books for boys and girls added."

The annual report shows that 15,519 adults and children hold library memberships.

As well as books, they borrowed 1,739 films, film strips and records and 831 magazines and clippings.

Funds to operate the library come from a city tax levy ($92,999), provincial grant ($38,509), desk receipts ($4,809), the Corby trust ($917) and the Jim Johnson fund ($536).

As one of the three resource libraries within the regional library system comprising the counties of Haliburton, Victoria, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Northumberland and Durham, Peterborough, Frontenac and Prince Edward, the Belleville library filled 1,290 requests for inter-library loans of books. Picton, Trenton, Brighton, Wellington, Marmora, Bancroft, Stirling and Hastings were the main recipients of the service.

In the reference section, Miss Delaney estimated that 1,762 reference questions were answered.

In the fall, the Belleville and District Film Council, formed in 1945 to promote visual education in the area, decided that its era of usefulness was at an end and offered its assets to the library board. The offer was accepted and a committee of the board will meet soon to study future policies and procedures.

At the annual meeting of the library board the following officers were elected for the coming year: chairman, Mrs. A. S. Lewis; vice-chairman, M. M. Hackett, chairman of finance, Harold Bankier; chairman of property, J. K. Canty; representative on the regional library system, W. G. Anderson; and secretary - treasurer, Miss Olive Delaney.

Closer Relationship Needed To Encourage Teenagers

The need for a closer relationship among the school, parents and children, especially with those emerging into their teens, was stressed yesterday to members of the Belleville Canadian National Pensioners Association.

The speaker for the monthly meeting attended by approximately 70 pensioners, was Inspector Ralph Blatchford of the Belleville Police Department who terms himself a combination of communications and public relations officer with emphasis on family, school and teenage problems.

The Inspector painted a picture of almost unbelievable debauchery involving families where liquor, wine and drugs were the order of the day. In such families life as it should be is scorned and the usual amenities of life considered "wholly for the squares."

Alcohol, said the inspector, is the principal enemy of the teenager with drugs such as marijuana on an experimental basis, followed by the more killing drugs — LSD and others — a close second.

Emphasizing the great need for close relationships among schools, parents and children, Inspector Blatchford said there was a need also for psychological examination of the reasons teenagers fall behind in their grades.

An early examination could prevent a promising young man from possibly becoming lost forever in the delirium of alcohol and drugs.

The aid of the listeners was urged so that citizens of the future might be of a calibre of which all could be proud.

Early history of the Belleville Police Department during the days of Chief Newton, Sgt. Harmon and Detective Sgt. Naphan was recalled by pensioner Bill Michaud who referred particularly to the bicycle brigade of Sgt. Harmon.

Police officers then pounded their beat 12 hours per day, seven days a week, for less than $100 per month and vacation with pay was an unheard of feature of the distant future.

The only qualification for a police officer then was an unschooled muscularity sufficient to make an arrest.

By way of contrast Inspector Blatchford said that today's policeman must have a sound education by modern standards coupled with a fitness of mind and body. The psychological attitude of the applicant was also stressed. On acceptance the applicant undergoes an intensive training program before he commences service as a constable.

The next meeting of the Association on March 25 will feature a bowling tournament between Toronto and Belleville members.

Centennial

Meantime, city fire chief Leo Culhane said today the investigation into Sunday's arson attempt at Sir Winston Churchill was becoming "more involved."

"We're getting down closer to a lead in the case," said Chief Culhane.

Education director Runacres said the surveillance system on which he is now compiling details for board scrutiny, had worked elsewhere — including North York.

Utilizing telephone lines, it hooks each school into a central alarm point.

It instantly relays any norm breakdown — whether caused by burglary, heating or water problems.

He said the latest incidents of vandalism emphasize the need for a preventive program.

Vandalism, including lack of respect for public property, was a contemporary social problem not confined to any specific age group, and common to all North American society.

Society, he said, "must give some thought to an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure."

"I think the whole of society has to attack this."

The recent incidents in city schools "are not unique" to Belleville alone, he stressed.

"I wouldn't want people to get uptight about it," he added.

Standards Can Rival The World

"There are standards of excellence growing up in your country that can challenge the world's standards," explained Sidney Harrison, one of the Rotary Music Festival's adjudicators during an adjudication last night at BCIVS.

Mr. Harrison was adjudicating the performances of area senior secondary school bands.

"The object of festivals in Canada is to set a standard of excellence that will challenge the world's standard."

Mr. Harrison asked the students in the bands whether he should judge them in relation to the rest of Canada or in relation to Belleville.

"I hope you all said Canada," he said afterwards.

He added that in Toronto, where he had just been, some senior bands had been given 95 marks.

Last night five bands competed in this segment of the Festival — East Northumberland Secondary School Band, Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School Band, Quinte Secondary School Senior Concert Band, North Hastings High School Band and Centennial Secondary School Concert Band.

Centennial took top marks with 88. BCIVS was second with 87 marks. East Northumberland Secondary School came in third with 86 marks.

In the elementary school bands class, King George School Band obtained 80 marks.

Lois Martin and Clyde Dawson walked away with 85 marks in the accordion duet class for 14 years and under.

In the secondary school bands classification for grade 9 and 10 only, Centennial Secondary School came first with 84 marks. Moira Secondary was second with 82 marks.

In class B for secondary schools, Moira Secondary School Senior band took a score of 86 points.

Music: The Young in Unison

Young Bellevillians are sharing their enthusiasm for music this week —and the above scene in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday shows just how youngsters are in unison on the subject. School choir performs for Rotary Music Festival adjudicator Ranken Bushby (left foreground) as hundreds wait their turn.

Jimmy D'Amico and Oscar Nespoli were winners as a duo in the accordion duet class at the Rotary Music Festival yesterday. But earlier in the day the two lads competed against each other in the solo class and turned in such similar performances the adjudicator had to ask them to play a second time before declaring Jimmy the winner by one mark.

Object Not Merely to Win

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

"The object of a festival such as this is not to win, but rather to put yourself in competition with others and see how you measure up — based on the judgment of an ~~independent~~ individual," adjudicator Ranken Bushby told hundreds of children at the Wednesday morning session of the Rotary Music Festival.

During the early session held at St. Andrew's Church, more than 20 choirs from schools all over the Quinte area competed for top honors.

First to appear to begin the competitions was Kathy Smithrim in class 120, the operatic solo — who not only won the praise of Mr. Bushby, but a first place certificate and the highest mark received by a solo contestant during the festival so far — 90 points.

For the next two classes, 10 choirs "sang their hearts out" for the adjudicator, and then waited anxiously for his comments.

The Grade 4 choirs, sang with "obvious enjoyment," but had a familiar problem that always faces a group of young children singing — trouble with pitch.

The adjudicator commented on the fact that the kind of song the children were singing, "is a long way-up for some of them to reach".

He awarded first place to Prince of Wales School, with 84 marks, second to Sir Winston Churchill, 83, and third to a choir from St. Peter's School in Trenton with 82 points.

Speaking about the performance of the Grade 5 choirs, Mr. Bushby indicated that he felt "attention to detail makes a good combination and performance".

He added, speaking particularly to the teachers leading the groups, that this attention to detail means "better phrasing, tempo as well as unison."

In this class, St. Peter's School, Trenton, came first with a total of 85 marks, and second place was shared between Holy Rosary and Our Lady of Fatima, 84 marks. Taking third place was Prince of Wales School, with 83 points.

When judging Grade 6 choirs, the adjudicator admitted the difficulty of the two part May Day Carol, adding that the secret in performing a piece such as this was partly in the "spirit" in which it was sung.

"And," he said, "this means putting some real dynamism into the singing of this carol, some brightness and excitement."

To bring his point home to the children, he explained what a May day is like "back home in England" — with its "clear blue skies, beautiful flowers and the warm sun."

"This is what you have to try and capture in your singing." Mr. Bushby told his attentive audience of more than 200 youngsters.

He awarded Rednersville School first place with 85 marks, and second place to Prince of Wales, with two schools tying for third — Sir Winston Churchill School No. 2, and St. Joseph's School — both with 83 points.

Other results in class 101, for Grade 6 choirs saw Prince of Wales take first place with 82 points and Queen Alexandra second with 81.

In class 103, in which five Grade 7 choirs competed, first was Harry J. Clarke (8B), 83 marks; second, Harry J. Clarke (8D), 81 and third was Harry J. Clarke School (8E) with 78 points.

Children Liked; Always Do Best Says Adjudicator

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

At times, youngsters appear to have completely taken over Belleville's Rotary Music Festival.

Their participation is a source of satisfaction for adjudicator Ranken Bushby.

"It's very nice to see the children taking part, I must say," comments the British concert artist, whose adjudication post for the four-day festival in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Wednesday's afternoon session was a case in point.

Hundreds of youngsters filled the church as more school choirs and junior soloists waited to take the stage.

Mr. Bushby admits he enjoys working with children, who, he feels, have a sincere, direct approach to music.

"They haven't got the blase," he says. "Up to this age they're still very keen on music. Children always do their best."

Besides distributing marks and advice to the groups, Mr. Bushby gives them a bonus at the end of each choral class.

He combines the competing groups into a single unit and personally conducts them in a mass rendition of their festival piece.

"Well done. Give yourselves a clap," he tells the youngsters, leading the applause himself.

Results of Thursday afternoon's session at St. Andrew's were:

Grade 7 choirs — Harry J. Clarke 7b (85); Harry J. Clarke 7d (84); Queen Alexandra 7b (83); Queen Alexandra 7c (82); Queen Elizabeth (82); Harry J. Clarke 7a (82); Sir Winston Churchill (81); St. Michael's Academy 1-2 (81); Harry J. Clarke 7c (79).

Grade 8 choirs — Harry J. Clarke 8c (83); Harry J. Clarke 8a (82); Queen Alexandra (79).

Piano solo, eight years and under — Martha Robertson, 84; Gregory Kite, 83; Robert Horne, 82; John Howey, Brenda Jukowsky, Joseph Collins, 81; Walter Latham, Lynne Warkentin, Pamela Spurrell (80); Heather Sherman, Peter Anglin (78).

Girls' solo, 10 years and under: Janet Loynes (89); Karen Jones (83); Esther Draper (82).

Local Folksinger Given High Praise

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Too often young people are remembered for their bad qualities more so than their good ones, Ranken Bushby said last night while adjudicating a folksinging class.

"The guitar is all too often equated with drugs and juvenile delinquency," he said, "a fact due mostly to the mass media which publishes the bad news from the two per cent of young people and ignores the 98 per cent of good things."

He explained that the guitar was a revival instrument with new uses put to it by such groups as the Beatles and the Rolling Stones.

Mr. Bushby commented that he was pleased to see young folksingers accompanying themselves on the guitar.

He described the work of one Belleville folksinger, Ann Finkle, as a remarkable achievement considering she had written the song she performed herself, words and music.

In that class Miss Finkle and Sheila Jourard tied for first honors, receiving 87 marks.

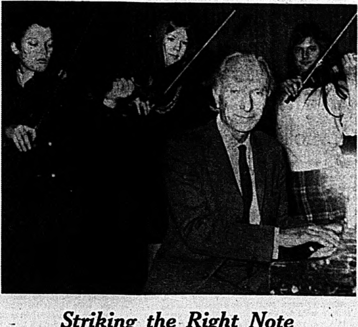
In the oboe solo for musicians 17 years of age and under, Evelyn Caswell received 79 marks.

In the flute solo, 17 years and under, Nancy Riedel placed first with 84 marks. Lesley Edworthy and Nancy Tilley placed second and third with 82 and 81 marks respectively.

Moira Secondary School, in several folk classifications received first place awards.

Ingrid Kristalyn received 84 marks for her recorder solo for 15 years and under.

For recorder ensembles, 15 years of age and under, Wellington Recorder Ensemble No. 2 took first with 83 marks, Wellington Recorder Ensemble No. 3 and No. 1 took second and third with 80 and 78 marks respectively.



Striking the Right Note

Adjudicator Sidney Harrison gave some impromptu coaching to contestants in the Rotary Music Festival yesterday to the delight of the audience at BCI auditorium. Mary Pope, Michelle Stratton and Patrick Smith, contestants in the violin solo class, got some tips with Mr. Harrison at the keyboard.

Prime Example

Adjudicator Tells Audience Performer Must Entertain

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Pianos and accordion held centre stage at BCI auditorium Wednesday as Sidney Harrison adjudicated classes for those instruments in the Rotary Music Festival.

But the performances were not confined to the contestants' efforts, Mr. Harrison, who maintained throughout all his adjudication that the prime purpose of a performer is to entertain, did just that between each class by going to the keyboard and giving impromptu performances of his own.

His adjudication was a relaxed combination of judgment of performances, learning experiences for the competitors and entertainment in the form of some top-notch piano playing for the few listeners who came to hear the contestants.

At one point during the morning Mr. Harrison recalled the contestants in two piano trios to the stage for a short lesson on fingering and techniques. Grasping their arms and wrists to move them to his satisfaction over the keyboard, occasionally chiming in himself to play a brief part, he left the stiff and apprehensive contestants relaxed and chuckling over the fun of making music.

The 11 contestants in the Bach piano solo class "usually pretty disastrous" were quite creditable" said Mr. Harrison. He found twins Anne Marie Aquino and Thomas Aquino hard to choose between, but awarded top marks of 88 to Thomas because of the "feeling of enjoyment and zest" in his playing. Anne Marie came second with 87 and Marilee Jones third with 86.

"Playing a piece correctly is not giving a performance," Mr. Harrison told contestants in the piano trio class for those 12 years and under. "You are not inviting the audience to enjoy itself. When you do, a little bit of magic comes into the performance."

He awarded Carol Hutchinson, Julie Bishop and Lisa Bailey 83 for their performance and gave 78 marks to Stephen Edey, Bruce Yateman and James Crooks.

"The test piece leaves me wondering," the adjudicator said about the violin solo for 14 years and under. "It does not give me a chance to learn if you have a good tone." He awarded 84 to Michele Stratton, 82 to Mary Pope and 80 to Patrick Smith.

Winners of the piano duet, 12 years and under were Mark Potts and Debbie Potts, 85; Barbara Wormald and Susan Smith, 83; and Lisa Bailey and Shelley Hartt, 80.

In the piano duet, 14 years and under, Debbie Potts and Cynthia Horne were first with 87 marks; Duane Lessard and Don Campbell second with 86 and Penny Barber and Laura Jenkins third with 83.

Winners of the piano duet, 16 years and under were Evelyn Caswell and Ann Ketcheson with 87 marks, Lori Edey and Bruce Kite with 85 marks and Linda Johnston and Jil Miller with 84.

The afternoon's accordion performances were distinguished by the playing of Josie Peck in the class for soloists 14 years and under.

Mr. Harrison awarded her top marks of the day, 90, for her playing of a rondo, describing it as "a splendid performance, every detail right."

Thomas Aquino was second with 84 and Anne Marie Aquino third with 82.

Oscar Nespoli and Jimmy D'Amico were recalled to the stage to repeat their solos in the 11 years and under class because the adjudicator found it difficult to select the better of the two renditions. Jimmy was awarded 88 because he "put in cross accents that set the style and give the extra something that makes an exciting performance". Oscar was a close runner-up with 87.

The two contestants in the accordion solo for those 10 years and under "both gave good performances and played as though they enjoyed it and expected others to enjoy it too," said Mr. Harrison. He awarded Lee Anne Prentice 86 marks and Gordon Taylor 84.

Mark Metus, only competitor in the accordion solo for those 16 years and under "did a good job of the test piece" for a mark of 86.

Ruth Hills, sole competitor in two solo classes for 18 years and under, gained marks of 87 and 88 for her playing.

Jimmy D'Amico and Oscar Nespoli combined forces to win the accordion duet for 12 years and under with 84 marks. Runners-up were Anne Marie Aquino and Thomas Aquino with 83.

Lee Anne Prentice and Gordon Taylor, only contestants in the accordion duet for those 10 years and under, earned 84 marks.

Holdup Attempt

If, as believed, Monday's attempted robbery of the east end branch of the Bank of Montreal was the first involving a city bank this century, then Belleville has indeed been fortunate.

In the surrounding area however it has been otherwise, with first Consecon and more recently Trenton being the target of robbers.

Free as the city has been in the past from such unwelcome attentions, we should take these incidents seriously. The community is growing and it may well be that other suburban banks will be opened as a result. An increase in crime, with further occurrences of this nature, are possibilities that must be faced.

Belleville, with most of its banking facilities concentrated downtown, and with its one-way traffic system, is not a good target, from a strategic standpoint, for the bank robber. But there are two suburban banks — the one mentioned above and a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at the Plaza.

These have a potential vulnerability, since both offer opportunities for a quick getaway. Consequently increased police surveillance of both areas is something Chief Crosbie may well have in mind. At the same time the downtown area should not be neglected, lest someone is foolish enough to try anything in that area.

Meanwhile, the courage of acting manager Clinton Halladay of the Bank of Montreal has been noted by all. Mr. Halladay's bravery doubtless will be recognized in tangible form in due course; but meantime, the community at large may count itself fortunate in having a young man of this calibre, in a position of responsibility, and able to tackle such unusual circumstances as presented themselves Monday.

Deserters and Drugs

While it would be wrong to suppose it is true of every draft dodger, it has been said there is a disposition toward the hippie life and drug addiction among young men in this category.

A recent report from Montreal confirms this. Two teenage U.S. army deserters were picked up by police after a suburban Beaconsfield woman who had befriended them was taken to hospital in critical condition. Police said Maria Santos, 35, was clubbed unconscious with table legs and tied up with electrical wire in her room.

The deserters, aged 17 and 18, were picked up on the Trans-Canada highway hours later, hitchhiking west. They told police they had been "stoned out of their minds" on hashish the night before, when Mrs. Santos was attacked.

The young suspects were said to have arrived in Canada only this month and stayed in a hostel for a week before being sent to Mrs. Santos' home by the Montreal-based American Deserters Committee after she offered accommodation to deserters.

You cannot blame an entire nation — that is, the United States — for the sins of a few of its citizens. Nevertheless, there are very disturbing trends among American youth, at a level of violence and alienation approached, but fortunately, not fully reached as yet in Canada.

However, if we are going to permit such riff-raff to live in Canada then we must expect their anti-social ways to rub off here in our own midst. These are people we can do without and the federal immigration people would do well to take this incident seriously.

There are some related thoughts on this theme, in a letter to The Hamilton Spectator reprinted elsewhere on this page. They are worth noting by anyone who does not believe that in Canada we have a more superior way of life.

Hot Air

Listening to Quebec separatist Rene Levesque's labored and obtuse rebuttal of Prime Minister Trudeau's recent call to the Montreal Jewish community to "stick with it" (in a political climate hostile to minorities), we were reminded of the student who deflated Levesque's demagoguery during a Toronto address. It was before a university audience and the student rounded on the Quebecer with: "You're just another bloody politician, Levesque . . . if it were not for Quebec you'd still be repairing television sets." We don't know if that was Mr. Levesque's trade, but as a politician he is mostly hot air.

Conservative Discontent

Is Stanfield Trying to Be an All-party Man?

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So now the sound, solid, non-partisan, no-nonsense Canadian Press, the great co-operative national news agency, has reported "rumblings of discontent" in the Conservative Caucus with the quality of Robert Stanfield's leadership.

That report by the scrupulously fair and objective Canadian Press provides what must be regarded as a firm basis in fact for all the gossip heard and rumors flying within still badly-divided Conservative ranks.

It has been leaking out, complaint by complaint, from one Tory MP after another, faulting Robert Stanfield for the kind of conservatism he reflects.

Some Conservatives have gone between quotes with their criticism of him, among them Maritime MP Robert Coates, Prairie MP Richard Southam, Ontario MP Wallace Nesbitt.

Other Conservatives have become so disenchanted with the "Quiet Man," they do not bother any more attending the weekly parliamentary Caucus.

Outstanding among these for the public display of his dismay with the party leadership is another Prairie MP Jack McIntosh.

There is no better way — this side of outright public denunciation — for an MP to dissociate from his party's leadership than to remain out of Caucus.

In doing this, he proclaims his independence and establishes his credentials that he is his own man, speaking for himself and his constituency without regard for the official party "line."

It has been this very "line" of Robert Stanfield's that finally has made the "rumblings" of rank and file discontent so publicly audible as to echo along the Canadian Press national news wire.

The "discontented" have been hearing from the voters back home who sent them to Parliament to speak as Conservatives.

The playback they have been getting from their constituencies, by mail here in Ottawa, and in person when they appear in the home riding is that Robert Stanfield in many of his public postures seems to have become so Liberal as to make Liberal Prime Minister Trudeau appear a Conservative by across-the-Commons floor comparison.

They grumble, that on some issues, their supporters contend that Robert Stanfield could step into the socialist shoes of New Democratic Leader Douglas and find them a comfortable fit.

What got them all so upset?

A whole series of things.

Most recently there was his alarming spiritual alliance with Liberal Health Minister Munro that, well, shucks, what is to get so uptight about marijuana when goodness knows, it might not be a dangerous narcotic at all.

Solicitor General George McIlraith does not buy that, nor does Justice Minister Turner, the RCMP and almost all — except perhaps two or three — Conservative parliamentarians.

If it were just a slip of the Stanfield tongue, he has yet to correct it.

Then there was the wistful wish that he, too, like the trendy Prime Minister, might get to while away an hour with Beatle John Lennon and the bride Yoko.

He could not have been hearing about the Trudeau mail, loaded with letters lamenting that the Prime Minister, who protests he is far too busy to see so very many of the taxpayers on urgent public business, on notice so short as to be almost instant, can find 55 precious minutes for socializing with Yoko and John.

It was not so much who he saw that got so many people uptight, it was the time that was idled away over morning coffe discussing, among other things, pot.

One Beatle fan in High Places should be enough without the Conservative leader wanting to make it two.

Then there was Stanfield's easy rationalization of the Prime Minister's casual use of government-owned Jet-Stars, not just for official public business, but as handy holiday transports to Faraway Places and for purely political junkets.

Robert Stanfield is for a capital gains tax, too, and Robert Stanfield is supposed to be a Conservative.

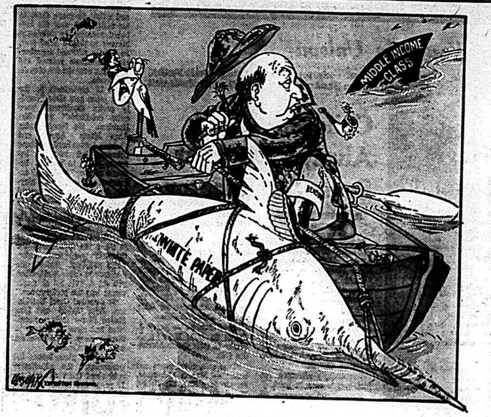
He has spoken favorably also of the proposed guaranteed annual wage that the Liberal Prime Minister says the taxpayer can not afford to finance.

All this might be understandable, in almost any political leader, except that as head of the Conservative party, Robert Stanfield is supposed to be offering a credible alternative to Pierre Elliott Trudeau and not following in the shadow and after the fashion of the swinging Prime Minister.

It is that the two leaders so often seem to sound, and sometimes even think alike, that has so many of the Conservatives, new backbenchers and old veterans, "rumbling," as the Canadian Press hears it, their concern.

Can he change it all now by giving tough convincing leadership in the fight against Ben "The Bandit" Benson's pink-tinted White Paper on Taxation. If you are above the so-caled "Poverty Line" pray that he can.

But even here, confronted with his greatest opportunity, he takes it in hand so late, so slowly, and so weakly as to appear reluctant to make the effort. So far, qualified as it is, it is a wholly unconvincing performance, but in character.



"Oh-Oh!"

Montreal Subway Fares

Montreal Gazette

Is the city trying to give its beautiful subway snob appeal? It was only last March that MTC fares went up and already there is talk of another increase. This is the kind of talk that frightens people out of their wits. If fares rise much higher, the subway will become luxury transportation.

Mass transportation in a great city is a vital public service. If it is beyond the means of the city or the metropolitan community to maintain this service at rates that all citizens can afford to pay, then the province must step in with an operating subsidy.

Sooner or later, preferably sooner, the problem will have to be tackled in the context of the whole question of urban transportation. Will it make sense to continue to permit the virtually unrestricted use of the automobile and the proliferation of parking lots when an adequate subway network with feeder bus lines can serve the public need so much more efficiently?

In the meantime, MTC chairman Lucien L'Allier insists that talk of another fare increase is unfounded speculation. The public hopes he has a new crystal-ball. On June 28, 1968, he said the ceiling appeared to have been reached. "The basic 25-cent rate will remain for some time to come . . ."

Matrimonial Tax?

Winnipeg Free Press

What with recent tax changes and further changes proposed in the white paper, one would have thought that there remain no ways in which the downtrodden taxpayer can be milked. But there are still some possibilities — in force elsewhere in the world. We pass along a couple — both connected with matrimony — for the attention of Mr. Benson and Mr. Chernlack.

In New Mexico, under a new ruling, a minister who charges a fee to marry a couple is deemed to be performing a professional service. He must therefore pay the four per cent sales tax in effect in the state. The clergyman must pay this tax, whether he passes it on to the happy couple or not.

Mr. Benson would introduce a tax that would practically impoverish anyone wishing to sell up and leave Canada for warmer climes. In Zanzibar anyone who marries a local girl and takes her abroad to live can do so only if he pays a tax of $7,200. Just as Mr. Benson's proposed tax is to keep Canadians at home, the Zanzibarian tax is to discourage overseas males from depleting the supply of marriageable girls.

The Intelligencer welcomes letters to the editor. Letters should be written or typed on one side of the paper only and bear the address and signature of the sender. For publication purposes a pseudonym or pen-name may be used if so indicated.

Tax Reform

Does Stanfield Have an Alternative?

Montreal Star

It is a popular theory that opposition parties should not spend all their time criticizing the government but should put forward credible alternatives. The theory is a lot easier to state than to implement because most opposition parties simply do not have the resources or the expertise to produce fully developed policies of their own.

Under these circumstances, then, it was bold of Robert Stanfield to call a special conference to produce a Conservative alternative to Finance Minister Benson's white paper on taxation. That makes it doubly regrettable that the product of the committee's labors was the empty document which Mr. Stanfield presented to the country.
